To All Personnel - Pay Checks

Due to the new Consolidated Payroll System mandated by Richmond the salaried payroll and hourly payroll has been merged and checks will be dated the 16th and 1st of each month for both groups. Small differences in checks are due to utilization of a different Income Tax (Federal & State) withholding schedule used in the new payroll system. The Social Security rate for 1980 is 6.13 as it was for 1979. Students will continue to receive their paychecks on the 15th of each month.

Faculty/Staff Parking

It has come to the attention of the Traffic Control Appeals Committee that a number of faculty and staff members are parking in the student parking lots, particularly the new parking lot behind Wingfield Hall. Faculty and staff parking in the student parking lots reduces the number of student parking spaces and leaves a number of parking spaces unused in the designated faculty/staff parking lot.

Because of this problem, we ask your cooperation. PLEASE PARK IN THE DESIGNATED FACULTY/STAFF PARKING LOT WHEN SPACE IS AVAILABLE.

Change in the Captain John Smith Library Hours

Starting January 26, 1980, the Captain John Smith Library will be open on Saturdays from Noon to 3:00 P.M. This is a temporary reduction of three hours per week and is due to the recent cut of the library's budget by the College. The Saturday reduction in hours was determined by a three month library use survey which showed that Saturday morning was the time during the week when the library is used the least. Hopefully, Saturday library hours will return to normal with the beginning of fiscal year 1980/81.

Margaret Stewart, Assistant Director for Public Services

On the Role of the College in America's Future

The question is not whether the College has a future. The American population will continue to grow. The most challenging agenda to confront any people in history confronts us today. The need for sophisticated educational effort is unprecedented. The issue is whether our genius can invent educational institutions and systems equal to the challenge.

We are moving into a new decade in which the tensions between the poor and the less poor and between the younger and older adults in our country are likely to become more acute. We have shaped an economy characterized by a significant shift from the production of manufactured goods to the demand for and the provision of greater professional, human, and technical services. More and more of the economic and political decisions affecting the daily lives of our people are necessarily transitional in character. Among the so-called hard-core unemployed young, and the underutilized talents represented by a growing senior citizenry, lies a formidable challenge to discover new ways to release productivity the energy of a large part of our population.

Never before has the relationship between formal education and the problem-solving arenas in the world of work been more vital. Never before has the opportunity to combine the best of our human talents with the most sophisticated technology for education now available been so great.

History may set the terms for the future, but the lessons it teaches are no substitute for confronting the future on its own terms. This is a time for adventure and invention. Gloom-and-doom are not only un-American, they are clumsy and inappropriate tools with which to achieve the future.

There is an inescapable connection between the education of our people and their capacity to participate in the economic promise of America. And as Jefferson argued, only a well-educated people are able to conduct the political experiment of a democracy.

Note: The foregoing paragraphs are taken from "Forward to the Basics" by William M. Bierenbaum, President of Antioch University, published on p. 56 of the December 3, 1979, issue of The Chronical of Higher Education.
