Tuition increases, more faculty in future

Financial issues topped agenda at Town Meeting

By Del Putnam
Staff Writer

Christopher Newport College's financial future was a hot topic of discussion at the Town Meeting on Apr. 6. Tuition increases, the renovation of the heating and cooling system and the acquisition of Ferguson High School were major issues.

The State Council for Higher Education in Virginia cut $500,000 from CNC's budget and authorized the college to increase tuition and fees up to forty percent to make up for the missing funds.

President Anthony R. Santoro, however, says that the tuition increase will probably only need to be about twenty-one percent. Other sources indicate that the figure may be closer to twenty-eight percent. CNC's Vice-President of Finance, Dr. William L.

Brauer, could not confirm this figure.

On a similar note, Old Dominion University announced on Apr. 9 that it was raising tuition by almost twenty-four percent and it would require students to pay extra for each credit hour after the first twelve.

An exact figure for CNC will be determined by CNC's Board of Visitors on Apr. 22. The tuition increase will go into effect on July 1, the beginning of the state's fiscal year.

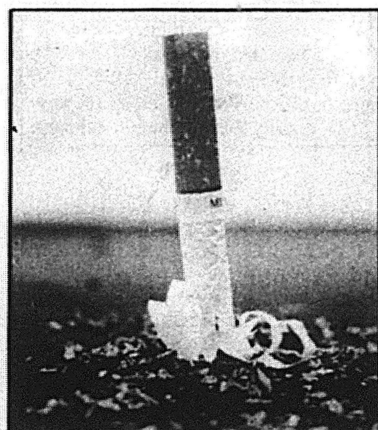

The state also authorized CNC to hire thirty new full-time faculty and twelve new non-instructional staff members. To help pay for these new positions, the state gave CNC $250,000.

Currently, thirty-seven percent of CNC's instructors are adjunct faculty. The hiring of these thirty new instructors will take CNC's adjunct faculty down to twenty percent which is closer to other university's figures. CNC also plans to increase instructor's pay-scales.

New smoking policy in the works

By Joyce Kuster
Contributing Writer

Christopher Newport College's current smoking policy is under consideration by the Building and Grounds Committee which is made up of ?. A revision of the current policy is expected to be released, at the latest, this fall.

"It was brought up that there are problems with the existing policy," says Dr. Charles E. Behymer, Vice-President for Student Services and a member of the Building and Grounds Committee. He added, "A revision of the existing policy has been formulated and has just gone to the President [Anthony R. Santoro,] for approval."

CNC's current policy allows smoking in areas designated by a green sign which states "Smoking Permitted-Designated Areas Only." Halls, bathrooms and classrooms are areas which do not permit smoking.

The new policy will follow the same guidelines, but will be "far more restrictive," said Dr. Behymer. He noted that the new signs have been ordered to include "no smoking" and "smoking permitted" distinctions.

The new policy has been completed for the entire campus except for the Campus Center. The Terrace and Christopher's smoking policies are handled by Marriott which has designated smoking and non-smoking areas for each.

- Smoke from a burning cigarette has been found to be more dangerous than that which a smoker inhales.

However, because the Campus Center is made up of a series of open rooms and hallways, the Student Government Association and the administration will work together to designate smoking areas. Their hope is to come up with a compromise that will allow students an opportunity to relax and smoke without interfering with non-smokers walking through the area.

SGA Public Relations Chairman, Chris Mancill explained, "We are really looking into it. It is a major concern to us right now and we hope to have this matter resolved by the beginning of next semester."

CNC's library may suffer from cuts

The Captain John Smith Library may be put on hold again with the anticipated $2.5 million from Virginia's General Obligation Bond being cut by Governor Wilder.

FROM THE EDITOR

Campus apathy is disappointing

It was disappointing to see the poor turnout at this year's Spring Fest which was held on the lawn on Friday from noon until 4 pm. Many members of the CNC community do not realize the amount of time, energy and effort that go into putting an event such as this one together.

The combined efforts of the Campus Activities Board, Student Government Association and many clubs and organizations were supposed to make this day a success. Unfortunately, the CNC community chose to not support these students' efforts.

Believe it or not, some students were spotted sitting on benches outside the library during Spring Fest. If these students had time to kill, why weren't they sampling the food or enjoying the activities going on just a few yards away.

And, no, you can't tell me that these students didn't know that anything was going on, because the singer could be heard all the way out on Shoe Lane most of the afternoon; these students apparently didn't want to be a part of campus events.

It is truly a shame that the statement, "apathy runs rampant on this campus," is so incredibly true. CNC is in the process of becoming a University (indeed, it will be one on July 1st). Now is the time for everyone to pull together and start working together instead of working against each other. What a better way to start than to share some sunshine, warm weather, food and drink at a campus activity?

Unfortunately, it is too late for this year's Spring Fest, but think about this the next time you hear about an going on your merry way, just stop by and enjoy the fun. You won't be sorry.

Student ethics: An Oxymoron

By Steve Siceloff
Opinions Editor

As I said last week, I have compiled a code of ethics that is actually of some use, unlike the Statement of Values supplied by a committee of CNC official-type people.

This week's statement deals with the way students should conduct themselves on campus.

But, before I get on with the actual part, I have been asked to enlighten the school population with the story that I referred to last week concerning Mr. Colonna, an economics teacher at CNC.

Mr. Colonna owned a business of his own at one time, and was in need of an accountant to help him out since he did not have the time to do it himself. First, Colonna went to Wharton College (it might be a university), which is one of the premier business schools in the country, to pick someone. The boy he picked was a straight "A" student, and Colonna expected great things. As it turns out, the accountant nearly bankrupted the business.

Colonna next went to V.C.U. in search of someone to help him with the accounting chores. He hired an economics student with a "C" average, who, in turn, made the company prosper.

That's enough of a side-track. My definition of unethical behavior is any questionable action that can't be explained in five words. Using that premise, here is a Statement of Values for students.

1. When writing comments on teacher evaluations, take the responsibility seriously.

As it is, students do not have to sign teacher evaluations, but, if students keep writing obscenities on evaluation sheets, that could change, and then no one will benefit. So, (I'm trying not to sound preachy) only write criticism that is constructive.

2. Always tell your professor when you feel you have been wronged.

Most professors are easy to talk to, but, in case you get a difficult one who won't discuss changing your grade, then spread nasty rumors about his or her closet love affairs.

3. Take part in school affairs (Not the kind mentioned in number 2).

This message gets dull after awhile, but, it is your school, (I mean university) and complaining to your best friend about tuition costs isn't going to help. The moral: complain to the people that pull the strings. People such as Governors, Delegates, College Presidents and Vice-Presidents.

4. Never offer your opinion about a professor unless asked to do so.

This guideline isn't too strict, because I always offer my opinions about different professors. I'll try to improve, really.

5. Treat all students equally regardless of sex, race, religion or fraternity/sorority affiliation.

CNC's problems with this are still too big for a college (dammit, I meant university) of this size. It is not as if anyone is on campus long enough to get too know anyone, anyway.

6. Place actual learning above grades.

Good grades are nice, but I have met too many "A" students that are dumb as a soap-dish in real-life. So, make sure you are learning things that you can use instead of stuff that you will study and then forget before the next sunrise.

7. Make it to class on time.

It's a simple case of good manners. But, should you have to come in late, please don't slam the door, especially in those eight o'clock classes; some of us are trying to sleep.

8. Don't write on the desks.

A carry-over from high school. If you do decide to be artistic, at least be original and graphic. Fraternity and sorority letters are really boring when they show up on every desk in the class.

9. Don't wear earphones in class.

This has happened a couple of times, believe it or not, and it's just rude.

10. Don't blame your professors if you don't do well in their classes.

Maybe they couldn't get a job anywhere else. (I was really fishing for an ending.)

Next Week: Administration Ethics (heh, heh, heh)

Pledging Pi Lambda Phi

There are men who I call "friend", "enemy", "acquaintance", or "stranger." There was only one I called "brother." An unconditional love and respect will hold us in the bonds of brotherhood for eternity. All others come and go, but my brother is a part of me forever. I am pledging Pi Lambda Phi fraternity. I knew only one member as an acquaintance, but now I feel a companionship with all. I may not fully realize my feelings for Pi Lambda Phi because I have not been initiated. I do know, however, that there are some men this semester with whom I have laughed and cried, played and worked, cheered and cursed, struggled and soared. There are others who have helped me on my way. They tore me down, built me up and watched me grow. For any one of them, I would die. I may not truly know what it means to be a Pi Lamb, but I do know that if I were to lose this chance, a part of me would die. I have built bonds with these men. These men are part of me forever and I am a part of them. These men I call "brother."

Kris Van Deusen

Question of the Week

What do you think about having to sign professor evaluations?

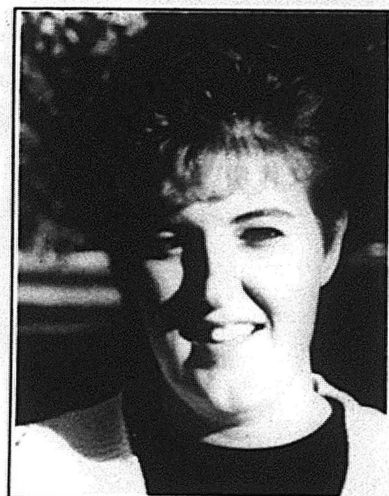

"It's a good idea to cut down on unnecessary criticism that doesn't reflect the teacher's abilities. [However,] I think it won't allow students to be honest and truthful because they may be afraid of consequences resulting from their honesty."

Karen Young

"I don't agree with it. I think you can weed out the practical jokesters without having to sign. It's pretty obvious to figure out which criticisms are constructive because if they are, the student will justify the criticism."

Chris Mills

"I totally disagree with this possible requirement. Students will more than likely not give their honest opinion of the teacher's abilities because of the change. To feel more comfortable, students should not have to sign [them]."

AMERICAN
SOCIETY

Dear CNC Community,

As many of you are aware, two former CNC students, Sandra Hailey and Keith Call, have been missing since April of 1988. Four years is a long time for family and friends to wonder what happened. It's a long time to cling to hope and to go on with life when so many questions remain. Because Sandra and Keith were part of this campus and would be members of the current senior class, some students have requested that we remember them with a prayer service on campus.

We will have such a service on Tuesday, April 21 at 12:30 pm in room 150 of the Campus Center. It will last fifteen minutes.

I am writing to ask that everyone on campus take the time to lend your support to these students' families by attending the service. Your presence will be a sign of solidarity with the families and friends of Sandra and Keith and a real source of comfort to them. I can assure you from my contacts with Mrs. Joanne Hailey that the families deeply appreciate such acts of compassion.

I know it's a busy time of the year, but I earnestly hope that you will be able to give us fifteen minutes of your time and your presence on the 21st. Thanks much!

Sincerely,

Carolyn Lawrence
Campus Minister

White Men Can't Jump a stress-reliever

By Lucille Torres
Contributing Writer

Between meeting upcoming deadlines for projects and reports, and preparing for last minute exams and finals, everybody is probably suffering from STRESS. My recommendation is to go see White Men Can't Jump. It is a wonderful stress-reliever.

White Men Can't Jump is a hilarious comedy starring Woody Harrelson, Wesley Snipes, Rosie Perez and Kadeem Hardison.

Harrelson plays Billy Hoyle, the stereotypical, sorry basketball-playing, white man, a con on the court. Snipes is Sidney Deans, the African American counterpart of Billy Hoyle. Both men work the courts of L.A. to support the women in their lives.

Gloria (Rosie Perez) is Billy's Puerto Rican girlfriend who is convinced she will be a contestant on Jeopardy any day now. Sidney is married and has a preschool-aged son. Sidney is attempting to raise enough money to move his family out of their crime-infested apartment complex into his wife's dream house.

A dispute arises between Billy and Gloria and Sidney and his wife when Sidney hustles Billy out of $1,700 (all of Billy and Gloria's savings). The women agree to a compromise: Billy and Sidney will pair together for the upcoming "Brotherhood Tournament."

If they win, the $5,000 first prize will be split evenly among the men. At first, Billy objects by stating, "I don't hussle with people who are dishonest." Like Sidney, Billy eventually succumbs to the wishes of the women.

I will not reveal the rest of the plot, but I can assure each of you that the storyline is as fast-paced as the games.

Overall, I rate White Men Can't Jump as a must-see movie.

Affairs of the Heart less than powerful

By Sam Sanders
Staff Writer

A dud of a performer is the best way to describe Jody Watley. She lives up to this description on her new album Affairs of the Heart.

With two successful albums already behind her, one would think that the third one would be a charm. Unfortunately, Affairs of the Heart just doesn't add up to an album worth buying.

"I Want You," the sassy, jazzy, slow tempo song didn't quite reach the top ten, but it was successful. Surprisingly, it is the best on the Lp, which means there probably won't be any hits to follow.

"I'm the One You Need," Watley's second release, is the absolute vocal strain ever heard on any record. Watley talks all the way through the song, deafening any sound of technical merit. The uptempo single is far less impressive than any of her previous dance hits.

Watley's prior efforts, Jody Watley and Real Love, spawned hits like: "Some King of Love," "Still a Thrill," "Don't cha Want Me," "Real Love," "L.O.V.E.R." and "Friends." It's sad that she won't be capable of adding to her impressive list of hit songs.

Watley, like Paula Abdul, is less than critically overwhelming. Both suffer from redundancy, vagueness and weak vocals. Watley drags out her words which makes her sound elastic and rubberized.

Watley doesn't repeat with Affairs of the Heart, instead she fails dramatically.

The Cutting Edge fulfills love story image

By Diane Seymore
Staff Writer

If you have ever been in love, but did not have the guts to admit it—this movie will give you goose bumps.

MGM's new release, The Cutting Edge, starring D.B. Sweeney and Moria Kelly, easily fulfills the classic love story image, but with a modern twist.

Of course, two people fall in love, but in this case they do not want to be in love with each other. Both pursue other relationships in order to avoid intimate contact.

Sweeney confidently plays Doug

Dorsey, a cocky ice hockey player who is forced to take off his skates because of an eye injury. Dorsey unrealistically hopes for a professional recruitment, but what he gets is more than he bargained for.

Kate Moseley, gracefully portrayed by Moria Kelly, who missed a medal in the last Olympics is searching for a competent figure skating partner.

Despite much resistance, the two agree to skate together and, before long, build a bond both on and off the ice.

The delightful romance is filled with competition and foreplay.

The story builds and builds and the audience waits for someone to make the first move. The skaters have many opportunities for romance—missed kisses and accidental touches push them until the attraction overcomes physical desires and they realize how much they love and need each other.

Seeing these skaters prepare for the Olympics behind the scenes reinstalls the pride that spectators feel during every Olympic event.

The movie opens in Calgary at the 1988 Olympics.

Through further competitions and, finally, the winter test in Albertville, France this timely movie grabs the hearts of all Olympic fans.

National Gallery of Art offers internship

The National Gallery of Art will offer three paid internships for 1992-1993 to qualified African American, Asian American, Hispanic American, Native American and other minority U.S. citizens. Interns will work on special projects in the Gallery from September 14, 1992 through June 11, 1993. The stipend is $14,000.

Now in its third year, the program is designed to provide an introduction to the operation of museums and professional experience for minority students considering careers in museums.

To be eligible, applicants must have completed at least an undergraduate degree by September 1992. The deadline for applications is April 17, 1992.

"Educational efforts for minorities continue to be a high priority for the National Gallery," said J. Carter Brown, director of the National Gallery. "The internship program has proved of great mutual benefit both to the Gallery and the talented individuals who have participated."

Rachael Arauz, a current Gallery intern, called the program "a wonderful opportunity that has definitely solidified my interest in a museum career and in twentieth-century subjects." She divides her time at the Gallery between helping to prepare a catalogue in the department of modern prints and drawings and research in the department of photographs.

Another intern, Marie Watt, has been working in the design and installation department cataloging the Gallery's frame collection. She is also applying her perspective as a Native American to the education department's programs for the upcoming Gallery exhibition Art of the American Frontier: The Collecting of Chandler and Pohrt.

Heather Peeler, the third participant, is developing a database of minority organizations and community contacts in the office of equal employment opportunity and has assisted in the education department with audience development strategies. During the second half of her term, she will work on a research project with the curator of sculpture and decorative arts.

Previous interns are currently employed at the national Endowment for the Arts in the dance program and at the Baltimore Museum of Art as publicity assistant. Another is pursuing a Master of Fine Arts degree at the Art Institute of Chicago.

For more information about the program and an application, contact Amy McCampbell, Academic Programs at the National Gallery of Art (Phone: (202) 842-6182).

Regarding Henry is a rental treasure

By Sam Sanders
Staff Writer

Harrison Ford stars as Henry Turner, a ruthless, unfeeling, wealthy attorney in the Mike Nichols film, Regarding Henry. Ford's character, Henry, is in need of a serious attitude revamping.

He shows no true compassion to the office personnel who help him to be the successful attorney he is at the beginning of the film.

His family life is just as unstable. His brief, unemotional conversation with his daughter and his wife, played by Annette Bening, show how unstable and twisted his life really is.

This film was labeled an under-achiever during the dismal summer movie season.

Despite the $36.7 million dollar gross, it should've grossed more especially since it starred two very likable actors in Ford and Bening.

Overall, Regarding Henry placed 13th on the Top 25 list of summer box office draws.

It is remarkable in a sense, that a film can gross $36.7 million and be considered less than a smash hit.

In the film, Turner is shot during a convenience store robbery, leaving Turner in the same shape of a newborn child. Turner was forced to learn to talk, walk, think and start life all over.

Turner struggled to regain his position in society, only to realize that he didn't like who he was, therefore allowing him to build a new perspective on life.

Ford's performance was as close to brilliant as any performance could ever be.

The fact that the film wasn't a significant hit is probably the reason why Ford didn't get nominated as Best Actor.

At this point in its early video release sales, Regarding Henry is holding steady at number two behind Thelma and Louise, a multi-nominated Academy Award film.

This says a lot for Regarding Henry because it is a good film and Ford and Bening are capable of attracting viewers on the smaller screen.

Regarding Henry, a hit worth renting!

Library addition may be put on hold—again

By Steve Siceloff
Staff Writer

Christopher Newport College may have to put its hopes of an addition to the Captain John Smith Library on hold once again.

This year's plan called for the $2.5 million addition to be paid for through Virginia's General Obligation Bond issue. Early last week, however, Governor L. Douglas Wilder announced that he was striking several education projects from the bonds issue in order to reduce the debt that the state would take on, which would have been slightly over $600 million. The library addition was one of the improvements he cut.

Sources say that the Governor plans to include those projects in next year's state budget.

The Virginia General Assembly will decide April 15 whether to accept Wilder's recommendation. Delegate Alan Diamonstein said that to this point, he did not know how he would vote on the matter. "We have to consider everything...whether the support is there for the project, and to make sure we get our fair share," he said.

Diamonstein also noted that the acquisition of Ferguson High School from the City of Newport News and the $3.63 million to replace the heating and air conditioning systems at CNC were still included in the bonds program.

William Brauer, vice president of Finance at CNC, said the situation "does not look good. I don't think that [the General Assembly] will override [the Governor's suggestion]."

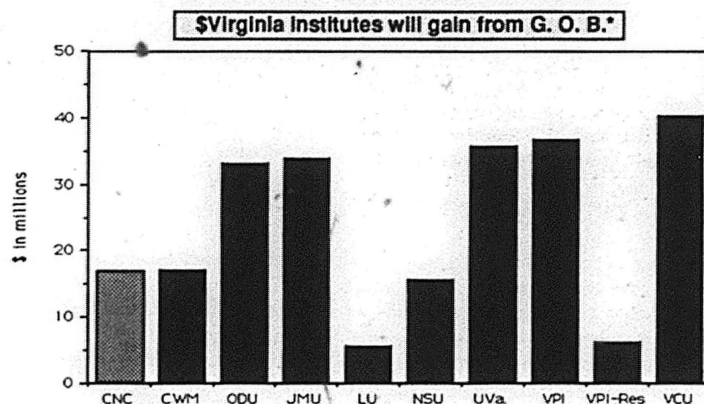

"It hurts us because we don't have the resources to make up the funds," Brauer said. "We will start looking to the next General Assembly session (in 1993) for funds. We are also going to look at other options."

One other problem, according to Brauer, is the fact that the money to replace the heating and air conditioning systems in the library were listed with the addition cost. Therefore, CNC will not only lose the addition, but also the environmental control system for the present library. "We are heading up to Richmond next week to try to get that money back," Brauer explained.

Randall O'Neill, president of the Student Government Association, said that cutting the library addition "would be stupid. We shouldn't have to go to William & Mary to do our research."

CNC was not the only school to lose prospective funds. The College of William & Mary had a $3 million Facilities Management complex cut, and Clinch Valley College had a $2 million building renovation removed from the bonds program.

The General Issue Bonds proposal still has to pass a public referendum in November before the money will be given to the respective colleges and universities.

When asked what was in store for CNC as it becomes a university, President Santoro replied that the biggest changes will be seen in the classrooms.

With high-tech facilities like CE-BAF and NASA, CNC wants to meet the Peninsula's increasingly technology-oriented needs. CNC is considering creating a separate school of Science and Technology. Most science and math related courses in the other three schools would be placed under the umbrella of this newly created school.

CNC also wants to call the various schools "colleges" now that it is becoming a university.

CNC has been planning to acquire Ferguson High School, renovate the campus' heating and cooling system and build an addition to the Captain John Smith Library.

A General Obligation Bond (GOB) bill which encompasses these various proposals has been sent to Governor L. Douglas Wilder who removed funds for the Library addition from the bill. Governor Wilder's changes to the GOB bill will be sent back to the Legislature for approval or re-consideration.

Funds for the acquisition of Ferguson and the renovation of the heating and cooling system have thus far remained on the bill, but voters will make the ultimate decision in the November referendum.

The heating and cooling renovation will begin as soon as the funds are appropriated to CNC; however, acquiring Ferguson will depend on how long it takes for the City of Newport News to build a new high school. It is projected that this will take at least two and one-half years.

If CNC does acquire the 200,000 square foot high school, thirty new acres will be added to CNC's current seventy-three.

The 200,000 square foot facility and thirty-acre lot would provide CNC with more space for athletic activities as well as classrooms that could be used for graduate programs, a nursing school or to house the proposed College of Science and Technology.

Students, faculty and staff will have the opportunity to address the administration at the next town meeting during the fall semester. Students wishing to react more immediately to these topics can contact the Student Government Association at 549-7197.

Cheerleaders display team spirit, win title

By Dana Margulies
Contributing Writer

"Hey, do you cheer?" Mike Jacob asks a stunning blond who accidentally wanders too close to his table.

"No," she answers with a slightly confused look.

"Oh, well," he says, returning to his conversation.

As stunt captain of the Christopher Newport Cheerleading Squad, Jacob is always on the lookout for prospective members.

The squad which cheered during basketball season was a completely redeveloped team. Last year's squad was disbanded when their coach left the area due to military commitments.

After only a few weeks of practice under the direction of new coach Sharon Jenkins and assistant coaches John Phillips and Ruth-Marie France Horton, the squad won first place in the Dixie International Athletic Conference last February, claiming the title for CNC for the second year in a row.

"We had only been practicing for about six weeks before the competition took place," says Andy Kiser. "That was really the highlight of the season."

"It was difficult because we were put together so late," says Chay Musgrove, captain of the squad. "We didn't have much time. It was very well organized, and we were taught really well."

The squad also logged in an incredible number of hours practicing in the small gym.

Since none of the male members besides Matt Rodhy (whose mother was a CNC cheerleader) had cheerleading experience, the squad had to make up for lost time with intensive stunt training.

They were often in the gym four days a week, for more than five hours a day. Their schedule has eased up now, and they usually practice twice a week. "The squad that stunts together, stays together," says Ken Hale with a grin.

The cheerleaders prefer to think of themselves as a team rather than a squad. "The closeness of the team was what really made the season for us," says Jacob.

Captain Chay Musgrove agrees with his sentiment. "The best part about the season was getting close to my partner and the rest of the squad," she says. This thought is echoed by all the squad members.

"It's the most competitive sport I've ever been in," says Mike Hanson, a former high school football player and wrestler. "You get out there and you want to show everyone what you can do. We're out there acting together, but we're on our own, too."

The most popular cheer that the squad performs is the captain spell-out in which the male members roll around on the gym floor forming the shapes of the letters with their bodies while the female members hold up the letters on posters so that the crowd can cheer along.

"It was a lot of fun, but it really hurt, especially as time ran down to the wire.

We only had thirty seconds in the time-out to perform it," says Art Hellbaum, who is notorious on the squad for his exotic injuries.

The squad is really interested in getting the school behind the sports teams. "Towards the end of the season, we were packing the gym," says Tina Balod. "It's a great feeling when you're turning school spirit around."

"Next year we'll have so much more practice time," says Hellbaum. "CNC will be hosting the DIAC tournament, and the fans' support will be helpful for us."

Musgrove hopes to get closer to many of the other athletic teams next season. "We would like to get into supporting baseball, rugby, track, everything," she says.

And what will the squad be doing over summer break? They will probably be getting used to chanting CNC. "Give me a C! Give me an N! Give me a... What is it again?"

The Virginia Library Association is sponsoring a $2000 scholarship for a student who will be pursuing a Masters degree in Library Science in the 1992-93 school year. To be eligible for the scholarship, the applicant must currently be a legal resident of Virginia, with a minimum residence of two years; must hold an undergraduate degree; and must have been accepted by an American Library Association accredited library school. (Persons whose library school applications are pending may apply.) Major factors to be considered in making the awards are evidence of commitment to a career in librarianship in Virginia; financial need; leadership qualities; academic excellence; and membership in the Virginia Library Association. The application deadline is May 1. For an application or more information, contact Deborah M. Trocchi of the Virginia Library Association at 703-519-7853.

Registration and Admission begin

During the four summer sessions, almost 200 courses in thirty-seven undergraduate and graduate fields of study will be offered. New or current students may sign up for summer classes from until Apr. 20. Summer sessions last three, four or nine weeks long.

Regular registration for the 778 courses offered during the fall semester runs from Jul. 13 to Aug. 20.

During this period, current and newly-admitted students may register Monday through Thursday from 9 am to noon and from 1 to 4 pm.

Beginning Jul. 15, students may sign up Wednesday evenings from 5 to 6:30 pm. Wednesday evening registration ends Aug. 19.

The fall semester will bring a new addition to the campus course offerings: the Master of Science in Applied Physics.

This program is the second graduate-level degree to be offered by the college.

Applied physics graduate students may choose from three areas of concentration: Instrumentation and Advanced Computer Systems, Computational Physics, and Superconducting and Electro-optical Systems.

For information regarding college admittance, please call 594-7015.

Admission and registration services are available to active-duty military, their families and civilian employees from all area military installations. Call Lynn at Langley Air Force Base for more information at 764-3662.

Scholarships available for rising juniors and seniors

Each year the Virginia Society for Healthcare Marketing and Public Relations (VSHMPR) offers two scholarships to rising juniors and seniors at Virginia colleges and universities.

One $1000 and one $500 scholarship will be offered for the 1992-93 school year.

The scholarships are designed to encourage interest in healthcare public relations and marketing.

They are awarded to full-time students who are pursuing a degree in mass communications, English, journalism, public relations, marketing, advertising or related fields.

Although it is not a requirement that applicants have a special interest in the healthcare field, students should have a specific interest in public relations.

Interested students should submit the scholarship application, two examples of schoolwork (i.e. ads, layouts, articles) and a typed, two-page essay explaining why they are interested in marketing and/or public relations to the Scholarship Committee Chairperson by Apr. 17.

Applications are available in the CNC Financial Aid Office in room 203 of the Administration Building.

There are hundreds of questions on the GMAT, GRE and LSAT. This checklist will help you answer all of them.

Women's track a national power

By Robby Hipps
Sports Editor

Few Christopher Newport students outside of athletics realize the success that the CNC Women's Track Team has had.

In the past five years, Head Coach Vince Brown and his assistant staff has led the Lady Captains to seven Division III national titles combined in the indoor and outdoor seasons.

It began in the Spring of 1979, when Brown came to CNC as head coach from Hampton High School.

"When I came here in '79, the program was pretty informal; everyone met at the Campus Center and the coaches asked who was going to go to the next meet," said Brown. He further stated that there was no track, ten hurdles, and a pole vault pit.

Brown added that practices were often held in the parking lot, and sometimes the team was able to go over to Todd Stadium for workouts.

"That was my initiation to CNC track, I guess you could say," stated Brown.

Before Brown came to CNC, the team had some success as individuals but not as a team. That started to change after Brown became a part of the program.

In the year Brown got here, he recruited heavily and tried to get the college's name known. Then, in 1981, two young ladies came to CNC—Veronica Lojko and Edna Davis.

There was not a women's program at CNC, however, when Davis and Lojko wanted to run. "We had them practice with us [the men's team] and go to several meets," explained Brown.

The following year, under the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIWA), Davis won the 200 meter and 400 meter events at the national meet.

According to Brown, Davis' performance was the first impact that a CNC athlete had at the national level.

She went on to repeat her outstanding performance the following year. These showings by Davis had a very strong effect on the CNC program as far as publicity.

This notoriety has lead to the key ingredient for the current program here at CNC. "Now high school coaches know about CNC and the level of competition we are at," said Brown.

Evidently something right is being done, because CNC has produced over 160 women All-Americans and is probably the most powerful division III team in the country.

This past indoor season, the women displayed their talent as they captured another national title, which was their seventh overall and fourth indoor title.

The Lady Captains surprised the field with a late come from behind victory at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

"This title was special because we started with new talent more or less...all of the championship team from 1990 has graduated except for Jennifer Martin," stated Brown.

Antoinette Bass, along with several other strong individual performances, including Martin's third place finish in the long jump and the 55 meters, helped push CNC to the title.

Bass secured the victory with a second place in the meet's final event, the triple jump.

"That is what it takes to win a national title: an individual who is a super athlete and steps up, and then a very good supporting cast," said Brown.

More recently, the Lady Captains showed their ability in the Captains' Classic as the topped the field.

Lisa Molineaux had the best day of her career, winning three events: the shot put (35-11), discus (113-3), and the javelin (118-5). In addition, Martin captured the 200 meters (25.6) and long jump (18-2) events.

Brown stated, "You have to ask yourself 'am I doing the right thing'...I think we are because we have had our championship years, then an off period, and now we are coming back to championship levels with a new pool of talent."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Men's Tennis—The Captains split the past four games including their first Dixie Conference match.

Against Ferrum, CNC captured an 8-1 win as No. 1 Holden Knight and No. 2 Robert Downen each won, as did the No. 2 doubles team of sophomore Marty Reinfeld and freshman Larry Earl.

In another match against a DIAC foe—Greensboro, the Captains came away with their second Dixie win of the season with another 8-1 victory. Knight, Downen, and Reinfeld each won in singles to lead CNC.

The Captains' losses came to Hampden-Sydney, 6-3, and Lynchburg, 5-4.

Baseball—In a week of close games, CNC came away with just one win and a tie.

The Captains split a doubleheader with Shenandoah. CNC took the first game, 5-3, as Ricky St. Peter, Mike Conway, and Jasen Simpson all had three hits and Mike Keasey went the distance on the mound.

But in the nightcap, Shenandoah scored twice in the bottom of the seventh to squeeze out a 4-3 win.

Randolph-Macon also beat CNC in its last at bat, scoring twice in the bottom of the ninth for a 7-6 win despite three hits each from Elly Bratton and Simpson.

After a 12-5 loss to Bridgewater in which Bratton and Chris Randall had two hits apiece, the Captains played a 9-9, ten inning tie with Eastern Mennonite which was called on account of darkness. St. Peter and Greg Mears each had three hits.

Softball—The Lady Captains won four of seven games during the past week. Jennifer Bryant had three hits in a doubleheader the CNC split with Virginia Wesleyan, a 7-5 win and a 1-0 loss.

In another doubleheader, the Lady Captains took both games against Maryland-Eastern Shore, 16-0, 19-6, as Alecia Taverniti had seven hits to pace the team.

At the Mary Washington Tournament, the Lady Captains defeated Methodist, 2-1, on a two-hitter by Mary Carpenter. But, Mary Washington stopped CNC, 5-1.

Golf—At the Francis Marion Invitational, Joe Monk captured medal honors with a three-hole playoff victory in one of his biggest performances ever.

Monk defeated Jason Caron of Charleston Southern in the playoff after firing a two-round total of 145, breaking the CNC school record for two rounds. The Captains placed tenth among 23 teams.

Women's Tennis—This past weekend, CNC ran its winning streak to nine in a row, a school record, with a Dixie Conference victory against Greensboro.

The No. 1 doubles team of Amy Lawrence and Stephanie Seward remained unbeaten for the entire year at 15-0, while the No. 2 doubles of Lisa Lunde and Tina Schadler is 8-1. Lawrence and Schadler are both 9-1 in singles play.

In addition, Lawrence has been nominated by coach Pat Accettola for the Volvo Tennis Senior Player Of The Year Award. Criteria for being nominated include being ranked among the top fifty players in the Volvo collegiate ranking during the senior year and contributing to the team significantly.

SGA Candidate Platforms

Chris Mancill President

Hello! My name is Chris Mancill and I would like to take a few moments to tell you some of my reasons for running for Student Government Association President.

1. I'm an experienced candidate. I have been a member of the SGA for three years, have held offices in the Spanish Club, and have been elected President of the Modern Languages Organization. My other activities include founding the Greens, coordinating the formation of Lambda Pi chapter of Alpha Mu Gamma and being a Student Orientation Leader for this summer.

2. I'm a qualified candidate. I'm an Honors student with a 3.5 Grade Point Average, I received a McMurran Scholarship and am a member of Alpha Mu Gamma Honorary Fraternity. I write the SGA weekly press releases, communicate with Gates magazine and keep updated on campus news by checking with The Captain's Log.

3. I care about the university. For the years we attend Christopher Newport, this university is our lives. I will make it my principal duty to listen to the students and to do everything possible to make sure that students don't become just numbers at this university.

I thank you for your time and respectfully request your support.

Randy O'Neill President

I, Randy O'Neill, am currently serving as the Student Government Association President.

I have been the President of BACCHUS, the Campus Activities Board Director, a Student Orientation Leader, a Graduate of Student Leadership Institute and the Executive Vice-President of Sigma Tau Gamma.

If re-elected, I plan to continue with the programs that I have been working on as well as any student concerns that should arise. My main goal this past year has been to increase the communication between students and administration and to give the voice of the SGA more power.

I believe I have accomplished this and I will continue these goals. A benefit of being re-elected is that I have already been familiarized with the policies and procedures of the college. I give the students a strong voice and I am not one to give up on an issue without seeing the results.

The student body needs to know that the President of the SGA is a representative of the students. If you have concerns, come talk to me. Keep the voice strong!! Vote for Randy O'Neill-SGA President.

Jeremiah Dearing VP Academic Affairs

Hello! My name is Jerry Dearing. I am running for the Student Government Association office of Vice President of Academic Affairs.

I am a sophomore with a political science major and a professional writing minor. During my years at Christopher Newport College, I have taken part in the Student Leadership Institute and have been accepted as a Student Orientation Leader.

I have three major goals that I hope to accomplish as Vice President of Academic Affairs.

First, I want to ensure that students have an active voice in the choosing of faculty.

Secondly, I would like to see a rape awareness session taught at freshman orientation in addition to the programs that are sponsored during Rape Awareness Week.

Thirdly, I would like to see a program set-up that offers monthly seminars on various academic fields of interest.

As always, it is my intention to represent the interests of the student body. CNC is a fast growing society in which changes must occur. It is the responsibility of the student body to serve as the conscience of CNC.

Vote Jerry - Vice President of Academic Affairs!

Brian Lamprecht VP Student Services

As Christopher Newport College moves toward changing itself into a university of the nineties, more will have to change than just the name.

Not only are we changing a college into a university, but we are changing college student into university students. We must, therefore, insist that if the college wants to call us university students that it treats us as such.

As Vice-President of Student Services, I, Brian Lamprecht, plan to take on the task of helping the school undertake these changes.

The school needs to consider having a place on campus that is open twenty-four hours a day, installing an ATM machine on campus and increasing the hours of operation for the library. This by no means is a complete list.

As we move on to become a university, we will discover a lot of changes that will have to take place.

As your Student Government Association representative, and with your input, I feel much of this change is possible.

Academic dishonesty: A sign of the times?

By Karen Neustadt

Fierce competition for jobs and higher grades and poor leadership models have created a fertile climate for cheating, say college and university officials who are grappling with new ways to deal with an old problem.

Worried educators say some of today's college students, exposed to a painful recession in a get rich quick society and numbed by scandals such as congressional check bouncing, are asking themselves: What's wrong with cheating?

"One of the reasons that (cheating is) increasing is the perception that the students' future job opportunities are linked to how well they perform in terms of grades," said Robert Dorff, faculty senate chairman at North Carolina State University.

"When pressure mounts, some feel that pressure and respond by cheating," he said, adding that today's faculty members are being urged to be more creative with testing procedures to make cheating "less enticing."

Not only is academic dishonesty growing, but there is more discussion about it than ever before. "Both of these forces are coming together and making it a more apparent problem," Dorff said.

One New Jersey student doesn't see cheating as a problem. In fact, he's making a tidy profit off the current GPA paranoia.

Michael Moore, a Rutgers University journalism student, recently raised eyebrows with his eighty-six page book, titled Cheating 101: The Benefits and Fundamentals of Earning the Easy 'A', that details methods of cheating, including hiding notes in the holes of torn jeans and using foot signals to convey answers on multiple choice questions.

Moore reported, in an article in "Campus Crime" (Jan. 1992), that he has sold 1,750 copies of his book to students at Rutgers, the University of Maryland and Ohio State University.

Some professors say that Moore's blatant effort to promote deceit has brought cheating, an often unspoken, seldom-addressed problem, into the light.

Educators often refuse to admit the amount of cheating that may be going on in their classes, said one source, and may not want to know the hard facts.

In 1987 and 1988, the American Council on Education, in conjunction with the University of California at Academic dishonesty may be on the rise as students face tougher competition for jobs and grades in the '90s.

Los Angeles asked students about their cheating habits in a comprehensive survey, "The American Freshman."

About thirty-seven percent of the students surveyed in the fall of 1988 said they had cheated on a test in high school, an increase of about thirty percent the year before. About fifty-seven percent said they had copied another student's work, while about fifty-two percent admitted doing so the year before.

That was the last year any reference to cheating was included in the survey.

"We don't plan on bringing them up (the questions) again," said Ellen Riggs, a researcher with the Higher Education Research Center at UCLA. "The general reaction from the schools were not the most positive. Some advised students not to answer the questions."

Michael Moffatt, associate professor at Rutgers University, said his intensive study of cheating left him shocked and "in a funk." He said he received only a luke-warm response from his colleagues.

"I found that thirty-three percent (of students) have been involved in considerable cheating. That means cheating in three to twenty-five courses with an average of eight courses and twenty-two percent had never cheated in college. The in-betweens cheated once or twice," said Moffatt.

Moffatt's investigation included four hundred Rutgers students who turned anonymous "self-reports" on subjects such as sexuality and cheating. The results of the cheating questions spurred him to write a twenty-two page report.

"I received a great number of graphic papers that were in many ways more shocking than the sexual self-reports. It threw me into a funk," he said.

Students confided to Moffatt that they cheated to get minimal grades to survive, to get revenge on a disliked professor or because they were angry because others performed better academically without much effort.

Moffatt said cheating often takes such an emotional and mental toll that it would be easier to study. "They are in terror of being caught," he said of cheaters. "They will fight against the accusation."

The professor said he has identified five commonly used cheating techniques from the "lookabout," where answers are borrowed from a neighbor, to "ripple cheating," which can consist of elaborate, premeditated schemes with many involved.

Cheat sheets are so common that Moffatt actually legalized them in his class. Students are allowed to bring in one 8-by-10-inch piece of paper with as much written on it as the space can contain. "It encourages me to not ask stupid questions," he said.

Cheating often takes other forms, such as plagiarism, paying someone to take a test or write a paper, or buying an already completed term paper.

While many campuses wrestle with the problem of cheating, students at the University of Virginia are celebrating the 150th birthday of the nation's oldest student-run honor system.

For one week, beginning Mar. 27, students take part in a four-day conference on honor and integrity in the academic environment. The topic is discussed at luncheons, dinners, lectures and seminars.

Founded in 1842, Virginia's honor system is simple: no lying, cheating or stealing. There's only one punishment; students found guilty of an offense by juries of their peers are dismissed from the university.

While Virginia's drastic disciplinary measures may not wash on some campuses, many are tightening up their honor codes.

In 1985, when officials at the University of Delaware surveyed the student body and discovered that seventy-eight percent admitted to cheating, they immediately revamped their honor code.

Now students caught cheating received a grade of "XF" on their transcripts. Cheating cases are evaluated by a student board, which is known to be tougher on fellow students because they see themselves as victims of cheating.

The University of Maryland also gives students an "XF" grade which remains on the student transcript for a full year. After completing a non-credit six-week course on academic integrity, the students can petition to have the "X" removed.

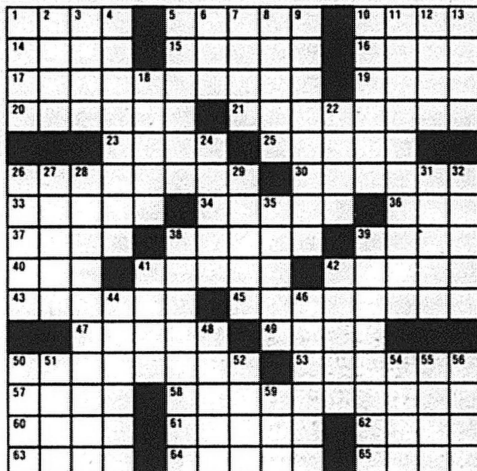

The spotlight has been on academic integrity for the past several years.

"Officials say student seem increasingly willing to do anything to get ahead," reports an article on academic dishonesty that appeared in the Chronicle of Higher Education (Jan. 17, 1990).

"The students are frightened about the job market. They are searching for the pre-wealth curriculum. The value of money is more important to them than a code of honesty and a sense of responsibility," said Arthur Levine, chairman of the Institute of Education management at Harvard University, in the same article.

What to tell your professor when you blow off class

1. "A distant relative died, and I had to go to the funeral."—GOOD (But, be sure you make up the relative, because if you use a real person and that person dies then you'll feel really bad.)
2. "I was very very ill."—GOOD
3. "While off campus visiting my very sick grandmother, I got a flat tire."—GOOD

What NOT to tell your professor when you blow off class

1. "I died."—BAD (Not only will this create immediate suspicion, but it is very difficult to prove.)
2. "I was very very ill because I washed down a bottle of tequila with a bottle of vodka, and spent most of the night projectile vomiting."—BAD (Too much detail.)
3. "Your lectures are so boring they make me want to run from your classroom, screaming, and slit my wrists."—BAD (Honest, but bad.)

NOTICE—THE CAPTAIN'S LOG

For the protection of our readers, all advertisements are accepted for publication in the Classified Section on the premise that the product is properly described in the advertisement, is available at the advertised price, is available at the advertised address and will be willingly sold to a buyer at the price and conditions stated in the advertisement.

Advertisers deliberately violating these standards will not be permitted to use our advertising columns.

If the reader encounters anything other than faithful compliance with these conditions, we will appreciate your call to the Better Business Bureau, (804) 722-9101, or write BBB, 3608 Tidewater Drive, Norfolk, Virginia 23509.

NOTICE of typographical or other errors must be given before the second insertion for claims or refund or extension cannot be recognized.

After an ad is ordered it cannot be cancelled or changed before publication. Read ad carefully at the time of first insertion. If it contains an error and you wish to correct or cancel your ad, call MISS CLASSIFIED (594-7196) and ask for CLASSIFIED CUSTOMER SERVICE DEPARTMENT.

The Captain's Log does not assume financial responsibility for losses sustained as a result of any typographical error in any ad imperfectly or incorrectly printed or accidentally omitted.

All advertising copy is accepted subject to the approval or rejection by the management of The Captain's Log, and if rejected, any consideration paid will be refunded to the advertiser, and all parties will be released. The Captain's Log also reserves the right to edit, reject or classify all ads under appropriate headings.
