"Wir Wunderkinder" -- A Brechtian Kaleidoscope of German life from the days of the Kaiser through the Hitler era to the post-war economic boom. Two schoolmates, one becomes a writer, the other an unscrupulous opportunist, represent opposing outlooks on life. Director: Kurt Hoffman (German, 1958) Presented by the Film Classics Club.

Museum Without Walls this weekend will present:

"Le Corbusier" Made by Carlos Vilardebo, one of the great architect's collaborators, with commentary by Douglas Cooper, British art historian and collector, the film is a dramatic photographic portrayal of Le Corbusier's impact on architectural development throughout the world. His concern for the urbanized man revolutionized architectural design, and his building concepts anticipated modern architecture. Despite frustrations and setbacks-- Le Corbusier was nearly 60 before he realized some of the concepts of his youth--he persisted: "Of this I am sure," he stated, "I am right."

"The Greek Temple". The architectural triumph of Greek civilization, the Greek temples were an effective combination of secular art, religion, and science. Although they varied according to size and regional tastes, their basic features were very similar, designed in accordance with one of the three classic architectural orders: the Doric, Ionic, or Corinthian. The film explores the sites of all the great temples, including Delphi, Paestum, Agrigento, Sounion, and the Acropolis.

To be shown G101, Friday 8:00PM, Sunday 3:00PM, Monday 8:00PM
