Spring Graduation Kept on Campus

Spring graduation will once again be held on the campus lawn, the area between the Campus Center and Newport Hall, on Sunday, May 22.

The activities will begin with a reception under the pines for the parents. The commencement exercises will begin at 4 p.m. The commencement speaker will be John Casteen, secretary of Higher Education. The topic of his address is unknown as of press time.

Dr. Charles Behymer, vice president of Student Affairs, says that the Campus Center construction will cause only very minor problems in relation to seating, which as a result has been altered.

The trench which divides the lawn has been filled and will have grass placed over it.

Only if it rains heavily will commencement be moved into the large gymnasium. Dr. Behymer hopes this will not happen as the graduating seniors will have to limit their invited guests and conditions in the gym will be crowded, hot and humid.

Spring flowers provide backdrop for commencement.

Draft Registration Required for Financial Aid

by Linda Dozier

Due to a congressional mandate that says any young man not signed up for the draft should not get financial aid, the financial aid department has required students to certify that they have registered in order to apply for aid.

Congress originally requested that students have certification and verification of their legitimacy to apply for aid. Judge Donald D. Alsop of the U.S. District Court for Minnesota issued an injunction which challenged the law's constitutionality. Because of this injunction, students are not required to have verification of their registration but they must still have certification.

The effective date for the verification law has been delayed to February 1, 1984 by the House subcommittee in order to give more time for the implementing of enforcement procedures.

"The percentage of non-registrants is very small," said Susan Glauco of the financial aid department. The law will "make schools investigate and squeal on students, plus it may prove to be more of an administrative burden," she said.

The law will only effect new applicants for financial aid and until February 1, 1984 only certification will be required. The certification is in the form of a few questions the student answers and then he signs on the aid application. However, after the above date, the school will require students to have copies of their registration acknowledgement letters as verification.

Spring Meeting of the Musicology Society

On Saturday, April 22, Christopher Newport College will host the Spring Meeting of the Southeast Chapter of the American Musicological Society. Events will be held from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. in the Campus Center Theatre.

Among the papers to be read are "Persecutio, Benedicite and Actus in the Merovingian Chapel at Tours," by Dr. Clyde W. Brockelt of the CNC music faculty; "Giulio Bonagiunta da S. Genesi, editor of Music in Sixteenth-Century Venice," by Giulio Maria Ongaro of the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill; and "Brahms's Third Symphony: Technique and Structure," by Robert Bailey, an expert in the music of Johannes Brahms and Richard Wagner from the Eastern School of Music of the University of Rochester.

Other papers will be "Opera and Politics during the French Revolution: Getty's Roger et Olivier" by M. Elizabeth C. Bartlett of Duke University; and "The Concept of the Oratorio in the Music and Writings of Jean-Francois Le Seur" by Howard Smith of the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

Elected vice president of Student Affairs was Sherri Lascola, and as vice president of Academic Affairs, Angela Marcopoulos was selected.

Elections were held last week in the Campus Center. MacPherson won by 86 percent of the votes cast, with Pearson capturing 85 percent. Lascola won by a 64 percent margin, and Marcopoulos won with 52 percent of the ballots.

Tuition Increases

by Linda Dozier

Inflation and cuts in governmental funding have caused Christopher Newport College to increase tuition to $45 for in-state and $67 for out-of-state. These fees are up from last year's of $40.50 and $53.50 respectively.

The increases which were approved by the Board of Executives Committee will go into effect during the summer. With the increase, yearly tuition has risen from $1,215 last year to $1,350 for the following year for in-state tuition. Out-of-state tuition for the year has gone up from $1,605 last year to $2,010 for next year. These figures are based on the average student carrying 30 hours per year.

In-state tuition increased 11 percent while out-of-state fees increased 25 percent. James Eagle, vice president of Financial Affairs, said the higher increase is due to a mandate that requires non-Virginian students to pay 75 percent of their costs. In-state students still are directed by the 70/30 margin for educational costs with the students paying 30 percent.

News Writing

ENGL 260, Introduction to News Writing, will be offered in the Fall semester. The course was omitted from the Registration News. For more information, see the English Department bulletin board upstairs in Newport Hall.

After training in the Chinese language, he was assigned to the U.S. Mission in Peking, China, and returned to the State Department in Washington in 1978 to become chief of the East-West Trade Division.

He has recently returned from a two-week visit to mainland China with a Congressional delegation. He will become chief of the Economic Section of the American consulate in Hong Kong this summer.

His talk, followed by questions and answers, is free and open to the public.

Creech was also vice president of Newport News Shipbuilding. He served as an attorney for the U.S. Navy Bureau of Ships from 1957 to 1961. He was a member of the Virginia State Bar Association, the American Bar Association, and the Federal Bar Association.

Fine and Performing Arts Career Brochure

by Shirley R. Widlaski

Students pursuing careers in fine and performing arts now have a specialized brochure listing nationwide job openings. The monthly brochure, NATIONAL ARTS JOBBANK, is located in the Placement Office, CC208.

Interested students should make an appointment to meet with Mr. McMullan, director of the Office of Career Planning and Placement in order to receive this valuable career guide. The Placement Office is open weekdays from 8:30 to 5 p.m.

Placement Office Congratulates AKPsi

Since the establishment of the Office of Career Planning and Placement in 1966, students have provided invaluable assistance and suggestions to the office.

Once more the CNC students demonstrated support for this office when members of the Alpha Kappa Psi business fraternity reorganized the library of the Office of Career Planning and Placement.

The members of the fraternity taking part in the project were Bob McGraw, Deborah Cain, Shelley Nicoletta, Cheryl Drak, Karen Richardson, Russell Fail, Carol Gray, Ken Hiscock, James Dwellie, David Hunt, and Lora Taylor. Mrs. Sullivan, secretary to the director of the Office of Career Planning and Placement, supervised the students.

Mrs. Sullivan comments on the fraternity members' performance: "I was very much impressed by the commitment of the students of Alpha Kappa Psi as demonstrated in this service project."

Members of this fraternity came punctually as scheduled, settled immediately into a difficult task, updating labels and discarding outdated literature, and completed the job in only a couple of weeks, handing in an inventory of materials to be reordered.

"If this is a sample of what the business community is getting coming from CNC, then we have every reason to be proud of our graduates, and Alpha Kappa Psi is to be congratulated on its taking the initiative to support in a meaningful way the Christopher Newport community."

Opera Star Jerome Hines To Perform

by Terry VanDover

Jerome Hines, world-famous American bass, will perform Saturday, April 23, at Christopher Newport College, in the final concert of the Nancy A. Ramseur Memorial Series for 1982-83.

Hines, who made his debut with the Metropolitan Opera in 1946, celebrated his thirty-fifth consecutive year with the Met in the 1980-81 season.

In addition to performing at the Met, Hines has won acclaim in many major theatres throughout the world, including La Scala in Milan, the Paris Opera, the Rome Opera, the Vienna State Opera, the Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires and the Teatro Massimo in Palermo, Sicily.

His repertoire encompasses most of the world's great bass roles. He has sung the roles of Don Carlo, Don Giovanni, Ramfis in Aida, Mark in Tristan and Isolde, Wotan in Das Rheingold and Die Walkure, Silva in Ernani, and Mephistopheles in all three major operas concerning the Faust legend.

Hines was the first American to sing the title role of Boris Godunov and Boito's Mefistofele with a major opera company; and he was the first American to sing the role of Gurnemanz in Parsifal at the Festspielhaus in Bayreuth.

In one of his greatest triumphs, Hines sang the role of Boris Godunov in Russian at the Bolshoi Theatre in Moscow in 1962.

In addition to his countless opera performances, Hines has made many recordings and television appearances, has performed in more than 1,200 recitals, and has performed as a soloist with many major orchestras.

Also a composer, Hines has an opera to his credit: I Am the Way, about the life of Jesus Christ.

In addition, Hines' autobiography, This is My Story. This is My Song, was published in 1968.

The concert begins at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Theatre. All tickets are $8; all seats are reserved. MasterCard and Visa are accepted. For reservations call CNC's director of music at 599-7074.

Monthly Concert Series Presents Piano Recital by Jack Winerock

by Terry VanDover

Christopher Newport College's monthly concert series will present pianist Jack Winerock Friday, April 22, in the Campus Center Theatre. In honor of the one-hundred-fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Johannes Brahms, Winerock will perform a program consisting entirely of that composer's music.

A graduate of the Julliard School of Music, Winerock holds a doctorate from the University of Michigan.

In 1976, Winerock won the International Bach Competition, and in 1978, the International Competition for Excellence in American Music, which is sponsored by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Winerock presently teaches at the University of Kansas, in addition to performing throughout the United States.

Friday's all-Brahms program will include the Ballade, Opus 10, No. 1; the Sonata in F Minor, Opus 5; the Waltzes for Piano, Opus 39; and the Rhapsody in E-flat Major, Opus 119, No. 4.

The recital will begin at 8:15 p.m. CNC students will be admitted free of charge. Tickets are $2 for CNC faculty and staff, $3 for the general public.

Professional Dance Group "Danceteller" to Give Workshops and Performance at CNC

by Terry VanDover

Danceteller, a professional dance company, will perform at Christopher Newport College Thursday, April 21, at the conclusion of a two-day workshop in theatre and dance.

The company, founded in 1975 by its present artistic director, Trina Collins, has given more than 200 performances throughout the United States.

Three workshops, held by the company's six members on Wednesday, April 20, included basic movement in theatre, basic dancing for actors, and a dance/stretch class for athletes.

Thursday's performance will begin with Danceteller's most recently created work,

"Flight," a tribute to man's eternal desire to fly.

The second dance will be "Les Noces," (The Wedding), danced to the music of Igor Stravinsky. The dance celebrates the wedding of the son and daughter of two Russian immigrants to America at the turn of the century.

Concluding the performance will be "Song-A-Rama," a spoof on sentimental songs of the past.

The performance will start at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Theatre. Tickets are $2 for CNC students, faculty and staff, and $3 for the general public.

Indians Get Scalped By Captains

by David Cronk

Tuesday Christopher Newport College took its first conference baseball game against Methodist and then proceeded to overcome Division I William and Mary on Wednesday. Earlier this spring, W & M destroyed CNC 13-0.

It looked like a repeat performance in the top of the seventh inning with the score 10-1, their favor. Then in the bottom of the inning a six-hit attack brought the Captains back to within two runs.

In the eighth inning, both teams upped the tally to two runs apiece. With the bases filled and one out in the ninth, Steve Batts drew a walk to force one run across. Then Sam Motly and Pete Fallon each singled in a run to create a tie. Steve Cooke then grounded to the Shortstop and Batts beat the throw to the plate, ending the game.

Motly (two hits, three RBI) received credit for the win in the 14-13 triumph.

Pete Kjeldsen slams overhead.

"Computerized Exploration System Was Intern's Main Project"

by Ann Catherine Braxton

One of the most exciting and beneficial opportunities a student can have is to obtain an internship or apprenticeship related to the field he or she aspires to enter.

Sandy Ballew, a young graduate student from the College of William and Mary, has benefited both herself and Christopher Newport College this past semester by working with the students and getting a first-hand look at the world of counseling through her internship with the CNC Counseling Center.

Sandy Ballew was born December 31, 1956 in McKeesport, Pennsylvania and graduated from Pennsylvania State University with a B.A. in Political Science in 1978. She has been married almost three years and for four years she has been in the Air Force where both she and her husband have just been promoted to the rank of Captain. She did some undergraduate work at ODU and then transferred to William and Mary where she will complete her Master's of Education in Counseling this Spring.

Ms. Ballew chose to come to CNC for her counseling internship. She secured this opportunity through one of her William and Mary professors.

"It's a typical thing to have an apprenticeship in a master's degree program. Dr. O'Shell (an education professor at William and Mary who sets up internships) contacted Dr. Babcock, who interviewed me. (I had several colleges to choose from), so I asked to come here." Thus she was selected as the Counseling Center's intern for the Spring semester.

The major project Ms. Ballew has worked with this semester has involved assisting counselor Glen Vought with the Counseling Center's recent computer Project where students were given insights into what career opportunities they might pursue.

"It was kind of interesting to watch the students' reactions to a computerized exploration system," she said. She added that her internship is technically over in April but that there are students she hopes to continue counseling into the middle of May.

Ms. Ballew's main interest is in "behavioral problems such as overeating. I'm doing my thesis on bulimarexia. I find my greatest enjoyment with people who have eating disorders."

Her future goals include obtaining a doctoral degree in counseling psychology, but her immediate future plans include a teaching position.

"In July, I'll be leaving Virginia to go to Washington State to fulfill my Air Force obligations. I'll be teaching ROTC at Washington State University. That will be a three-year assignment for me."

What is her evaluation of her counseling internship? "It was fantastic. It's been very, very worthwhile. The people I've worked with have been absolutely superior in the professional respect."

Barry Wood, chairman of the committee formed to locate a replacement for Bette V. Mosteller.

Board of Visitors to Choose New Library Director Soon

by Ann Catherine Braxton

CNC's Captain John Smith Library suffered a devastating loss last October when its director, Bette V. Mosteller, died in an automobile accident, and for the past six months, a committee headed by Barry Wood, director of development, had diligently searched for a new library director.

This search will come to an end on April 28 when the Board of Visitors chooses CNC's new library director out of the three finalists whose names were submitted to Dean Richard Summerville.

The search began late in October almost immediately after Ms. Mosteller's death. Dean Summerville was assigned the task of locating a competent replacement and formed a committee consisting of library staff members Jennilou Grotevant and Hugh Tracey, administrator Shahram Amiri, faculty members Dr. Douglas Gordon, Dr. Susan St. Onge, and Wayne Schell, and student Michele Whitlow. Barry Wood served as committee chairman.

In a page-long ad that appeared in hundreds of professional library and education journals nationwide, including The Chronicle of Higher Education, the search committee listed over half a dozen stringent requirements that the prospective applicants must meet in order to be considered for the position.

The requirements included at least a master's degree in library science, experience in collecting volumes for library growth, and well-charted plans for increasing the library's resources for possible master's degree programs. According to Wood, the last qualification was "very important to Dr. Summerville."

"We all want someone to involve the college and general community with the library itself to help it mature. We need someone who would initiate grants to the library for development," Wood said. He said they are looking for "someone who would stand out in the community as a leader, spokesperson, and defender for the library."

on Thursday, April 28. The film will be shown in the Campus Center Theatre at 12:15 p.m. and 7 p.m. Admission is $2.

Through a Glass Darkly is a classic chronicle of the pathetic plunge of a young woman into mental illness. Karin, having read in her father's journal that she is an incurable schizophrenic, goes through a series of compulsive acts and visions into a world of hallucinations. This is a very powerful film in which the audience participates in the terror of Karin's experience.

"Bergman has charted with technical accuracy the moving psychological drama of a descent to insanity. A powerful, personal experience." — New York Times.

Dr. James Windsor, professor of psychology, will introduce the film and lead a discussion following the presentation.

The Psychology Department at Christopher Newport College, which has sponsored this year a film series consisting of three of Ingmar Bergman's most provocative creations, will present Through a Glass Darkly

The committee wrote to 110 colleges and universities throughout the South, and among the 110, 20 offered doctoral degrees in library science.

Fifty-two applications were received before the December 31 deadline. From the fifty-two applicants, fifteen were selected. The fifteen finalists were asked to present further credentials and references.

"We narrowed the fifteen down to four", says Wood. "Then we narrowed the four to three, and Dr. Summerville narrowed the three to one."

The Board of Visitors will approve the choice on April 28 and the effective date of appointment will be August 1.

Opinion

Compass: Parting Shots

by Vince Emmons

Sometimes smaller issues have a tendency towards snow-balling into bigger ones right before your eyes.

One of my professors was notified that his contract would not be renewed. I was (and still am) angry. I've watched less energetic and enthusiastic academics stick around when the good ones have gone on their way. Having watched it happen before leaves me no less disillusioned.

At first, the "why" was unimportant; this singular event was large enough to keep me bitching for a few paragraphs. Not so simple. Other factors were involved that needed to be dealt with. The unofficial word was that the termination was due to budgetary restrictions.

I obtained a copy of Gov. Robb's budget reduction request, as well as subsequent amendments asking for further cuts. I also found President Anderson's letter to the Secretary of Education protesting the further demands and requesting that Christopher Newport's case be reconsidered. He was firmly rebuffed. It seems that Gov. Robb's higher political aspirations require that he put his own house in order before moving up. The budget was foisted upon us with little forethought as to the implications, a virtual forced oath of loyalty. There was no real choice as to whether the President would sign or not.

It seems, according to the Governor's Secretary of Education John Casteen, our (in my opinion, lowly) esteemed commencement speaker this year that Robb sees no conflict in slashing our shoe-string budget while professing his deep concern and support for quality in higher education. Perhaps the Governor is unaware that elimination of a college faculty somewhat hinders its abilities as a teaching institute.

Kathy Martin: "After working on the College Handbook for two years, I'm angered and disillusioned by the events of the past two weeks. We had a flexible, workable document that satisfied the needs of the faculty, students and administration."

No two ways about it, Chuck bites the brown banana for this one. But I'm not sure that's all there is to it.

Going over the memorandum's list of possible areas of reduction proposed by the President's document, the areas hardest (and most visibly) hit are those directly to student services and faculty and department retention. In addition, available funds are being directed away from the humanities and toward computer and tech degrees. Essentially this means that an instructor in an underfunded department gets his walking papers and the rest of the department picks up the extra load without appropriate compensation. Or, of course, they simply reduce the class offerings of the department. The administration plans to do this by packing more students into classrooms, eliminating courses with smaller enrollments (meaning the very productive upper-level courses with smaller faculty-to-student ratios are a thing of the past here) and (here's a sneaky one) officially raising the minimum work load of the remaining faculty so that the clause eventually becomes an unquestioned prerequisite for the way things are done around here.

Now for the final blow. The administration is, in addition to cutting back faculty, plotting to restrict their voice through some not-so-clever inside moves.

The College Handbook (rules and regulations for the college) draft prepared by a committee of faculty members contained a planned Faculty Senate where grievances could be aired. The administration took the original document and rewrote it to suit themselves. The Vice President of Academic Affairs, Richard Summerville, has had himself appointed as president of the Faculty Senate. This would be the rough equivalent of Yassir Arafat appointing himself Chairman of the Israeli Knesset. I don't know about you, but where I come from presidents of groups are generally chosen by the group through popular vote. Self-appointed presidents are usually called dictators. In short, the administration has rewritten the faculty's bible and made one of their own the High Priest. Incidentally, if one doubts that freedom of speech would be curtailed, note that Summerville is second-in-command at CNC and has a powerful role in promotions, tenure, and firing.

Said Student Association President (ELECTED President) Kathy Martin, "After working on the College Handbook for two years, I'm angered and disillusioned by the events of the past two weeks. We had a flexible, workable document that satisfied the needs of the faculty, students and administration. This document, however, has been altered to the point where it will hurt the student and permanently damage the relationship between the faculty and the administration. Furthermore, it's going to irreparably impair the quality of education that this institution is capable of providing."

Very convenient. As the president courts our lofty Board of Visitors, the vice president of Academic Affairs can keep the faculty in quiet submission.

Sleep tight.

Economizing May Damage College's Friendliness

The Honorable Charles S. Robb
Governor, Commonwealth of Virginia
Third Floor, State Capitol
Richmond, VA 23219

Dear Governor Robb:

I write out of a growing personal concern over the quality of higher education in Virginia. I have been teaching in colleges and universities since 1966, having worked at institutions as large as Michigan State University (at the time the student population exceeded 40,000) and Illinois State and Northern Illinois Universities (both enrolling approximately 20,000 students). I had the good fortune to be selected for a teaching position at Christopher Newport College in 1978.

In my nearly five years at CNC I have valued certain qualities that I fear are now threatened. As you know, CNC is a small college, enrolling somewhat more than 4,000 students, many of whom are part-time. Thus, the full-time student body is small. Furthermore, the school has been dedicated to undergraduate teaching. And while I will not pretend that the teaching could not be improved in some ways, teaching is nonetheless the first priority of the faculty. Finally, the student body comprises a large proportion of the eager students, older students, especially, who, full-time or part-time, are often highly motivated because of career plans and/or personal interest. In short, what I happened into was a state-supported school with many qualities one normally associates with small, private colleges.

I worry that the streamlining of higher education about which one hears many rumors and reports may destroy the spirit of colleges like Christopher Newport. Indeed, we do not aspire to national reputations. We do not field widely known athletic teams. We cannot attract the top scholars (most of whom would not be interested in the kind of teaching we do or in the number of classes we regularly teach). But we have provided an opportunity for a respectable education, and the individual student has not had to wallow in the anonymity of a large school. The majority of the faculty knows its students personally, by name. Most professors are available for help, in their offices, in the halls; and many take pride in the number of students they see outside of class.

What I've just described is less easily attained at large schools. Many students never run the risk of getting excited by personal discussions with their professors. Unfortunately, in my five years in Virginia, a disturbing pattern has defined itself. Because of the need to economize, we are told, classes are increasing in size; and even though enrollment at CNC continues to increase, often dramatically, we are denied new faculty positions and we operate in fear of losing some of the present ones. Freshman Composition classes, for instance, have grown from 22 to 30 students. It is impossible to provide an energetic, personal discussion of each student's work when they are so many. Granted, many students are less than devoted to such work, but how can an instructor try to reach them?

But I am not writing to complain about one academic department's particular burden. I am fearful that small, unfamous schools like CNC will turn into bigger, still unfamous schools, in which the faculty - because of professional ambition or because of the large numbers of students - become unable and unwilling to treat students to the irreplaceable parts of educational experience that I know have made the difference in many lives, my own included. I am well aware that in some portions of its business, higher education can become more efficient. I submit, however, that cost-effectiveness is not a valid frame of reference for measuring the quality of teaching.

Respectfully,
Jay S. Paul

Birdhouse Revisited

Dear Editor Fizer,

I was rather surprised to read in your editorial last week the reference to the new blue martin birdhouse on the campus that you inferred was built and paid for with college funds. I am writing this letter to put the letter straight.

Dr. Jean Pugh, a member of the biology faculty, learned of the interest of several of our students, particularly Bob Cross and David West, in blue martins, a relatively rare species of birds that nest almost exclusively in the dorms that you described as having several apartments. I might add that Bob Cross recently presented an excellent seminar based on research that he conducted at the meetings of the Va. Academy of Science in May. Dr. Jean Pugh generously donated the birdhouse to the college to enrich the lives of students and also to provide nesting spaces for blue martins. It was not purchased with college funds.

But I don't wish to stop writing now lest one unjustly criticize the administration for buying the plants that you may have noticed appearing on the campus. (Such reference appeared in a recent issue of this paper). The money for these plants and almost every other plant that has appeared on this campus through the years has been donated by members of the college community and the community at large. For example, the entire faculty of the Department of Biology dug into their almost empty pockets to pay for the white crepe myrtles of the Three Ships Garden. The Japanese Garden in the library courtyard was the dream of a recently retired employee of the library staff, Dolly Sherman. She solicited the funds for the garden from friends of the college. Students will install the garden this spring.

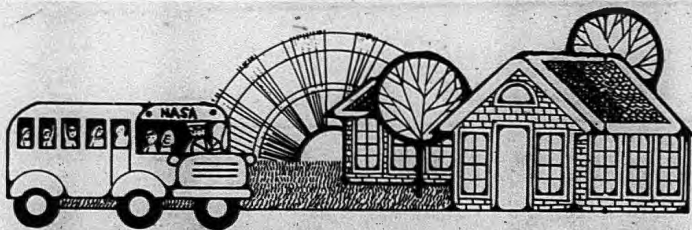

I for one appreciate the generosity of everyone including students, faculty, staff, administrators, and members of the community at large who have donated time and money to beautification projects in order to enrich the education of students by providing a pleasing campus atmosphere that is conducive to learning. A much better topic for last week's editorial would have been your expression of appreciation.

NASA Offers Trip to Universe

Imagine. You're seated in a theater enclosed by a dome 76 feet in diameter that fills your entire field of vision. Sound begins, washing over you from speakers placed throughout the room. Then, with breathtaking realism, you experience the creation of the Earth and the splitting and drifting of its continents. A volcano explodes before your eyes and, at one point, you find yourself in the midst of the eerie marine life of the Great Barrier Reef.

You can experience Universe, Richmond's new Planetarium and Space Theater of the Future, via a special bus trip being offered by the NASA Langley Visitor Center on Friday, May 27.

Participants will have the opportunity to view Universe's premier show. The two-part program includes a planetarium program, "Birth of a Universe," which presents the creation of the universe and the evolution of the solar system.

The second part of the program, "Genesis," is a 70 mm Omnimax film that takes you on a flight through billions of years, simulating the creation of the universe and the formation of the Earth.

The planetarium becomes a simulated spaceship that takes you on incredible, never before traveled journeys through space and time.

Universe features the world's first computer graphics planetarium projector, Digistar I, which was used to produce special effects for the movie Star Trek II, including the effect of traveling through the solar system at warp speeds. Universe's Omnimax projection system is considered the world's largest and finest high fidelity motion picture system.

Seating is limited and reservations are required. The bus departs from the NASA Langley Visitor Center on Friday May 27 at 8 a.m. and returns at 4:30 p.m.

Participants will have the opportunity to tour the Science Museum of Virginia, where Universe is located. The museum offers fascinating, hands-on experiences that help visitors understand the effect of science on their lives.

Participants will also have the opportunity for a dutch-treat lunch.

The cost for bus transportation and admission is $14 per person and must be paid in advance. Children must be accompanied by an adult. For reservations call (804) 865-2855.
