Herman to lecture on exile in Russia

Victor Herman, an American exiled in Siberia and the subject of the highly rated CBS television film Coming Out of the Ice, will give a lecture on his experiences in Russia on Thursday, October 21 at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Theatre.

In 1931, Herman moved with his family from Detroit, Michigan to Gorky in the Soviet Union, where his father helped establish a Ford Motor Company plant. Herman, a natural athlete, began to compete for the USSR; he became known to the world as "the Lindbergh of Russia" for his prowess as an aviator and for having set an altitude record for skydiving.

Victor Herman, however, had the misfortune of being a foreigner in the Soviet Union during the start of the Stalin purges and when war seemed imminent. In order to quash even the slightest possibility of foreign influence, Stalin developed the infamous Gulag system of forced labor camps; some three hundred of the remaining American Ford employees were jailed in these camps, including Victor Herman in 1938.

After spending World War II chopping down trees in remote regions deep inside Russia ("Until the end of the War, we didn't even know there was a war going on."), Herman was released from the labor camp in 1948 and exiled to Krasnoyarsk, a town in Siberia.

Victor Herman

There he met a young gymnast, named Galina, training at the same athletic club where he trained boxers; they were married shortly after they met. However, as a term of his release, Herman had been forbidden to marry; consequently, he was exiled further north in Siberia, to the Arctic village of Yeniseyk.

Upon his arrival in this distant village, he was told that he would not be allowed to live in the village, but would have to survive as best he could in the woods nearby. And so Herman carved his shelter out of the ice and subsisted on the rats which he managed to catch. One day, much to his surprise, his wife Galina and their infant daughter appeared at his door; the pair had made the trek from Krasnoyarsk to Yeniseyk on foot. The family lived together in the igloo for a year.

Finally exonerated in 1955, two years after the death of Stalin, Herman faced a 20 year struggle through the serpentine Soviet bureaucracy to reclaim his American citizenship. In 1976 Victor Herman became the only one of the 300 imprisoned Ford employees to leave the Soviet Union. However, it wasn't until 1979 that his wife and two daughters were allowed to join him in America.

Victor Herman now lives in the Detroit area. He is the author of two books: Coming Out of the Ice, on which the film was based, and Realities: Might and Paradox in Soviet Russia.

There will be no reserve seating at this lecture, but tickets can be obtained in advance at the Office of Student Life CC208.

Academic Resource Center helps improve students' study skills

by Rose M. Ward

"Reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man." Those words written in 1625 by Francis Bacon could well be the theme of the Academic Resources Center (ARC) which opened at Christopher Newport College in the Fall of 1981.

Located in the Basic Studies Department of the Smith Building, ARC looks like a small library. It contains resources such as books on language, scientific works, and books about social responsibility. There is also a large clipping file which Professor Alice Randall, the coordinator of the center, has collected over the years.

The purpose of the Academic Resources Center is to help average students improve their study skills through a planned study program. Professor Randall says that "The average GPA of all students coming to the center is 2.3," and that she feels they are capable of doing better work.

The program provides guidelines for selecting reading and writing material that will help students to progress in their individual field of interest. Professor Randall, as coordinator for ARC, refers students to resources, or to personal contact with an advisor, whichever will best fill their individual and particular need.

In many cases, she instructs the student with resources on hand, but if there is a need to talk to an instructor, department head, or a counselor, Professor Randall will arrange for a conference between the student and the person he/she needs to see. After some time has elapsed in the program, she does a follow-up on each student to measure how effective the process is.

The Academic Resources Center has come a long way in helping students who have taken advantage of the opportunities it offers; yet, there may be those who have not known about ARC and the wealth of information available there, or are not aware of what a storehouse of information is additionally available throughout CNC. For further information, contact Ms. Randall at 599-7043.

Universal City Studios drops E.T. lawsuit against Dr. Millar

Universal City Studios have dropped their lawsuit against Dr. Al Millar of Christopher Newport for his booklet "E.T. - You're More Than A Movie Star." In a statement to the Daily Press, John G. Nuanes, an attorney for the studio, said, "We have come to reasonable terms about the matter."

Dr. Millar has received an enormous amount of mail and phone calls from people requesting copies of the booklet or interviews since word of a threatened lawsuit surfaced in September. The news was released to the Associated Press, and soon the story appeared in publications across the nation. Dr. Millar has also been interviewed by reporters from a German newspaper and a Toronto radio station.

Jonathon Gibson, Dr. Millar's lawyer, responded in the Daily Press to Nuanes' statement, "Who wants to take on the First Amendment, God and country and everybody?"

The lawsuit was dropped after the two lawyers communicated in order to settle the copyright dispute amicably.

House of Delegates candidates to participate in forum

The Honorable Alan Diamonstein (Rep) and Mr. John Sealey, Jr. (D), candidates for the Virginia House of Delegates will participate in a forum on October 20 from noon to 12:50 p.m. in the Campus Center Theatre.

The forum will be moderated by a CNC faculty member who will open the event by outlining the changes from the at-large to single member districts and its meaning to the College. Diamonstein and Sealey will then give a seven-minute talk on their credentials.

Following the talks, Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard Summerville and the Vice President for Financial Affairs James Eagle will pose questions concerning the College to the candidates. Questions from the floor will then follow.

Admission is free to this SA-sponsored forum.

Antigone draws diverse crowd

by Ann Catherine Braxton

On the very special occasion of the Christopher Newport College Theatre Series' presentation of Sophocles' Antigone, the Campus Center Theatre will open its doors not only to college students, members of the faculty, and local theatre-goers, but also to students of area high schools. The cast of Antigone will present this immortal Greek play in its entirety on the mornings of November 4, 5, 11, and 12 to students from Hampton Roads Academy, Trinity Lutheran School, Bruton High School, Peninsula Catholic High School, Kecoughtan High School, Western Branch in Chesapeake, and Great Bridge, Gloucester, Green Run, and Lafayette High Schools.

These morning programs are a joint effort between the Theatre department and the English department and are coordinated by Dr. Bruno Koch and Dr. Jay Paul. The morning performances will be preceded by an introduction giving the play's historical background and followed by a lunch period and a question-and-answer session.

Both professors are very enthusiastic about the project and see it as an excellent opportunity to provide a link between the college and the community. "There is a difference," Dr. Koch explains, "between a community college and a college that serves the community. Ours is a college that serves the community but, unfortunately, many are not aware of our existence. We're trying with these productions to get students to get to know about CNC. It is important that we build a sense of identification for the college."

Last semester the theatre and English departments collaborated on a successful symposium of the Tennessee Williams play The Glass Menagerie. Dr. Paul still recalls how the visiting students were full of questions, and he finds the joint projects between the Theatre and English departments beneficial because "we [the English department] give the students a literary view and the theatre gives the theatrical view."

In addition to its participation in the morning productions of Antigone, the English department, in cooperation with local high school teachers, is sponsoring an essay contest open to Newport News ninth graders. The participants will choose a topic based on one aspect of the play and write on it. The judges of the essay contest will include CNC faculty members and area high school teachers. The best essays will be published in a booklet featuring 30 to 36 of the best compositions.

Dr. Koch, who is directing Antigone, feels that CNC is providing a great service to the local high schools because it provides top-notch educational experiences that the school systems might not otherwise be able to offer. "The schools are really feeling the economic crunch. They cannot always go to Washington or Richmond," he explains.

Both Dr. Koch and Dr. Paul feel that this outreach to the schools will strengthen the bond between the college and the community. As Dr. Paul says, "We're proud of what we have to offer."

The Campus Program Board would like to graciously apologize to the patrons who came to view All The Kings Men and Casablanca. We regret the technical difficulties that interrupted and cancelled each show.

We want to assure you that these technical difficulties will be fixed for the next showing on October 19 of Alfred Hitchcock's thriller Psycho.

We would again like to apologize to anyone who experienced any inconvenience.

New director announced

The Virginia State Ballet announces the appointment of Lynn G. Grimsley as Director of Development and Public Relations.

In announcing the appointment, Frederick W. Boelt, president of VSB, said, "We are most pleased to have someone of Lynn's experience and knowledge accept a position with the Ballet. Her background in fundraising and community arts administration makes her an asset to the Tidewater area."

Mrs. Grimsley recently moved to Newport News from Chattanooga, Tennessee, where she served for six years as Executive Director of Allied Arts of Greater Chattanooga and Chattanooga Arts Council. Prior to her association with Allied Arts, she was administrative assistant to the Mayor of Chattanooga. She has also served as chairman of the Community Development Panel of the Tennessee Arts Commission, was on the Board of Directors of Goodwill Industries, and is listed in Who's Who in American Women. She is married to David S. Grimsley, a native of Hampton.

The Virginia State Ballet is a not-for-profit corporation with studios in Newport News and Williamsburg. In addition to the academies, VSB has a junior company and offers professional ballet to the Tidewater area with a number of performances yearly. VSB is supported in part by the Virginia Commission for the Arts and National Endowment for the Arts and receives grants from the City of Newport News, Williamsburg, and James City County.

Jones bringing good things to CNC

by Vince Kelly

"I have reached my goal," says Chris Jones referring to her new job.

For the past two years Chris Jones has been working towards becoming a certified trainer at the college level. Now, just a few months before she receives her Masters of Science (with emphasis on athletic training) from Old Dominion University, she has become Christopher Newport College's new athletic trainer.

Jones, 27, comes from Darien, Connecticut where she grew up along with her sister and two brothers. "I'm very much like my brothers," says Jones referring to her personality. As for athletics, though, Jones is unique. "My brothers play a little tennis and my sister won't have anything to do with athletics."

So how did someone from such a non-sports minded family get involved in sports? "In my neighborhood the kids my age were all guys, so that's who I played with," says Jones. When she was eight, Jones went to Little League baseball practices with her brother who was trying out for a team. The coach would let her hit and field with the rest of the kids, but she preferred not to play Little League. Instead she chose to play on a girls softball league where she was officially indoctrinated into organized sports. As for her brother, he didn't make the team.

Jones' next step was at Darien High School where she played one year of basketball and softball. Then at Keene State College (New Hampshire), where she received her Bachelor of Science in physical education, Jones played two years of varsity basketball and four years of varsity fast-pitch softball.

In addition to, and perhaps more important than, her training in the sports themselves was Jones' training in the physical (medical) and administrative aspects of athletics. They include

- Volunteer in the Physical Therapy Department at Stamford Hospital in Connecticut. Voted as one of the five top volunteers in the hospital.
- Counselor in charge of girls' athletic programs and teams at Camp Merrimac in New Hampshire.
- Participated in the setup and care of various athletic facilities for Keene Parks and Recreation Department in New Hampshire.
- Physical Fitness instructor responsible for setting up administering fitness programs for both men and women of various ages at Keene Nautilus.
- Head physical fitness instructor at New York Health and Racquet Club in New York City.

From the racquet club Jones went to work for the Exxon Chemical Company in Connecticut where she worked for a year. It was during this time that Jones realized her desire to become a trainer and enrolled in the program at Old Dominion.

The program in athletic training is one of only six in the country and as a student Jones' duties included: "Performing daily treatments to athletes and clinic patients and keeping their records up to date; working at a public athletic injury clinic; rehabilitation of injuries to athletes and clinic patients; helping to develop strength training programs for athletes; head field hockey trainer of 81-82 season." Jones also acted as assistant instructor for some classes pertaining to her field.

One of the goals of the program is to become certified. Certification requires thousands of hours of experience working with a trainer, and the passing of the national exam. However, since ODU's program is certified, Jones only had to have 1200 hours, which she filled at New Canaan High School in Connecticut, and at ODU as an assistant.

Before Jones took the national exam, however, Marty Bradley (Head Trainer at ODU) told her that Christopher Newport was accepting applications for the trainer's position. Jones promptly applied, along with three other students in the program, and was chosen by Bev Vaughan as CNC's new trainer. A few weeks later, Jones took the exam, passed, and on September 14, 1982 officially became CNC's first certified trainer. Jones is also the only certified trainer in the Dixie Conference.

Jones, who describes herself as "easy going," is tough when it comes to a player's health. "If I am sure that a player should not play... he doesn't play. If there is a question about a player, I talk to the team doctor and his decision is final." How has this attitude been accepted by the coaches? "I have received full cooperation from the entire athletic department," says Jones.

The job has already been a learning experience for Jones who says, "There's a big difference between the attitudes here and at ODU. The kids here want to play, and are not here just to play, like those at ODU [referring to their scholarship players]. At ODU we had everything we needed. Here at CNC, since we have little equipment and no staff I've had to learn to work around things."

Chris Jones then, has reached the summit of her aspirations. But it is plain to see that she is just the start of the good things to come here at Christopher Newport.

Sailing Club qualifies

The Christopher Newport College sailing team qualified for the South Atlantic Inter-collegiate Sailing Championships for the first time in their history by placing fourth this Saturday at a regatta at Old Dominion. With finishes of second, fourth and fourth, the team ranked third in the eight-team field after the completion of three points-regattas on three successive weekends. Much credit must be given to Coach Billy Hunt of Hampton for the improvement.

The championships will be held in Charles (Continued on p. 8)

Intensity, style improves in volleyball

by David M. Bean

The Christopher Newport Women's volleyball team has been having some rough going over the last several weeks. In the last 14 days, they have played eight matches, six of which have been on the road. Although Coach Russo's club has yet to taste victory this season, the attitude and enthusiasm levels remain positive.

Russo feels that she has a very emotional squad, whose consistency rides like a roller-coaster. "We're an emotional bunch, and for some reason, we still get very nervous about the first match. It's usually our worst set. However, the second sets are usually our better-played ones."

The statistics reinforce Russo's statement. In the last eight matches, the margin of loss is greater than 12 points. In the second set, the margin of loss is less than 4 points. Despite the fact that CNC is winless, some items do come into mind. First the fact that all of CNC's opponents this season have good-to-strong volleyball programs, and they have been well-established. Second, the Lady Captain's team roster is less than 15 players and several play other sports as well. Miracles do not happen overnight.

Webbs' focus on 18th century VA Beach

by Debbi Benham

Christopher Newport College Doctors Jane and George Webb will give a presentation entitled "Virginia Beach At The Turn Of The Century", on Sunday, October 17, at 3:30 p.m. in the Oceanfront Branch Library in Virginia Beach.

In this presentation, the Webbs focus their attention on life in Virginia Beach in the eighteenth century. They discuss in their lecture the development of the early settlers, the type of transportation they had, and climate development and how it affected the early settlers.

Doctors Jane and George Webb are both physics professors here at CNC. They first became involved with maritime presentations when they wrote their booklet entitled "The Bay: It Makes Us What We Are." Through the booklet, they started giving presentations to colleges and, occasionally, to organizations.

The Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum modeled their thesis after the Webb's booklet.

Their slide presentation is derived from century-old pictures which show people on the beach back in 1904; old casinos and cottages, and women on the sand dunes in their long costumes.

Dr. Jane Webb has expressed a desire to obtain more information and artifacts. Says Dr. Webb, "I would like to collect old pictures from the Tidewater area. I would like to borrow these pictures for the Sailing Association and for our presentations. Anything dealing with water-related activities, e.g. storms in the 1930's, would be much appreciated. We are not asking to be given anything, we just want to make copies to use. We would like to also conduct interviews with ancient sources on stories concerning the beach."

If you are interested in making reservations to see this lecture or would just like to obtain more information, call the Maritime Historical Museum at 422-1587. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Rider's come through with flying colors

Christopher Newport College's Equestrian Club came through with flying colors once more. On October 3 the team had a meet at their home stables. Nine schools attended the competition.

One of the team's members, Mary Ellen Tinsley, was tied with two other riders from different schools for Reserve Champion High Point Rider. That is, she had accumulated the second highest points for the individual riders. All the riders on the team placed high in each of their respective divisions.

The team members compete for points for the team and individually. For the rider in each division who has accumulated the highest points, an award is given and a chance to participate at regionals at the end of the year. From there, those who have placed high at regionals will go to nationals and compete against members from other equestrian teams from all over the United States. We would like to see our members go and represent our college.

If you have a chance, come out and see the team practice at Oakcrest Riding School, or come to one of our meets. The last two for this semester will be at the University of Virginia on November 12 and at Randolph-Macon on November 14. Next semester we will be competing at our home stables (Oakcrest) on March 27. This will give you another chance to see us compete on home ground.

If you are interested, or know of someone who is interested in joining the club either this semester or next, please let us know. New members are always welcome. No experience is necessary, nor is a horse or equipment. Contact Paula Mangus at 898-4644.

Fall Fest proves to be a success

by Kelly Howell

Fun is exactly what Fall Fest turned out to be. For the first time in the past three years, the weather co-operated with the events scheduled. The weather only added to the fun and excitement of the day.

Fall Fest is an annual event sponsored by the Student Association (SA). Each club or organization on campus is invited to sponsor a game or sell some type of food.

This year Fall Fest was held on October 3. Cheri Trestrail, vice president of Student Affairs, was the organizer of the entire event.

The SA sponsored an egg toss and a tug of war game. The SA team won the tug of war game inspite of a great effort by the DU team. The egg toss drew a big response from the crowd. By the way, John McCaughey and Dick Ryther were one of the first to be disqualified with egg all over them.

An added attraction was the dunking booth sponsored by Pi Kappa Sigma. John McCaughey, director of Student Life; Dr. Charles Behymer, vice president of Student Affairs; and even our own Kathy Martin, president of the SA, were seen throughout the day with wet clothes. Towards the end of the day, even President Anderson volunteered to be dunked.

Although fund raising is a primary goal of Fall Fest, this year's seemed to be the most successful in terms of participation and enjoyment.

Many CNC classes are 'SRO'

by Gene Pietrowski

Now that school is back to normal, and the student body is able to find their way around, and the faculty is jumping with plans for a productive year, it seems that the classes are still large. That is, large and productive! Christopher Newport College is a rapidly growing college, and it appears that it won't slow down in the near future.

Since the opening of the college in 1971, each year has seen a growth in the student body. This is the largest enrollment year with 2565.29 full-time students. Next semester is supposed to be even larger. Many students have said that they were accepted at CNC, but like so many others, had trouble finding money to come here.

There are classes with as many as 60 students. Many classes share "standing room only" much of the time - an everyday occurrence here. The cafeteria has people sitting elbow to elbow at times. Professors still have trouble with names. This is not unusual at schools like CNC. CNC is an excellent - one of the best - state supported schools. It has warmth, personality, and a great faculty. It is a proud school.

But should the school grow with the student body? Maybe CNC should expand with new teachers, more classes and more parking? It could really help. I'm proud to be a CNC student, and will continue to be so, large or small classes.

Should there be one graduation?

It has come to the attention of the Student Association that financial restrictions may require that only one graduation ceremony be held per year. However, we as a student body can still voice our opinion on this issue. The Board of Visitors will be addressing and voting on this issue on October 28. Therefore, it is urgent that you fill in this questionnaire and make your opinion known.

All questionnaires can be placed in Room 232 in the Campus Center. Please reply. Your opinion is needed.

- Graduation should be held:
  - ☐ A. off-campus
  - ☐ B. on-campus
  - ☐ C. on the lawn
  - ☐ D. inside
- Graduation speaker should be:
  - ☐ A. community leader
  - ☐ B. local personality
  - ☐ C. faculty or administration member
  - ☐ D. fellow student
- Would you be willing to pay a graduation fee?
  - ☐ Yes
  - ☐ No
- How many graduations do you feel should be held per year?
  - ☐ A. only a winter graduation
  - ☐ B. only a spring graduation ceremony
  - ☐ C. both a spring and winter graduation

Berry/Borsheim, Smith/Lovko set record

by Vince Kelly

Tom Berry and Ronnie Borsheim are quickly becoming household names as they tied for first for the fourth consecutive week, and in doing so set their fourth consecutive course record while leading the Captains to victory this past Saturday.

The final team scores were Christopher Newport College 22, Fayetteville State 38, St. Andrews 75, and Methodist College 110, as the Captains took six out of the top nine spots, and raised their record to 7-1.

Meanwhile, Cindy Smith and Ronnie Lovko tried the B&B (Berry and Borsheim) system as they tied for first and set a new course record while leading the Lady Captains to a 16 to 48 victory over St. Andrews. The Lady Captains took six out of the top seven spots while raising their record to 4-0.

Both teams are in action again this weekend as the men travel to Washington and Lee Saturday for the State Meet at 11 a.m., and the women will compete individually in the Coliseum 10K.

Russo has made some changes on the court, trying to find the right combination. The biggest change was that she relieved Mary Rocky of her captain position and gave it to Vicki Gunn. "We have been having a lot of attitude problems; certain people were getting down on themselves, and so we hope those problems won't happen again."

The intensity and style of play have drastically improved since the team's first matches. The women will play host to St. Andrews Presbyterian tomorrow. The matches will be at 3 and 5 p.m.

ton, South Carolina on the weekend of October 23, and will be sailed in two-person boats similar to the ones used at both the regatta at ODU and the one last weekend at CNC. Eight teams from schools ranging from Northern Florida to Virginia will compete in the two day affair, which is hosted by the College of Charleston. The College of Charleston has one of the strongest teams in the country.

The CNC team shows good balance. The "B" team, made up of Jim Miller, Cathy Miller, Robert Reid and Tim Kelly sailed exceptionally well this past weekend at ODU. The four had practiced special tacking and starting techniques during the week, and these paid off in the medium winds of the regatta. Reid did especially well in the Laser, a single-handed boat, when he matched ODU's excellent racer Alan Kilgore in their head-to-head battle.

The "A" team, led by Randy Webb, turned in an outstanding performance in CNC's Euclid Hanbury Regatta the previous weekend. Webb took first place in all of the races for two-person boats, ably assisted by his crew, Cathy Miller. He also took three seconds and a fourth in the single-handed races. CNC was just three points out of first place before the protests were heard. CNC finished a close fourth when corrections were added because of the protests. ODU was first, UVA was second, and the University of North Carolina was third in the eight-team race.

This Saturday the team again returns to ODU's new facility on the Elizabeth River to compete in the South Atlantic Single-Handed Championships.

For further information on the CNC Sailing team, contact Cathy Miller, 596-0247.

Each Wednesday in October at noon, the Center will also feature a special presentation by an aerospace worker. The dates and speakers are October 6 - Electrical Engineer Thomas Campbell; October 13 - Technician Sharon Crockett; October 20 - Materials Engineer Robert Baucom and October 27 - Aerospace Engineer Vicki Johnson. Ms. Johnson's talk will focus on NASA's College Co-Op program.

A number of related film and video presentations in addition to those scheduled will be featured during October.
