After $27,000 loss, Santoro remodels his CNC estate

by Joe Nuesslein
staff writer

President Anthony Santoro's home was remodeled and improved over the summer. For the driveway alone the cost to the taxpayer was over $21,000. At press time an accurate estimate of the home remodeling was unavailable. According to Santoro the cost of the driveway was available to him due to it going out on bid. He is not sure of the final cost of the home remodeling.

Joann Barbour, head of public relations at Christopher Newport College, had no comment on the project. Vice President Jim Eagle, head of Financial Affairs at CNC would not return calls or set up an interview when asked to comment on the improvements or where the money came from. However Santoro was quick to add the funds came from the building maintenance and repair budget.

Allegations were put forth that projects on campus were slow due to state employees working on the house instead of doing their normal routines. Santoro commented that workers have only been at the house that week and it had no effect on campus work. The Captain's Log discovered that the work has been going on for 3 to 4 weeks. According to a state employee that works for CNC and who would only talk if his name was not mentioned, out of fear that his job might be jeopardized said, "I feel that my work is getting behind, I haven't been able to get around and do the things I really need to be doing." President Santoro claims the improvements such as turning the attic into a bedroom with a full bath, will save the college money in the long run by housing guests at the house instead of hotel rooms.

Santoro also claims the driveway price tag is due to, "The 200 feet of six inch pipe that goes under the driveway to drain the water that was threatening the house. The driveway was built to help alleviate the parking problem that guests coming to the house created." He also said that the house and the driveway were not built to accommodate large groups of people.

"People are quick to forget that I do not own the house, the improvements are made on state property. I had to sell a house in Maine and as part of my employment as president of the college I have to live in the residence. Therefore by not buying another house I lost $27,000 when I had to write a check for taxes. I'm not complaining about my living in the house, but as far as I'm concerned it's 27-0 in my favor."

VIEWPOINTS

To the Editor,

I am really getting tired of all this "Election Mania". Why is everyone getting riled up by the presidential election coming up? We all know who is going to win. The United States is a country that does not like surprises, we like to know what we are getting when we pick a president. In George Bush we know that we will get more Reaganomics with, of course, some more political corruption and deceit. With a political agenda like that, why vote for someone like Michael Dukakis who will probably be honest and change America for the better?

Sexual activity no barrier in retaining virginous state

by Tom Gibson
opinions editor

Warning: The following article may be offensive to some, titillating to others, but hopefully, humorous to most.

You can have sex and still remain a virgin, that is, assuming that you are one.

That's quite a bold statement you might say.

Well, yes it is, and it's true. (At least, my extensive research has led me, and some others, to come to this conclusion and have the courage to reveal it.)

Now, granted, this method doesn't work once you've lost it; it won't help you get it back. But if you've still got it, you can keep it.

STOP! Now, if you've read the warning above and believe yourself to be one of the offending types, then please turn back now. I take no further responsibility.

According to Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, a virgin is "a person who has not had sexual intercourse."

Sexual intercourse in the same source is described as "heterosexual intercourse involving penetration of the vagina by the penis."

Here's the tricky part, so pay attention.

If a man is wearing a condom during sex (with a woman), he is, in the theory, not having sex with the woman.

Now you may ask: "How is this, Tom?"

Well, I'll explain. If a condom is on the penis, then it never comes in contact with the vagina.

"Ah," you say. "But the penis is inside the condom, and it, in turn, is in the vagina. So, therefore, penetration has taken place."

That sounds right, but no. Can we say positively that it made penetration?

If a condom is worn, the penis is, in all respects, in disguise. It's like a robber with a stocking over his face. You know he's there, but you don't know what he looks like. It is the same principle: you know the penis is there, but it could be any one of many specialized battery-operated-devices for all the vagina knows.

The vagina doesn't know there is a man out there.

This is my evidence, and I'm sticking to it.

Some people don't like new ideas such as this, but without them, where would our country be?

It would be in a very sad state. But I don't ask that you believe my findings. (No one believed Galileo when he said the earth revolved around the sun.) simply that you think them over, try them out, see what you think and get back to me. I'd like to know if I'm on the right track here or not.

Paula was named to the second team All Dixie Conference, the only CNC player to earn a spot. She leads the team in setting assists, and is 8th in the conference.

Soccer to end
this Saturday

With one game remaining, the CNC soccer team will definitely finish with no less than a .50 season. This will be the team's sixth consecutive winning season.

The Captains stomped Hampden-Sydney, 5-1. Three of the goals came from Junior Carter, his first hat trick. The last of the three was his 30th goal which ties him for first in CNC career scoring. John Fitzgerald and Jon Schwartzman each added one goal.

Saturday, Longwood took advantage of several CNC errors to walk away with a 4-0 win. Longwood is currently ranked 8th in the nation for Division II schools.

Congratulations to several CNC players who made the DIAC All-Conference teams. First team: John Fitzgerald and Eric Pyle. Second team: Allan Livingstone.

Runner earns honors

Maura McColgan earned All Mason Dixon Conference honors and set a CNC record as CNC hosted the Mason Dixon Cross Country Championships.

McColgan finished 13th with a time of 18:42, taking one second off the record previously set by Karen Humphrey.

The men's team had a poor day finishing last out of eight teams.

Sailing takes 2nd

CNC finished second in the MAISA Sloop Championships, missing a chance to compete in nationals by two points.

Number one, ODU won with 23, CNC 25, Navy 26, and U.S. Merchant Marine Academy finished fourth.

In Area C Dinghy Elims, CNC also finished second, behind Navy and ahead of ODU.

Soviet refusnik campaigns in America

by Kimberly Rodriguez
staff writer

On Thursday, October 20, 7:30 pm, Soviet Refusnik Natasha Khassin appeared in the Anderson Auditorium on Christopher Newport College Campus to speak of her fascinating life of encounters with the KGB and many popular fellow refusnik leaders.

Khassin was born on August 20, 1942 in Moscow. She attended Moscow State University and in 1965 received her Masters degree in Mathematics. She then worked as a computer programmer until her second daughter, Yehudith, was born in 1977 and then became a housewife and mother.

In August of 1977, Khassin and her husband, Gennady, who also received his Ph.D. from Moscow State University in 1963, applied for emigration and were refused by the OVIR in March 1977 because of "state secrets" they may know of. At the time of the Khassins' refusal, Gennady's mother was granted permission to emigrate. She left for Israel with the promise of OVIR that her son and his family would soon follow. This promise was broken and Gennady's mother died from depression and fear for her family.

During this time the Khassins, especially Natasha, devoted their time to various Soviet refusniks. She worked with popular leaders such as Ida Nudel, who took care of prisoners; Dina Beilin, who helped people with the emigration regulations; and Natan Sharansky, who worked with the press. Since 1978, these leaders were either put in prison as Prisoners of Conscience or given permission to emigrate.

According to a friend of Khassin's, Leonid Sharansky, "Natasha Khassin has done all of this alone because everyone else was afraid." Among this never-ending list of courageous accomplishments, Khassin achieved since 1978, following are a few more attained from the Congressional Lobby Briefing.

Supplied advice and aid to Prisoners of Conscience, liaison to the press. Became a legal expert on regulations concerning OVIR and emigration and on questions of political crimes. Became overseer of all activity since 1978 and virtually the only one involved in dangerous days of 1978-1983. Permits anyone with problems, prisoners' families, refusniks from out of town, etc. to stay in her small apartment.

According to an appeal for Khassin's release from former prisoners and their families, it is written that "Natasha even permitted correspondents to call their bureaus from her home using her telephone, a very dangerous thing to do."

Her home was the center of publicity in Moscow. For example, last spring former prisoner of conscience, Lev Elbert and his wife carried out a 45-day hunger strike in Khassin's apartment. The strike was effective and the Elberts were released. The consequence would have been imprisonment by the KGB for Khassin if the Elberts had died because she would have been an accomplice in their deaths.

The appeal also states that "These are only a few examples of Natasha's extraordinary bravery, brilliant expertise and great dedication; we could go on forever. She is unique in sustaining this level of activity and risk for 10 years."

The results of all her continuous effort is the hatred towards her by the KGB. They had consistently tried to intimidate and terrorize her in hopes of terminating her movement. When she refused to stop, she was threatened by imprisonment and then murder. According to the appeal, in March 1986 the KGB told her "You will never leave until 2000 or until you are traded on that bridge like your friend Sharansky," whom she helped release earlier.

The main reason for the Khassins' refusal to emigrate is supported because of "state secrets". But it was proven and stated in the Congressional Lobby Briefing that their work had "no such applications" to obtain any type of "state secrets. The real reason for their refusal is revenge. She more than anyone else has resisted the KGB in their efforts to isolate and crush prisoners and the Aliyah movement in general."

In April 1988, the Campaign on Natasha's behalf was brought to the highest diplomatic and governmental levels. After 10 years, she and her family were finally released to emigrate to Israel, where they now reside in Jerusalem.

She is now touring the United States to appeal for other refusniks who are experiencing the same problems as she had. She was brought to the United States from Israel by Congregation Etz Haim of Lombard, IL and Congregation B'nai Israel of Rumson, NJ in cooperation with the Long Island committee for Soviet Jewry and the Union of Councils for Soviet Jews.

She began her one month campaign in Washington, D.C. and is now touring nine cities campaigning for Soviet refusniks release.

Viktor Fulmakt, a veteran activist, was quoted by saying, "We have only one real man in the Aliyah movement, and he is Khassin."

Honors Council approves plan

Before Susan McLaurin became a Christopher Newport Scholar this summer, she could not incorporate enough business courses in her art major to meet her goal—to open a gallery one day.

With the guidance of her advisor, Professor Jon Petruchyk, McLaurin fashioned an individualized curriculum and received the Honors Council's approval.

Now she can count Market Management (BUSN 450) and Market Theory & Analysis (BUSN 311) as well as courses in Crafts (FNAR 389), Sculpture (FNAR 352), and Etching (FNAR 395NTP) toward her major. In addition, she is exempt from other remaining curricular requirements.

She joins two other current students—Bonnie Daniel and Carol Newman—as Christopher Newport Scholars, a program designed for mature students who have proven their academic excellence.

To apply, one must submit a proposal to the Honors Council, making sure to distinguish his or her aims from those served by existing majors.

To be eligible, one must have a gpa of at least 3.5 and have earned about 75 hours. See page 133 of the current Catalog for more information.

Contact Dr. Jay Paul, McMurrin 206, for assistance in preparing a proposal.

Report says some campus insurance discriminatory

(CPS) — Students around the country soon may pay as much as 30 percent more for their campus health insurance, or may not be able to get health insurance at all, because some colleges are violating federal discrimination laws.

The U.S. Dept. of Education's Office of Civil Rights (OCR) last week sent letters to the presidents of 3,300 campuses, informing them their student health insurance plans may violate federal sex discrimination laws.

The reason, OCR spokesman Garry Curran said, is that, under most college plans, women end up paying more for health insurance than men because they pay extra for maternity care or because campuses don't offer maternity care.

More than 1,100 students have complained about the situation formally to the OCR, Curran said.

At issue is a law — Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 — which forbids campuses that get federal funds to discriminate on the basis of gender.

"Many colleges and insurers are not aware of their legal requirements under Title IX," said Jeanette Lim, chief of OCR's postsecondary education branch, at a September conference on the issue.

"Many student health insurance policies either include maternity care or offer maternity care at an increased premium," the letter to college presidents stated. "Both provisions treat pregnancy different from other temporary disabilities, and violate the Title IX regulation.

"Pregnancy, childbirth, false pregnancy, termination of pregnancy (excluding abortion) and recovery therefrom must be treated in the same manner and under the same policies as any other temporary disability," the letter continued.

Lim emphasized that Title IX does not require schools to offer insurance to their students, but, if they do, they must offer the same plan to everyone at the same cost.

Educators and insurers at the conference predicted the letter could spark big changes for students.

Stephen Blom, executive director of the American College Health Association, estimated that insurance premiums could rise as much as 30 percent when pregnancy benefits are added.

Some schools, he added, may just eliminate their insurance plans rather than expanding them to comply with Title IX.

"A very small percentage have," said Curran. "Maybe 2 percent of those we've received complaints about have dropped their insurance. The rest have changed their plans to comply."

"We've had many, many violations corrected," Lim said.

Not all schools will have to comply with the insurance requirements, however. Title IX and the Civil Rights Restoration Act allow religious colleges to be exempt if the sex discrimination rules conflict with their religious beliefs.

Such schools could object to providing health insurance coverage for unmarried pregnant women, Lim said.

Also, the "abortion neutral" amendment of the Civil Rights Restoration Act and Title IX neither requires nor prohibits schools from covering abortion in their insurance plans.

Procrastination Hurts

Editor's note: This is the third of a five-part series by Robert J. Kriegel, Ph.D., best selling author, former All-American athlete, and mental coach for many Olympic and world class athletes. Kriegel gives speeches and does consulting for major corporations worldwide on peak performance, leadership and strategies for dealing with change. Currently, Kriegel is on a national tour of college campuses sponsored by the makers of Nuprin Pain Reliever.

To remind you how to be a peak performance thinker, Kriegel and the makers of Nuprin have developed a "pocket coach" of tips for combating pressure and pain. For a free copy of the Nuprin Relief Guide, write to Nuprin, P.O. Box 14160, Baltimore, MD 21268.

by Robert J. Kriegel, Ph.D.

Have you ever felt that you can't possibly read four chapters, study for that philosophy test, write that paper, make dinner and call your girlfriend all in one night? Then instead of doing all the things you know you should, do you just turn on the stereo and avoid them all? Yes? You're among the majority.

Procrastination occurs when you think you have too much to do or when you imagine something is going to be too difficult or distasteful.

The "can'ts (I can't do all that...) overwhelm us so that we do nothing but procrastinate.

If you are like most college students today, you feel increasingly overwhelmed. In fact, the Nuprin Pain Report, the first national study on pain in America, documented that more people 18-24 suffer from stress and pain than any older age group.

A skier with the can'ts looks down a steep, icy slope and is paralyzed. "I can't ski this," he thinks.

The trick for the skier is to find a "can do" — a first turn he can make. Once he successfully completes the first turn he can look to the next and the next. Each time he successfully makes a turn he gains a sense of accomplishment and builds confidence in himself and his skiing ability.

The solution for the can'ts sounds pretty simple, and it is. Big projects are made up of lots of small, doable steps.

I developed the can'ts right after signing the contract for my first book: 65,000 words. I couldn't get started. I kept putting it off, overwhelmed by the size of the task, just like I used to do in college when I had a big paper to write.

Can do thinking and the positive actions that follow increase your confidence and composure and maximize your effectiveness. Pretty soon you're on a roll.

Ten months later the book was finished.

Overcome procrastination by remembering to turn the can'ts into can dos. Ask yourself, "What can I do now?" And be sure that the direction you're moving in leads to your ultimate goal.

Luckily I remembered my own advice: to look for a can do. I can write the outline — did it. I can write bullets for each chapter — did it. I can write an introduction — did it.

Department and Professor of the Week

by Renee Hamilton
staff writer

With the presidential election only five days away, it seems fitting that this week's "Professor of the Week" is Dr. William Winter, chairman of the Political Science department at Christopher Newport College.

Winter has been teaching political science at the college for the past 18 years. In that time, he has seen many changes and much growth in the department. The number of political science instructors has doubled since 1970 in order to meet the demands of a steadily increasing number of political science majors.

There are currently 181 CNC students majoring in political science and although that is not the record high, Dr. Winter said, "Overall, the department is definitely growing."

A graduate of SUNY College in Brockport, New York, Winter received his M.A. and Ph.D. from American University in Washington, D.C. Because he was teaching at CNC when he started working on his Ph.D. at American, Dr. Winter commuted 3½ hours each way, sometimes twice a week, until he finished his Ph.D. in 1976.

One of Winter's areas of special interest and study is that of regional government. He is currently doing research for the National Association of Counties, an organization that studies the many facets of local government. He is very active in a metropolitan studies group here on the Peninsula and is also working on a political science textbook in which he will analyze many regional government issues.

Due to his special interest in this area, Winter is particularly excited about the construction of the quarter-million-dollar political science research center at CNC for which plans are currently being made. The center should be completed within two years and will be the area's leading political science research center. "The Joseph Center will not only benefit the college, it will benefit the entire community," said Winter.

In addition to his chairmanship, Winter also holds another position at CNC. He is this year's president of the Faculty Senate. He presides over the meetings at which school policies and faculty matters are decided. Between the two positions, Winter has time to teach only two classes. "Much of my time now is spent doing paperwork - it's part of being a department chairman," he said.

In his spare time, Winter enjoys sailing. Hanging in his office is a beautifully cross-stitched picture, given to him by a student, of his 27-foot sailboat. Winter said he usually sails out of the York River and occasionally does some racing.

In regards to the current political campaign, Winter seems to share the sentiments of many Americans. He said, "This is one of the worst presidential campaigns I've ever observed." He, too, feels that the candidates' personal lives, and not the political issues, highlight this year's campaign.

A special topic in political science will be taught in the spring. A timely response to what Dr. Winter terms a "sleazy political campaign," the course, POLS 395: "Ethics in Politics and Government," will examine the use and abuse of ethical principles in politics and government. Dr. Winter hopes the course will attract students from many different disciplines.

It has been around since 1968, but the political science department has grown into what is perhaps the most fascinating and unique academic departments at Christopher Newport College. "I don't know of any other political science department in the United States like ours," said Department Chairman Dr. William Winter.

The political science department at CNC differs from other schools' around the country in that it is much more progressive and much less traditional.

The traditional B.S. in governmental administration is part of what the political science department offers, but only 50 percent of the 181 majors are taking this route. The other half have opted for a more unique course.

CNC offers a B.A. in governmental administration with an emphasis in one of five areas: International Relations, Criminal Justice, Urban Planning, Public Management or Pre-Law. The department also offers a geography emphasis or minor. "The Bachelor of Arts degree in political science enables students to maximize personal goals and to participate effectively in society's political process," said Dr. Winter.

This year, the political science department has, as part of its full-time staff, an expert in the field of Latin American Studies, Rodrigo Carazo. A native Costa Rican, Carazo gives first-hand analyses of world politics in such courses as "Problems and Issues of World Politics", and "Latin American Politics", both of which will be taught in the spring.

Carazo has a wealth of knowledge in the field of international government based on his extensive research of the subject as well as his experience in the field.

This may be Carazo's last year at CNC, so Dr. Winter urges students to enroll in one of his spring courses. "Rodrigo Carazo is one of the most cosmopolitan instructors here at CNC," said Dr. Winter, adding, "I'd like to see as many students as possible get to know him."

TO: THE BROTHERS OF SIGMA TAU GAMMA,

To DOUG who's been like one of us, you're such a dancin' man, this is from the dorm patrol Stay off of my trash can!!!

To SCOTT H. the very precious one, you've never done us harm, we just wrote to tell you Turn off your car alarm!!!

To JON who's such a sweetheart, we hope you call us up, the next time you get the urge, to be roasted like a nut!!!

To TOM who is so fatherly, your whipped cream is where it's at, even after you graduate, you'll be our P. Pussy Cat!!!

To SPOOGE the loud obnoxious one, we ask you to make a deal, the next time you try to climb a cliff wear a jock strap made of steel!!!

To SCOTT C. who lets us party in his apartment every night, "Are you still paying for that $55 sweatshirt?!!!"

To all the brothers in Sig Tau we want you all to know, you guys are very special friends and always will be so.

In our hearts there'll always be a very special place, for each and every one of you who's seen us three s...t faced!!!

TO: THE LAMBDA PLEDGE CLASS OF SIGMA TAU GAMMA,
We know you've only just begun to learn of brotherhood, And in the next few months to come it will be understood, What Sigma Tau is all about and how it came to be, That brothers make the best of friends for all eternity, And don't forget your little sisters, (though we have lost our name as such), For we'll stand by you always 'cause we love you all so much, When the big night comes that you will be initiated, We hope that all of you will say "Hey you guys, WE MADE IT!", The time has come for this to end so we leave you with one wish, HEY YOU PARTY BEECHES, DON'T FALL OFF THE CLIFF!

Dona S., Your eyes and smile make me melt on the inside: But on the outside I disguise my feelings. How can I tell you how I feel? SHY GUY

AMA presents speech on organizational leadership

Knock Knock.
Whose there?
Group.
Group who?

Group together to hear Grace Stuckey, on Wednesday, November 9 at noon, in the back of Christopher's.

As feature speaker for the American Marketing Association on November 9, Studkey's talk will focus on group dynamics and interaction. This topic is beneficial to students just entering college as well as those getting ready to enter their career field.

Also included will be helpful tips for club and organization officers and for emerging group leaders. "It is important to understand purpose of the the group and for a group leader to be clear about his or her role in a group. If the leader is unclear, leadership function will be lost and the group will become diffused," explains Stuckey.

Stuckey, in her fifth year at Christopher Newport College is currently assistant professor of Sociology, and Director of Field Education for Social Work.

She also does counseling for a private firm, working with families and children.

Before coming to CNC she worked at Norfolk State University in the Graduate Social Work program. She received her Bachelors degree from University of New Haven and her Masters in Social Work from Simmons College.

Don't knock this opportunity. See you November 9 at noon. Bring your lunch. Dessert and coffee will be provided.

Cruise Lines International Recruiting

Cruise Lines International offers employment information and job listings on over 40 cruise ship lines. Companies are recruiting NOW to fill positions available for the winter, spring and next summer. This unique employment opportunity offers above average wages and lots of fun. Although designed to suit the individual with short-term plans, the positions can advance into a full-time career.

The cruise ship companies will pay for ALL interview expenses, room & board, laundry, medical coverage and on-board training.

Staff members are encouraged to interact with passengers and may enjoy the ship's nightlife, which includes clubs, casinos and shows. Employees also benefit from the opportunity to enjoy duty-free shopping sightseeing in foreign ports. Friends and family will also benefit from reduced fares aboard the cruise ships.

According to Mr. Patrick Kennedy of Cruise Lines International, "These jobs offer people of all ages the chance to earn above average wages in an exciting environment which provides the opportunity to travel to exotic locals and realize the experiences that most people only dare to dream about."

Positions offered include: Barbers, Beauticians, Manicurist, Gift Shop Personnel, Assistant Cruise Directors, Athletic Program Directors, Casino Dealers, Casino Cashiers, Lifeguards, Entertainers, Musicians, Food Service, Deck Hands, Accounting Department Employees, Bartenders, Waiters and Waitresses, Photographers, Computer Operators and more.
