Dogs, cats prohibited in college buildings

Sherman L. Skillman, Supervisor of Buildings and Grounds, stated that, "Dogs, cats and other animals, except those animals authorized for laboratory or research purposes are prohibited in all College buildings, offices, and classrooms." Such violations of Campus rules will be cause for "removal from the campus and impoundment by the city of Newport News," Skillman said.

While it is discouraged that such animals be brought onto the campus, they will be permitted so long as they are accompanied by, and under the immediate control of an attendant, he said. Skillman said, "Animals found unattended, including those found tied or lashed to trees, poles or other objects on campus will be subject to removal and impoundment."

He concluded that, "The owner of an animal processed under this policy will be responsible for all civil litigation, fines, fees and/or quarantine associated with said animal."

Free tutoring program discontinued by Counseling Center

Due to the lack of funding the free tutoring program maintained by the Counseling Center has been suspended. The Center will continue to provide students in need of tutoring with the names of qualified tutors. Students will be responsible for making their own financial arrangements with their tutors. Veterans are eligible for free tutoring and should contact the Veterans Affairs office on campus for more information.

Wilson wins Rock Creek Classic

David Wilson, a year old CNC Junior, won the Rock Creek Road Classic in Washington D.C., on Sunday, September 12th.

A Sociology major, Wilson finished first in the 28 mile bicycle road race leading the peloton during each climb over the mile long hill on the 7 mile circuit.

David accepted $100 in prizes provided by the Mel Pinto Cycle Shop of Washington D.C.

The United States Cycling Federation sanctioned race verified 60 entrants, 10 dropped out after the first lap, unable to match Wilson's attack. In the last lap, David led a 3 man break-away over the crest of the mile long hill. At the bottom the cyclists hit a 120 degree turn opening into a straightaway. Here the leaders jockeyed for position in the last 500 yards. David's sprint gave him the first place title!

The National Capitol Velo Club hosted the event. Their riders placed 2nd and 3rd.

The bicycle racer trains year round in any weather. Dave logs 350-450 miles a week during the racing season. He wears the Tidewater Bicycling Association of Norfolk team jersey in competition.

VA home loan guaranty program booms

Activity in the Veterans Administration's home loan guaranty program during fiscal year 1976 was the second highest since the peak years of the mid-1960's, the agency has reported.

VA Regional Office in Roanoke said that more than 617,800 appraisal requests were received during the 12-month reporting period, the fifth highest total in the program's 32-year history. The 178,096 requests received during the fourth quarter of FY 1976 was the highest quarterly figure since the final three months of FY 1972.

Loan applications were up 12 percent over the previous year, the nearly 379,000 applications representing the program's sixth highest fiscal year total. The 39,970 home loan applications in June was the highest monthly total since August 1972.

More than 9.3 million veterans have borrowed $122.9 billion under the VA Loan Guaranty program since it was established in 1944. The guaranty is a substitute for investment protection sought by lenders through substantial downpayments and shorter terms in making conventional mortgage loans.

There is no limitation on the amount of a loan eligible for guaranty, except that for home loans the amount of the loan may not exceed the reasonable value of the property as established by the VA. Also, there is no VA requirement for a down payment if the purchase price cost does not exceed the reasonable value, but the lender may require one. However, if the purchase price or cost is more than the reasonable value as determined by the VA, the difference must always be paid in cash from the veteran's own resources. The VA guarantees part of the veteran's loan, up to 60 per cent or a maximum of $17,500. of $17,500.

Enactment of the Veterans Housing Act of 1976 on July 1 increased the guarantee on mobile home loans to 50 percent of the loan amount. Unchanged was the maximum loan amount of $12,500 for a single-wide unit and $20,000 for a double-wide unit.

The high level of home loan activity has been spurred by a series of legislative changes since 1970, aimed at liberalizing eligibility requirements. The Veterans Housing Act of 1970 removed the delimiting date on VA home loans. Another law, enacted in 1974, made it possible for veterans who have used their loan to regain entitlement, provided the veteran has disposed of the property and the VA is relieved of its guaranty. Requests for restoration of entitlement soared to 16,832 in FY 1976 from 7,213 in the previous year.

Entitlement also may be restored if another credit-worthy veteran assumes the balance on the VA loan and substitutes his own entitlement. Approval was granted 2,639 of 2,902 requests for substitution of entitlement received in FY 1976.

The 1976 legislation extended home loan eligibility for the first time to veterans whose only active duty occurred after July 25, 1947, and prior to June 27, 1950. Effective October 1, and estimated 250,000 peacetime veterans will become eligible for VA home loans.

Other new eligibles will be unmarried surviving spouses of veterans who served during this time, if the veteran died while on active duty during this period of as a result of service-connected disability. They join similar spouses of veterans with other service dates since World War II. Spouses of active-duty military members who are listed as missing in action also are eligible for VA home loan benefits.

Abortion - Pro or Con

At this time last year, the abortion issue was all but dead. Any woman who could afford the price could have an abortion. The greatest feature in the offering was that it was no longer necessary to go through the "cloak and dagger" bit, the woman could go to her family physician, to a health clinic for referral, or to the local abortion clinic. Any of these three alternatives would assure her of competent medical service and advice.

It is no longer quiet "on the Western front," cries of "Baby killers," "genocide," and many others are rising from that vast minority who feel that they have the right to decide what is good, or bad for the vaster silent majority. One must admit, however, that they have chosen a good time for the resurrection of their attempts to use the democratic process to deprive American womanhood, and manhood for that matter, of the right to choose between alternative actions. In this election year, the issue has become a political one. Presidential Candidate Jimmy Carter says he feels that abortion is morally wrong. Ford favors giving the states the right to decide to outlaw abortion if they wish.

Let's digress for a moment. What is really being said? Does not our constitution guarantee us freedom of choice? Is it not also true that in 1973, the Supreme Court struck down state laws prohibiting abortion, thus providing an alternative for those who wished to take it? Do you feel, as I do, that the question of abortion is one that concerns the woman, her doctor, and husband (if there is one)?

Being neither for nor against abortion, I look upon the issue as one of providing alternative solutions for an otherwise delicate situation. For those families in the middle class and up, abortion has never been a problem, the family doctor would usually take care of the "problems" and call it by another name. However, for the lower income families, those who could least afford another child, there was no escape. The results; larger black, poor white, Puerto Rican, Mexican-American, Italian, Indian, etc., etc., families. Families which more often than not, ended up being supported by public service organizations - which, by the way, are supported by your tax dollars.

To argue the morality of the question of abortion is of little use, ultimately, it is a matter of conscience for those who wish to avail themselves. The overriding question is, "Does a person have the right to say to another person what is right or wrong for him, when to do so would deprive that person of the rights guaranteed under the Constitution?"

You must answer this question for yourselves.

Serving students, first priority

Editor:

I have carefully read the editorial, "Your help is needed, get into the action," which appeared in the September 13 issue of The Captain's Log, and readily concur with the author's criticism of apathy. However, I cannot share his observations of the "usual bedlam resulting from the Registrar's Office confusing classes and room schedules" during the first week of the fall semester. Of course, conflicts are bound to happen, but not so frequently as the word "usual" in this article might imply; moreover, when conflicts do occur, we make every attempt to resolve them as quickly and as smoothly as possible.

Certainly, we experienced a classroom shortage this semester, which necessitated some changes in the schedule; however, notices of such changes were posted on the door of each classroom and on the front of every building on campus. Therefore, those instances in which "there were 3 classes in the same room at the same hour" were likely the result of someone's failure to read rather than the result of ineffective communication on the part of the Registrar's Office.

I assure you that serving the students of Christopher Newport College is our pleasure and our first priority, and that their perceptions of us are very important; it is for this reason that our staff had no alternative but to attempt to clarify what was, I believe, a misrepresentation. Otherwise, we would be guilty of the apathy to which the writer of this article is so obviously opposed.

What the pros think and then some: The Ladd-Lipset Survey

(CPS)—College professors—even that tweedy character who drones on about survey method in statistics class—have themselves been pushed under the relentless microscope of the social scientist and have emerged looking liberal, but not radical; satisfied, but not complacent; smart, but not “intellectual;” and in general, scrutinized to the hilt in a massive survey that asked the nation's profs everything except the color of the band around their jockey shorts.

Indeed, most of the country's college professors do, or at least could, wear jockey shorts. The survey, conducted by Everett C. Ladd and Seymour M. Lipset, found that although women constitute 21 percent of all faculty members, “women as a group occupy very much the same status as they did in 1969,” (the date of the last big survey.)

Moreover, the survey, which ran in weekly installments for the past eight months in The Chronicle of Higher Education, discovered that despite the rampant liberalism found among faculty members, male members of college staffs “are relatively insensitive to female issues.”

Among what seems like a million other tidbits, the survey also turned up the fact that professors disdain the oft-applied monicker of “intellectual” and prefer instead “teacher” or “professional.” The survey also found that professors like to cuddle up with Time, Newsweek or The New York Times for periodical reading matter (only seven percent read Playboy), over half attend a concert once a year, nearly half never or rarely attend church, and owners of G.M. cars go to more frequently to sporting events than do owners of foreign cars. (Foreign car owners tend to be more liberal than profs who drive domestic brands, the survey reported.)

On the serious side, the Ladd-Lipset survey found that the “vast majority” of professors disagreed with the idea of putting a ban on research dealing with the genetic bases of differences in intelligence, a sizzling campus topic for the past several years. When it comes to college cutbacks, another hot campus issue, 40 percent of all professors feel that student-related activities should be the last to be axed, according to the survey. Three in five respondents said that funds earmarked for teaching programs, libraries and laboratories should stay at all costs and that funds for sports and research programs be first considered for reduction when the fiscal crunch arrives.

Profs are overwhelmingly content with their calling, Ladd and Lipset found, with only two percent saying they were sure they would not take up the academic life if they had it to do all over again. However, 30 percent replied they would be happier at another school.

These findings are only the tiniest tip of a statistical iceberg that ran in 35 weekly articles four times the length of this one complete with graphs and charts. In addition to publishing the responses to the survey's questions, Ladd and Lipset also break down the answers in dozens of different ways, comparing the professors' views with several different sub-groupings, including the American public.

For example, the survey found that 47 percent of the professors favor bussing to promote racial integration while pointing out that only 21 percent of the rest of the country would go for such a move. Among Americans with college degrees, however, Ladd and Lipset show that 45 percent think marijuana should be legal but among unskilled workers, the figure falls to 16 percent.

Ladd and Lipset spend much time on the political leanings of the professors, not surprising given Lipset's long time interest in American voting behavior and such related topics. Professors are overwhelmingly liberal, the two discovered, much more so than any other category of Americans. Professors are also much more politically active than their fellow citizens but few of them extend their activity to radical politics, despite considerable public sentiment to the contrary.

While most link the Watergate scandal to serious failings in the political order and only 12 percent identify themselves as Republicans, only three percent feel the political system is failing badly and that the use of violence is justified to achieve political ends. Only one-sixth offer what Ladd and Lipset call a “coherently radical criticism of the country's economic arrangements.”

“The elderly matron who fears she must hide her democratic silver because a professor is lurking nearby can be reassured,” the pair write.

Otherwise, professors are heavily in favor of detente with the Russians, only half are worried about Russia reaching military parity with the U.S. and 75 percent think the U.S. spends too much for defense. Like the rest of the American public, professors are growing more isolationists, Ladd and Lipset report.

The survey was financed by grants from three institutions and culled by grants from computers at the University of Connecticut, where Ladd heads the Social Science Data Center. Lipset is presently teaching at Stanford. A spokesman at the Chronicle said he didn't know how much the whole project cost, but added the survey sparked “a lot of reaction, even if its findings are not surprising.”

Never a dull moment at Washington school

(CPS)--If bells don't chime and dynamite doesn't explode during your lecture classes, A. Teller can give you what you've been waiting for. Teller claims that he never had a dull moment. He has been completely happy with, his work at Fall City Wash. offers students a chance to hone their skill with dynamite until each explosion becomes a masterpiece of style.

When in the field with students, Teller stands back quietly to watch. No suggestions are given, he says, because, "Each blaster develops his own style, and I'm not going to impose my style on them."

But before they reach the field, students are drilled in explosives, geology, engineering and mechanics. They've also put up $850 for four weeks of instruction, been sponsored by a company and met with Teller's approval.

Teller's own humble beginnings in blasting were with the Army. Later in Hawaii his interest was revived in the discipline when he was "starving to death and somebody asked me to blow up a stump."

He claims to apply the same critical eye to students, demanding, "I want thinkers and planners. I don't want someone coming out saying they want to powder men."

Campus tennis courts near completion

The final touch to an ever improving Christopher Newport tennis program will unveil the week of September 20th with the completion of the campus tennis facility. The new complex will be six layhold courts located behind Ratcliffe Gym. The complex will house the physical education classes, the Men's and Women's varsity teams and recreational play by faculty, staff, students, and members of the community.

The courts will be blocked for class and team play and booked on a reservation basis for other groups through a sign-up sheet in the Campus Center. Faculty, staff and students will have first choice for reservations, and may book a court two days in advance. A nominal fee of ($.25) per person per hour to provide for court supervision and maintenance will be charged to all users. Details of court hours and reservation times may be obtained at the Campus Center Desk.

Men's varsity team to open fall season with three day trip

The men's varsity Tennis team will open its Fall season on September 24th, 25th, and 26th with a three day visit to Eastern Mennonite, Madison, and UVA Freshman. The three matches will include the top eight members of the varsity ladder which is presently under way. All men with tennis experience who wish to try out for the varsity squad are asked to contact Coach Jack Armistead in Ratcliffe Gym.

The Varsity team had an outstanding year in 1976 with twelve wins against one loss and return seven lettermen from that squad. The graduation of No. 1 man Petey West and an auto accident of No. 2 man Johnny Roberts could open the door for several new players for the Fall season.

The Fall ladder is operating now and many new faces are challenging for team positions. Ladder matches will continue through November 15th and will pick up again on February 1st, 1977.

CNC enrollment up by 7% this year as growth continues

Christopher Newport College officials have announced that this fall's enrollment has increased more than 7% over last year's enrollment at CNC. Applications for admission for this fall were up 28%, more than offsetting the number of students who have graduated or transferred.

This year's figures stand at over 3,250 full- and part-time students, compared to last fall's 3,035 students. The number of full-time equivalent students is currently 2,017, up 7% over last year. (Full-time equivalency is the system used by the State Department of Education, in which the number of total credit hours taken by all students are added, then divided by 15 to determine how many units of 15 hours--equivalents of full-time students--are being taken.)

While CNC officials would like to see the College's enrollment increase and its programs expand, current State restrictions make uninhibited growth at CNC a potentially mixed blessing. As a result of a law passed by the Legislature last year, any income generated by tuition at CNC from more than 1% over the projected number of full-time students has turned out so far to be a conservative estimate in terms of the number of students admitted to the College.

Even in a year when enrollment is up, however, available funds for the College are down. Governor Godwin has implemented a previously announced plan to request a 5% revision of general fund revenue as appropriated for the 1976-77 fiscal year. This amounts to $114,810 for Christopher Newport.

The reversion of funds comes at an especially difficult time for the College, which had already substantially reduced various items in the budget in order to provide faculty salary increases. College officials will find it necessary to reduce further, and drastically, funds for books, travel, educational equipment, and other items. In addition, the new VEPCO rate increase will cost the College an extra $9,937 this year.

Doane appointed CNC's Womens Tennis Team coach

Christopher Newport College named Dr. Robert Doane as its first Women's Tennis coach. Doane is a man of varied background with his doctorate in political science from Temple University and a quarter-finalist position last week-end at the PTA Consolation Tennis Tournament.

Doane's tennis experience started at Lynchburg College where he was the captain of the men's varsity tennis team. In 1970, Doane was an assistant tennis professional at the Green Valley Country Club in Whitmarsh, Pennsylvania; and last June, he won the quarter-finalist spot in the Ann Arbor Tennis Tournament. Doane has been a member of the CNC faculty for almost four years.

Coach Vaughn, CNC Athletic Director, states that, "The Department of Athletics is happy with the presence of the second intercollegiate team for women. With the growing interest in tennis and the background possessed by Dr. Doane, the Women's Tennis Team is expected to grow with other college teams currently in existence."

Female fighters enter the ring

(CPS)-When the bell signals the second round of the fight at the Inglewood Forum in California, the two boxers coming out of the corners look a little shaky dancing uncertainly around the perimeters of the ring.

The fans are screaming. "Is this sick? It's insanely sadistic," cries a dentist from Santa Monica. And all because the opponents throwing punches at one another in the ring are professional female fighters.

Several of the women in the audience saw the recent fight as a sign of big things to come. "This has nothing to do with women's liberation," said the coach of several women with aspirations in the ring. "I say if a girl wants to do it--and she realizes what may happen to her face, and accepts it-- I say let her do it."

Why do they want to? The money for one thing, although the winner of first contest only took $350 home that night. But also for the competition and possible fame. Apparently they do not lose any sleep over the possibility of getting hurt. One hopeful fighter told the New York Times she could get hurt just as bad falling down some stairs.
