Military Personnel Face Many Challenges In Continuing Classes

by Karen Best

Most people on the Peninsula are accustomed to the military presence in the community but few understand the unique problems of military personnel who wish to continue their education while stationed in Virginia.

Frequent moves make losing credits and paying out-of-state tuition major concerns of the military.

Judy Belle, CNC's representative at the Fort Eustis Education Center, deals mainly with active duty military. About 90 percent of Belle's applicants are non-commissioned officers pursuing bachelor's degrees. The other ten percent are officers who take courses at CNC to meet prerequisites for graduate school.

Belle says that CNC is a good choice for soldiers because it offers a greater variety of courses than the college on post. St. Leo's Another plus for the soldiers is the college atmosphere.

Most of the soldiers attend night classes but some high-ranking, non-commissioned officers are released from duty to attend day classes.

France Trip Set for June

If you've ever wanted to see France, Susan St. Onge in the Modern Language Dept. is continuing to organize the France trip announced last semester.

The 14-day tour (tentatively June 15-June 28) includes extensive sightseeing and several "free" days in Paris, guided excursions to Normandy, Brittany, Versailles, Chartre, and the Chateaux country. This package represents a truly wide variety of experiences in France for a very reasonable price.

The approximate cost of $1,150 covers all major expenses (round-trip air fare New York-Paris, breakfast and dinner daily, double accommodations with bath in two-star hotels, all transfers in France, guided tours and excursions) and includes medical insurance and many other "extras."

Not included are transportation to and from New York, lunches, passport fees, spending money.

There will be an informational meeting on Monday, February 11, at 7:00 in Wingfield 124. Dr. St. Onge will distribute a day-by-day itinerary for the France trip and will answer questions, as well as giving out other useful information.

Attending this meeting does not obligate anyone to take the trip. Anyone who is considering this tour to France is welcome to come and explore in greater detail this wonderful opportunity.

If you cannot attend the informational meeting but are interested in the trip to France, contact Susan St. Onge at 599-7083 or at home in Williamsburg at 253-5681.

Don't delay too long; June is a lovely and popular month in France, and we want to book our tour as soon as possible.

According to Belle, the Army encourages the soldiers to continue their educations, especially those in the medical field.

About 75 percent of the soldiers from Fort Eustis are transferred without graduating from CNC.

Gregory Jackson and Marshall Ramsey are two examples of the military population at CNC. Jackson is a non-commissioned officer at Langley Air Force Base and Ramsey is the son of a Navy lieutenant stationed at the Naval Weapons Station.

Jackson is a security specialist who works afternoons and evenings so that he can attend classes by day. Such a hectic schedule does not leave much time for a social life on base or at school. He admits that he feels adrift between the two worlds but that he also gets the best of both worlds.

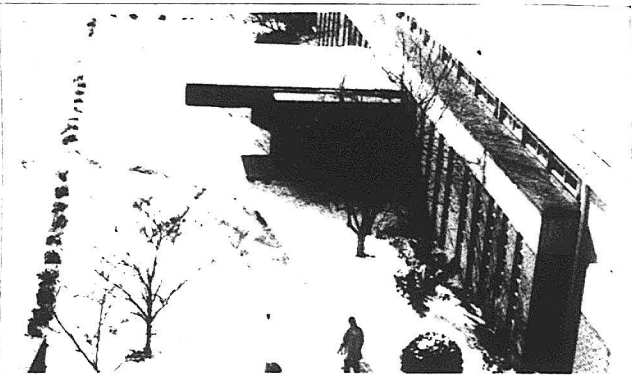

There is one major difference between Jackson and most military students, he plans to graduate from CNC in May 1986. He attended the University of South Carolina for two years and is a Political Science major.

Since coming to CNC, Jackson has shown an interest in the theatre and plans to pursue a career in the Foreign Service.

Ramsey is a sophomore who moved from Korea to Yorktown with his parents. Before coming to CNC, he attended the University of Maryland, Asian Division.

Ramsey chose CNC because he "had to move with his parents and wanted to attend college nearby." When his parents are reassigned, he plans to attend school in Tennessee, his state of residency.

Ramsey is currently enrolled in ROTC and plans to become an officer in the United States Army. Despite his military background, his parents did not pressure him to choose a military career. Ramsey is majoring in Psychology and is an honor student.

Since the heavy snow cancelled the first day of classes, Monday, January 21, classes will meet in a make-up day on Monday, March 18, originally scheduled as part of Spring Break. photo by Donna DeGrace

C.C.S. Provides Child Care Referral Service

by Cynthia M. Brown

In Williamsburg there is an organization that specializes in meeting the needs and concerns of working parents. It is a child care referral service, and it is sponsored, in part, by the United Way. The organization is The Council For Children's Services.

C.C.S. was established in June 1981, with a grant from the Greater Williamsburg United Way. Its purpose is to provide an information and referral center for child care and other related services in the community, and to aid in the process of upgrading and maintaining quality care in the area.

The service area of C.C.S. includes Williamsburg, James City County, and the Bruton District of York County.

C.C.S. provides information on obtaining services, assessment of services, and on becoming a child care provider, as well as advising parents on how to obtain funds for child care. C.C.S. also offers workshops and training programs for providers and agencies in its service area.

C.C.S. provides a great community service. The community need, however, continues to grow. With that need, the demand for providers also increases.

Of particular demand at this time are infant care providers and individuals to provide care in the home of the child.

In order to meet these growing demands for Child Care Providers, C.C.S. is in the process of recruiting individuals for its Child Care Directory.

Anyone interested in being listed in the directory, or in further information concerning C.C.S. services, should contact them at 229-7940, or write The Council For Children's Services, P.O. Box 895, Williamsburg, Virginia 23187.

C.C.S. is a United Way Agency.

'Modest Proposal' Offered for Drunks

by Cynthia M. Brown

"You must be insane to drive in your condition!" By now, the subject of drinking and driving has become mundane, yet here it is, another editorial on that very subject. Only, if you look at that quote and give it serious consideration, perhaps there is yet another, less complicated solution to drunk driving injuries and fatalities.

One of the many definitions of insanity: "the inability to take responsibility for one's behavior and/or actions." The pet phrase in all the uproar over drinking and driving is "drinking responsibly." Considering these two things, perhaps 'insane' is the correct term for these "adventurous" motorists.

I have a solution for the problem of Mr. and Ms. Irresponsibility. Since they are crazy enough to endanger innocent passing motorists and pedestrians as well as themselves, let us see just how far they will go to prove they can handle their liquor.

I make this "modest proposal," if I may borrow Swift's term, let's establish a Drunk Driver's Road Test.

We can make it very realistic with on-coming headlights, poor weather conditions, poor roads, and the ultimate in the unexpected - an on-coming Drunk Driver!

Let's make this test mandatory for every motorist pulled for D.W.I. or D.U.I. Better yet, make them take the test at the time of their violation, in their "present condition."

After a harrowing experience with such conditions as these, even the most alert of motorists would be shaken.

I wonder how Mr. and Ms. Irresponsibility would measure up. Maybe they would think twice about climbing in behind the wheel after a night of heavy elbow-bending.

Insane? No more so than endangering the lives of the innocent people who must share the road with these drinking, driving demons.

Library Sponsoring Contest

by Lee-Ann Smith

Chocoholics and book-lovers unite! The Captain John Smith Library is sponsoring a contest to name their new tempaper consulting service, and the grand prize for the winning entry is a one-pound box of delectable Godiva Chocolates.

The Reference Department's new consulting service gives students a chance to make an appointment with one of the reference librarians who will help them with some of the aspects of tempaper research.

"With this formalized service, we hope to help more students with their papers than we do with the informal help that we always offer," said Reference Librarian Mary Daniel.

Keep in mind that this new service will not help students write or proofread their papers. Instead, they will receive personal help with deciding on a topic, how to find and use the resources they need, what resources are available, and where to find information on how to write proper footnotes and bibliographies.

"The informal help will still continue, but now when students come to the library they can talk to a librarian to see if consultation is necessary. If it is, then an appointment can be made by filling out one of the forms at the Reference Desk," Daniel continued.

Students who take advantage of this new service will become better acquainted with microfilm, microfiche, specialized dictionaries and encyclopedias, and the new electronic resources such as the Business and Magazine Indexes which give a five-year review in one glance.

"We also have complete files of the New York Times," Daniel said, "a wealth of information for research papers."

One of the reasons the program was started was to help students learn how to write and research a good term paper.

Writing a good research paper is important because students need to learn how to do research and process information, skills which are needed in many careers, Daniel explained.

"We also hope that the service will improve the one-to-one communication between librarians and students which is very important," she continued.

The contest to name the new service is open to the students, staff, and faculty of CNC. Entry forms are available at the Reference Desk, or in the Captain's Log, and should be turned-in to the Reference Desk by February 14. The winner will be announced on February 21, and the chocolates will be awarded on the 22, at 3 p.m. during a "Chocolate Festival" in the library.

Free chocolate kisses will be given out and appointments for consultations will be accepted.

"The tempaper service will help students become familiar with the library's services, and teach them to use the library to their best advantage," Daniel concluded.

Fortune Sparks Captains to 93-82 Victory

by Steven Grinstead

It's down to the nitty-gritty part of the season and the Christopher Newport men's basketball team has a legitimate chance at hosting a first-round playoff game.

In order to host a game the squad must finish in the top four in the Dixie Conference. At the moment CNC is in fifth place (5-5), one game behind fourth place UNC-Greensboro.

Over the February 1-2 weekend the Captains played host to St. Andrews and Methodist.

CNC coach C. J. Wollum said, "I think St. Andrews is the best team in the league. They proved it with an impressive win over the Captains 75-66."

St. Andrews started the game by burying outside shooters.

They cooled off at the end of the half, but not before they had jumped out to a 42-28 lead. St. Andrews shot 62 percent from the floor, 15 for 24, in the first half while CNC was at 36 percent, 12 for 33.

With one left in the game and CNC down 42-59, St. Andrews was in a semi-stall offense. The tactic failed as the Captains rallied from behind. CNC scored 11 straight points to pull within six, 53-59, with 2:58 left.

That was as close as CNC would get. St. Andrews survived the CNC comeback and posted a 75-66 win in front of 417 spectators.

Buck Moore led CNC in scoring with 25 points and also had 12 rebounds.

Freshman Mark Bryson also had a fine game. He scored five points, had two blocked shots and grabbed 11 rebounds.

Wollum called the two efforts, "the two better performances of the night."

After the contest Wollum commented, "There were no miracles in Ratcliffe tonight. The only fire being breathed was by St. Andrews." He also said, "When you have a bad experience you'd better gain from it."

The Captains acknowledged Wollum's words and did gain from the defeat. The following day CNC was the team breathing fire, most of the flames coming from center lead Fortune.

Everyone in Ratcliffe saw something that has been missing most of the year from the CNC offense. Fortune was showing everyone a strong inside game. Wollum said, "He went up with great confidence."

Fortune was a dominating force in the middle the entire game. The 6-5 junior gave credit to his teammates. They were just passing the ball inside," said Fortune.

It was a fairly close game throughout the first half. CNC led 42-39 at the half.

The battle remained tight until the 7:42 mark. That's when CNC managed to pull away from Methodist, 71-59.

Fortune ended with a career-high 21 points. He also had 14 rebounds and three blocked shots.

CNC had four other players scoring in double-digits. Bobby Griffin and Jimmy Deans had 19 each, Moore earned 14, and Bryson had ten.

CNC's 11-point victory, 93-82, is the largest point spread won by a conference team over Methodist.

"There was determination in our guys' eyes. They weren't going to lose this one," stated Wollum.

Lady Captains Win 50-45

by David M. Bean

The Lady Captains will make their final road trip of the 1984-85 season this weekend when they travel down to Greensboro to take on UNC-Greensboro and Greensboro College.

Greensboro College, which has been the doormat of the Dixie Conference over the last few years, has come on strong recently just ask their cross-town rivals UNC-G.

The Lady Hornets shocked the number-one ranked Lady Spartans, 76-69 last week. It is the first time in their long rivalry that Greensboro has beaten UNC-G.

The Lady Captains, on the other hand, came off with another win against Methodist. They defeated the Lady Monarchs 66-58.

If it sounds boring, it should. CNC seemed to play as if it was just another game. Despite the fact CNC had control, Methodist managed to throw in a few good punches, mainly from Vivian Culverhouse and Carla Oglesby.

Culverhouse led all scorers with 26 points and she also had 18 rebounds.

For CNC it was one of those days. After starting with a 14-12 point discrepancy in the first half, they saw Methodist come back to cut to a 29-23 half time lead.

Once again, it was Pam Stewart to the rescue. Stewart, who led CNC with 22 points, hit six of those during a ten-point surge to give the Lady Captains a 50-45 lead. CNC led by five almost all the way towards the end.

Senior Leanne Eyer had one of her better games so far this season. Not only did she pump in 17 points, but she also had five assists and eight steals.

Moore Scores Career High 31

by Steven Grinstead

Buck Moore directed Christopher Newport to a dramatic 74-73 victory over Mary Washington College last Tuesday as he scored a career-high 31 points.

In the pre-game talk Wollum told the team, "Don't take them lightly. When you're on the road you don't take anyone lightly."

Wollum also saw MWC as being a poor outside shooting team. However, they get many offensive rebounds.

This is exactly what happened early in the game. MWC was finding holes in CNC's zone defense and was dominating the offensive boards. CNC was outrebounded 21-27 at the half and trailed 40-44.

Moore scored 17 of his 31 points in the first 20 minutes to keep CNC in the game. In one stretch he scored 13 consecutive points.

At the 14:00 mark the Captains were down 43-50. Then CNC put together a 16-3 spurt and went ahead 59-53 with 9:20 left. MWC nudged their way back to tie the game at 61-61.

In the final five minutes, MWC gained many three point advantages. The Captains would cut the deficit to one each time with a retaliating basket.

With nine seconds left, Jimmy Deans shot and missed a 20-footer from the corner. Moore grabbed the rebound and immediately went up in traffic. He scored to give CNC a 74-43 advantage with three seconds remaining.

"I'm just glad it was him (Moore) under the basket when I shot," said Deans.

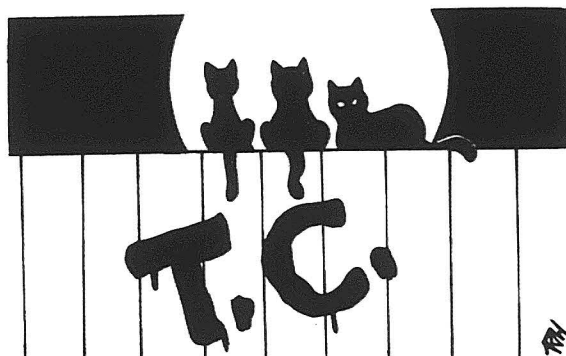

Moore's last-second basket gave him a new career high for points scored in a game. "I wanted to tie the Grif," said Moore, (referring to teammate Bobby Griffin's 31 points scored against Bridgewater in 1982). Moore called the victory a "team effort."

Wollum summed up the contest by saying "What a crazy game."

Ballet Features CNC Student

by Beth Emerson

Michelle Matzader, a former theatre student at CNC, will perform in the next Newport News Ballet production, The Sleeping Beauty, on February 16 at 8:30 p.m. and February 17 at 2:30 p.m. Michelle will portray the character of Carabosse, the wicked fairy.

Auditions were held at the Dance Academy, home of the Newport News Ballet, in a class-structured setting. "Robert Brassel, Choreographer and Director of the Newport News Ballet, had people in mind for the different parts, but he wanted to see how well we could pick up the choreography from this, he made his final decisions," said Michelle.

Michelle has confidence when it comes to performing, but she admits, "I have difficulty with blocking and choreography. I have no problem when it comes to learning lines of a script. Because of this and her busy rehearsal schedule, rehearsals become hard for Michelle at times.

Besides The Sleeping Beauty, Michelle has performed in two CNC productions. The first was Medea, where she was a "woman of the chorus." The other was Guns and Dolls, where she was a "Hot-Box Dancer."

Before the curtain goes up for any performance, Michelle has mixed feelings. "I get very excited because I like performing, yet I get a little nervous at times too," she says.

Michelle has been studying ballet for five years, three of them at the Dance Academy. Before that, she studied with the Chamber Ballet in Williamsburg. At the Dance Academy, she is in the advanced ballet class as well as in a jazz class.

With her studies in theatre, her talent in dance, and her performing experience, Michelle hopes someday to be a part of the Professional Theatre. She adds, "My dance training is important when it comes to performing for theatre."

Choreographer Robert Brassel, like Michelle, feels that "the Dance Academy is considered a vital link between the classroom and the stage for the Academy students."

The Dance Academy curriculum is a progressive study of dance technique based on a 40-week year. Students are placed according to ability, and they progress to the next level at the discretion of the faculty.

Classes range in age from three-year-olds to adults. Michelle is placed in the more advanced classes that use pointed shoes. She can be seen performing as she does in class, at Warwick High School during the production of The Sleeping Beauty.

Michelle feels that it's good to have Robert Brassel and his wife Linda, with their highly respected credits in dance, here to run such a high-quality academy. They're very talented, and it's always delightful to watch them perform. People usually don't get a chance to see this type of ballet performance in this area. I highly recommend it; it's worthwhile."

Passage Film Epic Projects Human Dignity

by Julie Clementson

A Passage to India is a visually beautiful, emotionally moving story that is written, directed and acted with heart.

Based on E. M. Forster's novel, it is a story not only of the unequal treatment of Indians in British-held India, but of the injustice and absurdity in any belief that one race is superior to another.

Even more than that, this is a story of a passage of the heart and soul, for this movie encompasses the fact that kindred spirits exist among all people, and dignity and decency aren't the sole property of one race, nor are humor and good-heartedness.

Through a near-perfect mixture of engaging characters, charming humor, and an awe-inspiring and beautiful country, director David Lean takes us on an engrossing journey.

The actual physical passage occurs when an elderly English woman, Mrs. Moore, travels to India accompanied by young Miss Quested, in order to see Mrs. Moore's son, a city magistrate. While there they meet Dr. Aziz, an endearing young Indian delighted to be accepted as a friend.

Dr. Aziz's first encounter with Mrs. Moore in a mosque is so dream-like that Dr. Aziz initially thinks she is a ghost. Although he soon realizes she is not, he does believe that she is an "old soul," one who has been here before, and throughout the movie it would almost appear true.

Strong performances abound here. Peggy Ashcroft is excellent as Mrs. Moore, a kind, sensitive lady with an almost mystical aura about her.

"India forces one to come face to face with one's self. It can be very disturbing," she says to Miss Quested, played by Judy Davis, who is very convincing as a young woman troubled by her own feelings and uncertainties.

Victor Banerjee is more than outstanding as Dr. Aziz, the earnest, generous man whose good nature continually gets him in awkward situations. Banerjee has a wonderfully expressive face that makes you feel what he feels, and he is both heartwarming in his eagerness to please and heartwrenching when his gentle nature is tested to the limits.

The most telling scene of the movie occurs when Dr. Aziz arrives early to a tea in the home of Mr. Fielding, principal of the government college who has a quiet hero's as a compassionate man with the unusual habit of treating Indians as ordinary people instead of second-class citizens. Mr. Fielding is in the shower and begins to get dressed while Dr. Aziz talks to him from another room.

When Fielding finds to his dismay that he is without a back collar pin, Dr. Aziz without hesitation takes the pin from his own collar and gives it to Fielding, claiming he always carries an extra around for emergencies. Who could not love a person such as this?

Equally telling, however, is a snide remark Mrs. Moore's son makes upon arrival about Dr. Aziz being the "typical Indian" because he's dressed in his Sunday best with no collar pin.

Alec Guinness is delightful as the eccentric professor Godbole, who, when being asked why he is not more concerned when his friend Dr. Aziz is wrongly carried to prison, says that although he is concerned, it doesn't matter, because one's fate is already determined.

When Fielding indignantly asks then, if Godbole's philosophy is that one should do nothing, Godbole replies, "My philosophy is you can do what you like, but the outcome will be the same."

David Lean, the director of Dr. Zhivago, Lawrence of Arabia, and The Bridge on the River Kwai, has done a masterful job in capturing the beauty, mystique and, as one character puts it, the "muddle" of India, and he has done so while also presenting a universal story of human dignity and people bound together by their common virtues, rather than separated by differences.

Although the movie is long, about two hours and 45 minutes, I didn't even know until it was over, so if you have the time and want to see a touching story with characters you can like and admire, A Passage to India is just the ticket.
