Robb makes tour; funds requested

By Cynthia M. Brown
staff writer

August 21, 1985 marked yet another capital outlay tour of CNC by the Governor and the State Finance Committee. The purpose of these tours is to allow the legislators to see where the allocated funds are going, first-hand. The tour which included a brief tour of the new science building and of Newport Hall, culminated in a short presentation of this year's requests by President Anderson. The tour ended at 11 a.m., lasting barely one half-hour. It represents a major decision-making process in the future of the College.

The allocations requested by the College are as follows:

The renovations of Newport Hall will continue with additions to the computer labs. The New Science Building construction will enclose the building's corridors.

Major construction for the library includes expanded space for stacks, reading, service, and faculty offices. Construction in the Physical Education building includes a six-lane pool, training rooms, an indoor rifle range, storage and shower areas.

Fund requests for property acquisitions is made in an ongoing attempt to purchase adjacent land as it becomes available, for the purpose of expansion and development.

Due to the importance of this and other decisions regarding changes, developments will be printed as they are received.

Notes: Maintenance Reserve is required, by policy, to be listed as institutional priority one. This item provides for major building repairs, such as the Library Roof Project now in progress. Funding of this item is based on a formula developed by the State Council of Higher Education.*

The Division of Engineering and Buildings has recommended revision of the Master Site Plan to enable the Property Acquisition to go forward as a Central Appropriation under Item C-1.

ROTC excels during this summer's Advance Camp

Randi Stupar
contributing writer

Each year, ROTC Advanced Camp is held at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. The Instructor Group of which CNC is a member, ranked 19 out of 112 host schools this summer. In part, this high overall ranking is attributed to two CNC cadets whose individual placements were outstanding.

Cadet Jonathan J. Kashauty was ranked first in the Instructor Group, as well as first in the Fourth Area, a designation for the geographic areas of Virginia, Maryland, and part of North Carolina. He also ranked fourth in the First Region which is comprised of the entire East Coast, from Maine to Florida.

The other outstanding cadet, Lisa Hunt, was ranked third in the Instructor Group. Eleven other CNC cadets participated in the camp as well. Each of the following individuals helped represent the ROTC program from this school and should be commended on their efforts.

The Captain's Log would like to extend its congratulations on a job well done to: Keith D. Holloman, Debra C. Woodward, John B. Gill, Donald R. Johnson, Kurt E. Allenbach, Charles R. Bryant, Robert J. Lehman, Steven R. Clopper, Fontaine R. Johnson, Brian K. Martin, Jonathan J. Kashauty, and Lisa G. Hunt.

SA President Roudabush comments on cutbacks made in semester funds

By Ann Catherine Braxton
staff writer

Due to a projected decrease in freshman enrollment at CNC this Fall, 20 on-campus student organizations, including the Student Association, will suffer a 10 percent budget cut.

Student activities and the workings of Student's SA are paid for by the student comprehensive fees charged at registration. The SA, in turn, accepts Spring budget requests from eligible clubs and organizations and allocates this money to the clubs in the Fall semester.

Dr. Charles Behymer, Vice President for Student Affairs, and John McCaughey, Director of Student Life, projected a 10 percent decrease in this Fall's freshman enrollment, and thus a 10 percent decrease in student comprehensive fee money. Early in August, McCaughey sent each club a letter explaining the 10 percent dock in requested budget funds.

"I'm sure it's not going to help the clubs any," says SA President Jamie Roudabush. "I'm hoping that they will find out that the figures are not that low, and that some of the money will return to the clubs. I'm not pleased with the SA budget. I haven't received any complaints yet, but that is probably because it is early in the semester and most clubs haven't met yet."

The first meeting of the Student Association will be Wednesday, September 4, at 2 p.m. in CC233.

Silent Commentary ON THE BOOKSTORE.

Dear Editor:

The subject of the CNC bookstore has doubtless been the topic of many conversations since its vast improvement. Its increased efficiency is indisputable, due to a number of new items and an increase in equipment and personnel.

But many students question the monetary expense of this improvement, particularly in view of the expense involved in the great improvement of decor. They wonder if the improved appearance has not added to the cost of the basic academic supplies they need. In view of the prices in the CNC bookstore, a comparison study of area bookstores has been conducted.

Alpha Kappa Psi, the co-ed business fraternity, took the initiative to scrutinize the business workings of the new bookstore. The manager of the bookstore since its inception in 1969, Mrs. Jacqueline Haskins, was consulted on the matter.

Fraternity members conducted the actual price comparisons at CNC, Old Dominion University, and the College of William and Mary. It was discovered, by further research, that the CNC bookstore is a member of both the Virginia and the National College Stores Associations which cater to the latest trends in college supplies. The Community Funding Program, established by Mr. L. Barron Wood, Jr., CNC Director of Development and Alumni Affairs, and the President's Contingency Fund have allowed bookstore profits that have previously met other school needs to be reinvested in bookstore improvements.

The bookstore, as stated by Haskins, exists solely to serve the students' needs as they are determined by the various departments, professors, and students. The bookstore is, however, a separate business entity that is operated for profit, and it reimburses the state for salary expenses as well as for all fringe benefits received. It is entirely self-supporting, with excess profits going to retained earnings that are invested back into the business.

In order to maintain the circulation of books among students, the bookstore buys current used texts from the students at half-price and resells them at a 20 percent markup. The bookstore also purchases books that are not current and mails them to a national wholesaler at approximately 15 percent commission.

Haskins states that the faculty is asked to place textbook orders for Fall by April 15 so that the orders can be batch-processed through the computer system and can be ordered by July 15. Late faculty orders mean late-arriving texts. Also, CNC's orders tend to be processed by the publishers later than those of colleges that buy greater quantities of books.

The sale of books comprises 85 percent of total store sales. School supplies rank second in revenues. The greatest bookstore expense is incurred by salaries and wages, retirement funds, and hospitalization. Due to the increased footage of the new facility, the rent has more than doubled.

The price comparison made by Iota Pi Chapter indicated that the ODU bookstore prices were 5.92 percent lower than the CNC prices, and the W & M texts cost 2.95 percent more than those at the CNC bookstore.

Dear Editor:

This letter is concerned with the topic of property defacement. It was brought to the attention of Alpha Kappa Psi, the Professional Business Fraternity on campus at Christopher Newport College, most appreciatively by Dr. Algin B. King that the word "professional" had been misspelled on the organization's posters. The organization is now aware of the oversight and has taken steps to correct the error. What was not appreciated by the organization were the actions of certain parties or party which actually marked on several of the posters, rendering several unsalvageable.

The organization would have appreciated this person or persons bringing the error to the attention of the fraternity by some other means than marking on the posters, especially in ink. I personally would like to make it very clear to the person or persons responsible that their actions are most unappreciated and show a lack of courtesy as well as disrespect for the property of others. In the future, it would do this person or persons well to bear in mind that their criticism will be much better accepted if done in a constructive, not destructive, manner.

Sincerely,
Teresa A. Stiles

Styron Scholars program offers new options

Lorraine M. Rand
staff writer

The Styron scholars started the new academic year on August 23 with a luncheon to welcome their new members and to discuss the changes in the Honors Program.

The Styron Scholars of the Class of 1989 are Jade Bauer, Heather Canniff, Kevin Fike, Sharon Gibson, Julia Perkowski, Beverly Ricketts, Randi Stupar, Tamara Thomas, Kimberly Turner, Shirley Whitehead, and Catherine Whitt. The returning Styrons are Adele Hornik, Scott Husch, Catherine Isner, Michael Olsavicky, Rose Porter, Lorraine Rand, and Paul Sisak.

The program was named for William Styron, the author of such books as Sophie's Choice and the Pulitzer Prize-winning Confessions of Nat Turner.

According to Dr. Jay Paul, Associate Professor of English and Chairman of the Honors Council, the Honors Program is designed to provide exceptional students with a richer education. The Honors Council, a committee of 10 faculty members, governs the Honors Program. For the first time in its five year history, the Honors Council also has a student member. She is Catherine Isner, a third-year Styron Scholar.

Until this year the honors program at CNC was open to freshman and sophomore Styron scholars only. The Honors Program has been expanded to include Honors Scholars, Styron Scholars, and Christopher Newport Scholars.

All full-time freshmen who meet SAT, grade point, and class rank criteria set by the Honors Council will be designated Honors Scholars. All receive special advising and registration privileges.

The ten highest ranking Honors Scholars in the freshman and sophomore class are Styron scholars. They receive scholarships which, according to Paul, "serve as an indication of support and belief from the college." They must also participate in the Honors curriculum, which includes English 103 Honors, taught by Dr. Douglas Gordon, and Honors 290, Great Trials in History, taught by Dr. Theodora Bostick and Dean Joett Powell.

Christopher Newport Scholars are students with at least a 3.5 grade point average. Students who have completed 75 hours may apply to the Honors Council for admission to the program.

Continued falling numbers in enrollment slows; future looks good

By Rick Van Rijn
staff writer

Over the past several years, college enrollment has been dropping. Although CNC's enrollment for 1985-86 shows a slight drop from last year, it appears to be a less severe decline than the state as a whole is experiencing. "The enrollment decline is getting better and better," says Robert A. Netter, CNC's registrar.

Netter says that although the enrollment has shown a three percent drop from last year's Fall enrollment, that figure is only current as of the end of regular registration on August 21. Netter points out that late registration, ending on August 30, could see the enrollment of as many as 300 additional students. This would effectively reduce the enrollment decline to approximately one percent, a figure Netter says he would consider insignificant.

Netter says that he is relieved that CNC is not experiencing the 12 percent drop that TNCC is, and he hopes for continued healthy enrollment for CNC.

Capt. Thompson looks ahead with enthusiasm

By Richard Sarner
staff writer

"The Army isn't just a job; it's a profession," is the view of Capt. Wallace G. Thompson, assistant professor of Military Science at CNC. Thompson was recently selected for promotion to the rank of Major. He will not receive his actual promotion until sometime in January, or even as late as May, due to his position on the list of personnel slated for changes in rank. His promotion will have little effect on his duties or position here at CNC.

When his three-year assignment with the ROTC is complete, Thompson expects to be sent to Staff College in Korea, where he will become the Executive Officer for Signal Battalion.

Thompson began his career when he received his draft notice (which hangs on his office wall) in 1970. He served for three years then left to complete his MBA at West Virginia University. Eight days later he was in ROTC, where he began his new career as an officer trained in Combat Communications — the Voice of Command. His specialty is to supply equipment from walkie-talkies, to telephones, to satellites, and to train the men that use them.

He rejoined the service in 1975 and was sent to Panama, first as Platoon Leader, then as an Executive Officer. After his return, he became Battalion Signal Officer at Ft. Sill, and promoted to Chief Field Artillery Branch.

In July 1980 he underwent training that sent him on to become the Assistant Operations Officer at Ft. Carson, Colorado, a position that left him with the task of overseeing 700 signal officers involved in a reformation held for three months, in Germany.

Cpt. Thompson was assigned to be an ROTC instructor, and was given a choice between William & Mary and the University of Connecticut. He chose W&M because he heard the school was one of the best units in the region. Thompson said he was glad to be teaching the smaller classes of the CNC branch, rather than those of our parent unit at W&M, but added that it is no harder to teach a large class than a small one.

In Search Of

By David Becker
staff writer

The Captain's Log continues its quest for the best in dining, nightlife, and entertainment, and this semester I volunteered for the first mission. As I accepted, I felt divinely inspired, driven to find the best – the supreme submarine.

If you are an ardent admirer of the famous "sub," you have lots of company. "Subs are very popular with the entire CNC population," says Terrace manager Barbara Bronschidie. "Oftentimes the subs even outsell the hamburgers."

Bearing in mind that the standard pizza parlor sub is always second-rate when compared to that of the sub specialists, I eschewed pizza parlors and found the top two sub shops to be The Subway Station and our own Terrace. The Subway Station (Warwick Blvd.) rates as the best. Prices range from $1.20 for half of a vegetarian sub (order this one with double cheese!) to $2.90 for the whole Subway Express. For an additional charge, double meat and/or cheese can be added to any sub. Cold Bud on tap is 65¢ a mug and $2.95 a pitcher. During the school year, beer is not served on weekdays until after 2 p.m.

The Terrace (CNC Campus Center) serves an inexpensive and hearty sub which rates highly. Prices range from $2.25 for the Hoagie Combo (served with fries) to $3.25 for the roast beef sub (with Swiss cheese, lettuce, tomato, and sauteed onions).

Beer prices range from 85¢ for a small Coors draft to $1.45 for a bottle of Heineken. (All prices include 4% sales tax.) Special happy hours are announced as scheduled. Monday night football on the wide screen television is an added attraction.

Honorable mentions include Pizza Hut, Andy's (Oyster Point Plaza), and Dino's Pizza (Alpine Shops), where on Tuesdays you can wash down your sub with a draft beer for 50¢.

Stuffed, I will now abstain for a few days, and I'll talk to you again when I venture out again in search of . . . Hot Spots!

Terrace Hosts 'Smurf 'n' Surf'

By William S. Simkins
contributing writer

Last Friday, 9 p.m. The Sigma Pi crowd began to gather in the Terrace in the Campus Center. As the party began, small groups of people sat about the tables talking. The music was kept low enough for conversation, except for the especially popular songs like Dire Straits' Money for Nothing.

Having the party in the Terrace this time, rather than in Christopher's, added to the intimacy of the party.

By 10 p.m. that evening, the crowd had filled the tables and floor space in front of the Terrace bar, and a few people had moved to the tables outside – some to hold more serious conversation and some to engage in other nocturnal pleasures.

Two hours after it had begun, this party was clearly not the type of college affair popularized in movies and on television. There was no dancing or screaming or embarrassing displays of drunkenness. So, just how were these people managing to have fun?

These people seemed to be enjoying a camaraderie, which is one reason that fraternities exist. New arrivals to the party moved about the room shaking hands and introducing their dates. They drank their beer, they talked, they laughed, and they listened to the music.

Halley's Comet return studied

The curtain is at last going up on the long-awaited return of Halley's Comet – a phenomenon that occurs only once every seventy-six years.

In order to help people find the Comet this time around (the alternative is to wait until the year 2061), the Planetarium is featuring a show called "The Tale of the Comet." The show opens September 5 and continues through November 24.

Showtimes are Thursdays 7:30 p.m., Saturdays 1:30 and 3:30 p.m., and Sundays 1:30, 2:30, and 3:30 p.m. Admission is $1.25.

"The Tale of the Comet" takes the audience on a tour of Halley's Comet – its history, its scientific meaning, and, most importantly, where and how to look for it during its visit.

Additional computers mean greater access for CNC students

By Lissa Graham
contributing writer

Computers aren't just for the Computer Science majors anymore. Now CNC has the Microcomputer, which can help everyone with all subjects. Recently the Computer and English departments at CNC have teamed up to help students with their English skills through the use of Computer Assisted Instruction.

The software ordered for the computers includes such programs as: Reading Comprehension, English Sentence Structure, Speedreading, Spelling, Writing, Speech Mechanics and Vocabulary Development.

Although the computers are being used primarily for English 011 and 101, the Microcomputers are capable of helping students with almost any subject.

"In terms of curriculum innovation it is definitely revolutionary," said Stark.

The English department also plans to branch out next term with word processing software. With the addition of this software it will be possible to write research papers with the computer. The advantage to this is that, if corrections have to be made it will be as simple as pushing a few keys.

Larger universities such as Dartmouth and Drexel have found the use of computers like these to be a near necessity. They are therefore urging their students to purchase microcomputers. However, CNC is providing the computers for its students.

Smith joins faculty as journalism instructor

By Karen Lynn Hastings
contributing writer

A former reporter, welfare-fraud investigator, critic, and the co-author of a bibliography, Dr. Madeline Smith recently joined the CNC English Department faculty.

Smith hails from New York, where she obtained her B.A. in English from Mount Saint Mary College in 1971. She received her Masters degree in English at State University of New York (SUNY) in 1973.

Before obtaining her doctorate, she worked as a welfare-fraud investigator in Orange County, New York. Working as an investigator for over four years, she had to search for information, and had to "learn how to get around taking 'no' for an answer." She also worked on The Union-Gazette in Port Jervis, New York, where she discovered her enthusiasm for journalism. Smith finished her Ph.D. in English from West Virginia University in 1982.

This semester, Smith will be teaching a newswriting course (English 260) and three sections of English 102. She is excited about the content of the 102 course and about the fact that CNC has many older students.

Smith hopes for students with energy and enthusiasm, but, she said, "if I can't have enthusiasm, I'll take hard work."

She's equally excited about her newswriting course in which students will learn interview and newswriting techniques. They will also write investigative, police, and fire stories.

Smith said that she was impressed by CNC when she first came here in May 1984. "I like the close rapport the faculty have with the students; it reminds me of Saint Mary's where I did my undergraduate work."

She was also a visiting assistant professor at West Virginia University, and is now in a one-year appointment at CNC.

Smith enjoys critiquing plays and novels and says, "Writing gives me continued satisfaction." Among her favorite writers are Eugene O'Neill, on whom she did her dissertation, William Styron, Lillian Hellman, and Shakespeare. She has two published articles, both in The Bulletin.

She has just finished co-authoring a bibliography covering O'Neill criticism from 1973-1983. Before the end of this semester, she will be looking for a publisher.

New faculty add skills to theatre

By Diana Dely
staff writer

Two new faces have appeared in the CNC Theatre — Dr. Gwen Sharoff and Henry "Hank" Sparks.

Dr. Gwen Sharoff is from California State College in San Bernardino and will be teaching speech and introductory theatre courses. She will also design costumes, run the box office, and be theatre manager for the Theatre's Fall production of Cat on a Hot Tin Roof.

She has taught for 23 years, and she served as department chair of theatre at Norfolk's Magnet School of the Arts this summer. Sharoff has directed often and has acted and danced professionally.

Hank Sparks is the new set designer at the theatre. Originally from New York, he received his Master of Fine Arts degree from Brandeis University in Boston, where he also taught technical theatre courses. He also worked with the Tidewater Dinner Theatre for six years and says he has worked mainly on sex comedies and musicals.

The Virginia Symphony will perform in the CNC Theatre on Friday, September 6, at 7:30 p.m.

The classical orchestra will perform works by Mozart, Handel, and Beethoven. Soloist David Wick will play Concerto I by Strauss in E Flat on the horn. Wick is the principle horn player and the librarian for the Virginia Symphony. He is also a member of the Virginia Opera Association. Before coming to Virginia, he played with the Cedar Rapids Symphony in Iowa for 11 years.

Richard Williams, music director of the Virginia Symphony, will conduct the orchestra. He has performed in France, Great Britain, Canada, Belgium, and Czechoslovakia. Williams was music director for the Cedar Rapids Symphony from 1970 to 1981, when Wick accompanied him to Virginia. In May 1986, he will pursue a career as a guest conductor in Europe.

The September 6 concert is sponsored in part by the Newport News Arts Commission and is free and open to the public.

Athlete's Corner

By Hector Gonzalez
staff writer

Our athlete's profile this week spotlights one of the College's most celebrated athletes, CNC soccer team Captain Gerard Mosley.

Since his arrival on campus two years ago from Oxford, England, Mosley has made a big impact on the team and has played a pivotal role in the improvement of the soccer program under Head Coach Seth Roland.

Last year Mosley barely missed being named to several NCAA Division III All American Teams. He hopes to improve his performance this season.

Once again Mosley will be playing the sweeper position, a position best suited for his defensive and offensive abilities.

When asked what attracted him to CNC, Mosley is quick to respond - Coach Seth Roland and the peaceful and friendly atmosphere of the College.

"The size of Christopher Newport also played a part in my decision," says the soft-spoken Information Science junior.

As busy as school and soccer keep him, Mosley still finds time to do some freshmen tutoring - something he says he likes doing because he enjoys helping other people.

With what little time he has left out of his hectic schedule, Mosley enjoys trying out and modeling the latest in men's fashions.

Mosley looks forward to graduation and giving professional soccer a try. But if his professional aspirations don't materialize, he says he is willing to consider Hollywood.

Intramurals rally around Anderson for leadership

By Mel DeLaGara
staff writer

The Intramural Department of CNC has a new director for the 1985-86 school year. Kendell (Max) Anderson, 22, has been appointed director and will oversee all intramural activities.

Anderson graduated from Ferguson High School in 1981 and played basketball for Virginia Commonwealth University before coming to CNC. Also assisting will be Shelly Pidgeon, Anne Walsh and Pam Stinson. Stinson is the newest member of the intramural staff.

As intramural director Anderson, who is pleased with student interest here, is responsible for setting up playing schedules and recruiting officials. This year, in addition to the regular seasonal sports, the Intramural Department has added to its schedule a Muscular Dystrophy Association run, indoor soccer, year-round softball, aerobics, watersports, and a recreation day.

Anderson says flag football will begin September 16. Students, both men and women, interested in joining a team should sign up at the Intramural Department in the gymnasium.

Tentative hours for the Intramural Department, which governs the administering of sports equipment, are: Mondays and Wednesdays, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.; Tuesdays and Thursdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 1:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.; and Fridays, 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

Anderson encourages those students or Leisure Studies and Physical Education majors who eventually want to work with intramurals to officiate or participate.

Coach Roland expresses optimism for coming season

By Rob Jozwiak
staff writer

Coach Seth Roland remains hopeful that this year's CNC soccer team can have a winning season despite their loss to the University of Richmond on Saturday. In the pre-season scrimmage, Richmond overpowered CNC 2-0.

"We have a lot of work ahead of us both offensively and defensively," explained Coach Roland. "In the first period, we played lazy defense and didn't move the ball very well on offense."

According to Coach Roland, the Captains played their best soccer in the second period. They moved the ball more effectively on offense and played better defense. In the third period Richmond allowed non-starters to play. The Captains showed signs only sporadically of working together against the Spiders.

"I'm counting on some newcomers to play a big role for me this year, but it's a big adjustment for them to come to a new program, and some are making the adjustment better than others.

Newcomers include B. B. and Junior Carter, Sal Cirmigliaro, Andrew Crockwell, Lou Fiscella, Jeff Harmon, Lubos Sivulka, and Herb Stewart. Roland hopes the newcomers will be active this season but he says he is looking to the veteran players for leadership.

Roland added that although he was disappointed in the way the Captains played Saturday, he knew that they could play much better, and that, barring major injuries, this year's soccer season could be exciting.
