Dean's Colloquia Meeting

On Friday, March 10, at noon Dr. Teddy Bostick will present the fifth talk in the Colloquia series in the Campus Center Theatre. Teddy's presentation is entitled "Women's Rights, the Press, and the Reform Bill of 1867" and deals with the first attempts to gain suffrage rights for women in England.

As usual, the formal presentation will be followed by a luncheon in the speaker's honor in the Board Room, then an informal seminar at 2:00 in the same location.

Please make your reservations for the luncheon by forwarding $3 to me either in person or through the campus mail. Wednesday, March 8, will be the last day in which I can accept reservations.

Sociobiology and Great Books Panels

In the weeks to follow the Sub-Committee of the Dean's Colloquia will be sponsoring two panels, one which will discuss Sociobiology and the other to debate the question of civil disobedience. The Sociobiology panel will air a number of questions related to that topic as a potential new discipline. The second panel will inaugurate an ongoing series of debates on major questions emerging from the Great Books collection. Each panel will organize its debate around a collection of readings to be placed on reserve in the Library. All those interested in attending are invited to read or familiarize themselves with the readings. Each panel member will present statements of their positions on the debated questions. In each session the audience will be asked to participate through questions and comments. Faculty members who have suggestions for future Great Books or contemporary, controversial panel topics should submit them to Tim Morgan. Suggestions ought to include the topic, some selected readings, and some names for the panel. Details about the first two panels will appear in next week's Chronicle.
