

Attendance at Forum embarrasses CNC

Christopher Newport College was held up to public embarrassment Wednesday evening, October 11, when less than 100 people showed up for the Public Forum sponsored by the Student Association in the Campus Center Theatre. The main speakers were Joe Canada, representing Republican Senatorial candidate John Warner, and the Democratic candidate, Andrew Miller.

Mrs. Paul Tribble put in an appearance representing her husband, Congressman Paul Tribble, a Republican, who is running for reelection to the House of Representatives. Mr. Lew Puller, the Democratic candidate for the House of Representatives, was misinformed that he could make some remarks on the issues in the campaign, but when he was told upon his arrival that he could not make those remarks, he declined to put in an appearance and left.

Mr. Canada was introduced by Joseph Ritchie, mayor of Newport News; and Mr. Miller was introduced by Bobby Scott, Representative to the Virginia House of Delegates. The theme of the evening was "Politics with Principles," and the speakers were supposed to stick to this as a topic. But this was not the case. The speakers both lightly touched on this subject, but then took the opportunity to speak out on the issues of the ongoing senatorial campaign.

The forum was scheduled to get underway at 6:00 p.m. but did not get started until 6:30 p.m. when Student Association President Bill Bell introduced the persons on the speakers' platform.

Canada expounded briefly on Warner's

Dormitories seriously considered

by Melissa Edeburn

The Advisory Committee on Student Housing is planning to release a press notice next week concerning the possible building of dormitories for CNC students. The committee, which was formed at the end of last month, has conducted two meetings already to organize themselves and to discuss the topic.

Committee members will be trying to determine the feasibility of such an action by formulating studies which are indicative of student interest, financial expenditure and possible building sites, among other considerations.

One of these studies, a survey, has already been conducted and tabulated at the last student election; attached to the bottom of the voting ballots were questions concerning the dorm issue. Of the 536 students who answered these questions, 505, or 94.2% said they were local residents (Hampton, Newport News, Williamsburg, Poquoson, York County or James City County), and 31, or 5.8%, stated non-local residency.

Asked if they would like to see Christopher Newport College develop dormitories, 409, or 76.3%, said "yes," while 104 (19.4%) said "no" (4.3% had no response). Finally, they were asked, "Would you live in Christopher Newport College dorms if given the opportunity?" 48.3% (205) said "yes," with 47.8% (256) saying "no" (3.9% had no response). Student Association Vice President Bill Humphreys explained that a lot of the "no" votes were cast by married students who would not need dorm rooms.

This isn't the first time the subject of dormitories has been brought up. In fact, there have been five or six private business groups in the past who, because they had property adjacent to that of the college, have discussed erecting dorms as a business venture.

All the projects have fallen through due to a zoning law which prohibits any kind of housing except single family residences. President Windsor pointed out, however, that this would not be a problem on the land actually owned by CNC if the state approved plans to build dorms on campus. He went on to remark that "what we're considering now is not related to any of these previous projects."

Windsor outlined the two major considerations on the question. "First, we must decide if it is in the best interest of the college to have dorms. Certainly there are a lot of positive factors involved." He cited as an example the fact that a lot of students would like to live away from home, and that dorms would boost extra-curricular activities and "make CNC more cosmopolitan." In addition, because, as Windsor reports, "the school is being recognized more widely due to its expansion and enhancement, we have more students from distant parts of the state who would like to attend but can't because they have nowhere to live." The other consideration is financial feasibility. "In other words," Windsor says, "can we pay the increasing rates for construction without making the rent prohibitive?"

If the college does seek approval to build dormitories, they would be financed by a revenue bond which, unlike a general obligations bond, does not require a public vote but only a vote by the General Assembly. Since CNC operates on two-year capital outlay budgets, it would be desirable for the school, if it is decided to build dorms, to make their decision by January of next year. Then it would be possible for the request to be submitted in March to the General Assembly. At present, Windsor believes a decision may be possible in January.

If the dorms meet approval, Windsor cautions, they won't be high-rise buildings. "Massive structures are to expensive and are not feasible here." They would probably be modular structures with about forty students to a unit. Bill Humphreys stated that committee members may just visit newly completed dorms at George Mason University, Old Dominion University, or the College of William and Mary to obtain some ideas on

Week-long party sponsored by CAC in celebration of Oktoberfest

by Melissa Edeburn

Next week the Campus Activities Committee is sponsoring a celebration well-known in Germany. If you have ever been to Busch Gardens, you've probably heard all the laughing, stomping, and singing--emanating from the Festhaus. They're celebrating Oktoberfest, a festival denoting the changing of the seasons.

"A similar celebration began at CNC about five years ago," says CAC director Larry Shelton. "Here Oktoberfest means a break in the year where you have a week-long party. There's more entertainment than just our regular nights and it's a little bit better quality."

Oktoberfest kicks off on Monday, October 23. The entertainment begins Tuesday night with the screening of Wizards in the Campus Center Theatre. Admission is free.

"Joshua" will play in the cafeteria Wednesday night. Admission is $1.00, and to add a bit of German flavor, the CAC is providing one keg of beer at $.10 a glass as long as it lasts.

The Over-the-Hill-Gang will supply and cook hot dogs for a hot dog party in the cafeteria Friday. A band will also be performing, and admission is $1.00.

Saturday night "Blazin'" plays for a dance in the girls' gym. Admission is $1.00 with a student ID and $2.00 without. To top it off, there will be another keg of beer at $.10 a glass while it lasts.

Prizes in Education

The National Student Educational Fund is sponsoring, for the second year, the Better Information Project: Prizes in Education (BIPPE), a national competition to encourage and recognize student produced informational materials.

$500 awards will be given to each of the twelve best entries.

Individual students and student organizations are eligible to enter the competition. All materials may be in any media and must be aimed at improving the information available to students concerning campus programs, opportunities and experiences, such as orientation handbooks or guides for women reentering college. Materials must have been produced during the 1977-78 or 1978-79 academic years.

Application packets are available from the National Student Educational Fund, 2000 P Street, NW, Suite 305, Washington, D.C. 20036.

Mr. Lew Puller, Democratic candidate for the House of Representatives, made a short but volatile appearance at the forum Wednesday, when he was told he could not make a campaign speech.

Apologies demanded

Puller and Bell Clash on speech to be given at forum

by Kenneth Gillespie

The confusion about whether or not Lew Puller could speak on the issues of the ongoing congressional campaign cast a shadow over the Public Forum held Wednesday, October 11, in the Campus Center.

Puller, the Democratic candidate for the House of Representatives seat now held by Republican Paul Trible, contended that he was told by someone from the school that he would be able to speak on those issues at the forum, which was sponsored by the Student Association.

Bill Bell, president of the Student Association, does not know who supplied the misinformation to Puller; but Bell believes that while the Student Association must bear the responsibility for the incident, Puller's campaign staff must also share in the responsibility for the confusion.

According to Bell, Puller was informed well beforehand that he could not speak on the subject that he wanted to discuss, but that he would still be welcome to share the speakers' platform with the guest speakers. Puller, according to Bell, said that he would not appear at all; however, about 20 minutes before the forum was scheduled to get underway, he put in an appearance. He discussed the matter of his speaking with Bell again. Bell then apologized to Puller for the mix-up, and Puller then left.

When asked if the S.A. would send written apologies to Puller, Bell said that the Executive Committee had voted not to send a written apology. According to Bill Humphreys, S.A. vice president, the Executive Committee believed a written apology was not called for because Bell had already apologized verbally to all parties concerned, and because the S.A. believes that the responsibility for the incident must be shared between the S.A. and Puller's campaign staff.

what kind of buildings would be the most plausible at CNC.

The advisory committee, which will meet October 16, 24 and 30, plans to have a progress report ready on the issue for the November 9 meeting of the Board of Visitors. The committee represents every level in the college. The Dean of Students, Dr. Charles Behymer, is the chairman. Student representatives are Bill Humphreys and Student Association President Bill Bell. Mr. Mike Stamen, who acts in an advisory capacity in matters that would relate to the land on which the dorms might be built, Dr. JoAnne Squires and Mr. John Avioli represent the faculty.

Humphreys said of the committee, "I have never been on a committee which is so open-minded about a subject. I think that's a good approach."

Miller and Canada concerned over Saratoga

background and qualifications for being Virginia's senator. Canada believes that Warner showed that he could make tough decisions when he was Secretary of the Navy in the Nixon Administration and when he served as head of the Bicentennial Commission. Canada said that Warner believes in limited government and that there should be some tax relief for the taxpayers. Canada went on to say that Warner has "principles of caring for people and the principles that made Virginia great."

Miller said that the "Commonwealth suffered a tragedy when Bill Spong was defeated, and since then the Commonwealth has not had the representation that the people of Virginia deserved." Miller believes that his record as attorney general shows that he is responsive to the needs of the people of Virginia. He went on to say that Warner has already outspent him by $125,-

000, and he expressed concern that his opponent would engage in a media blitz. He went on to say that "there is a difference between bringing a Virginia experience to Washington and bringing a Washington experience to Virginia."

Dr. James Windsor, president of Christopher Newport College, in his closing address congratulated the students involved in planning the forum for bringing government to the people. He regretted the poor turnout.

After the forum there was a dinner at the King's Mill Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Canada attended the dinner, which turned out to be the highlight of the evening.

This reporter had the opportunity to talk to both Miller and Canada about some of the issues of the senatorial campaign. Miller thinks it is wrong to send the Saratoga to Philadelphia when it can be repaired more cheaply here and has sent a letter to the Secretary of the Navy about it. He thinks the issue is not yet resolved and that he could exert more pressure if he is sent to Washington as a senator. Canada explained that Warner believes that it is not appropriate for him, as a candidate, to involve himself in the political aspects of getting the Saratoga back to Newport News. Warner disagrees with the decision to send the carrier to Philadelphia but believes that he can get more accomplished after he is elected.

Both of the candidates are in agreement on the subject of a strong national defense. Miller supports the Humphrey-Hawkins full employment bill and President Carter's idea on a tax cut for the taxpayers. Warner thinks that Humphrey-Hawkins is inflationary and that the government cannot mandate a certain level of employment. Warner supports the Kemp-Roth tax cut bill that was just voted down in Congress. Canada said that Warner does not approve of the recent extension of the Equal Rights Amendment ratification deadline.

Miller said that his election would provide an "opportunity for the people of the state to feel that they have a representative in Congress who cares about them, the individual citizen." Canada said, "I support John Warner for the Senate for several reasons: first, the forum was called, 'Politics with Principles.' John Warner has principles and is a man who cares about people."

Student attends college to broaden his thinking and experiences

(SIS) Dr. H. Marshall Booker, Professor of Economics, had a student in one of his economics classes this past year who has provided another dimension to the value of a college education with the world of work.

"This past spring I was talking with a young student in a senior class in economics about his occupational and personal goals. 'I already have an occupation,' he said. 'I am a trained auto mechanic. I love my job and the pay is good. I am in college to broaden my thinking, examine new ideas, and find more experiences in my life.' In a world so necessarily vocationally oriented, this was a welcome thought."

The Office of Career Planning and Placement is located in the Campus Center, Room 208, and the office hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

For Health's Sake

'The Battle of the Bulge'

By Dwayne Thomas

Overweight and obesity are among the major nutritional problems facing America today. Statistics indicate that people of average weight have a longer life-span, have more energy, and usually feel better than those people who are overweight. Furthermore, overweight and obesity encourage such conditions as heart disease, kidney trouble, diabetes, high blood pressure, malnutrition, complications during pregnancy, and psychological problems.

Glandular malfunction, malnutrition, emotional tension, boredom, habit and love of food (probably the most common) are the main causes of overweight.

Consequently, in one's endeavor to lose weight, calories and exercise must seriously be considered. Food calories over and above an individual's daily requirement lead to a slow but certain increase in body fat (3,500 calories equal a pound of fat).

On the other hand, when the number of calories used during the day exceeds the amount consumed, the body oxidizes its supply of fat to produce energy, thereby resulting in a reduction of body weight. A daily decrease of 1000 calories results in approximately two pounds of weight loss per week.

To effectively lose weight, one must set up a practical diet plan consisting of all the essential nutrients and minerals. For a safe, gradual weight loss, a diet consisting of high protein, low carbohydrates, and low fat is desired. In considering carbohydrates, choose from the most nutritional sources, such as whole grain products and fruits that contain essential nutrients. Fats should come mainly from sources of unsaturated fatty acids and from such animal fats as butter and whole milk, which are good sources of fat soluble vitamins.

Losing weight requires a measure of discipline in curbing the amount of food eaten, regulating the type of food eaten, and increasing daily activity. Good luck!

EHO's and Headhunters remain at top of Intramural ladder

by Dennis Casey

The Headhunters continued to remain one game behind the league-leading EHO's in Intramural Football by defeating the Over-the-Hill-Gang 18-12. Burt Henderson of the OTHG continued to dominate the league in scoring by beating the Headhunters secondary for two long touchdown pass catches. Henderson has scored five consecutive touchdowns for the OTHG in the past three games.

In other action, the SOB's held off a second-half charge by Riley's Bounty-hunters to win their second straight game by a score of 12-8. In the only other game scheduled, the EHO's won by forfeit over the Bonecrushers. This is the third forfeit for the Bonecrushers and automatically drops them from the league.

Glen Russell: a talented addition to the CNC coaching staff

Glen Russell says, "It's something I've always wanted to try."

For Christopher Newport College this means the acquisition of an assistant basketball coach who has proven his worth in the high school ranks.

Russell, 42, replaces Paul Babcock on the staff of Coach Bev Vaughan and joins Tommy Kilpatrick as an aide. Vaughan is not sure just what Russell's chores will be.

Russell, a native of Aberdeen, N.C., is a graduate of Catawba College, where he played baseball. He came to Hampton High in 1959 as an assistant in baseball and basketball, taking over as head coach in the latter sport for Mike Anastasio in

The Crabbers were Group AAA runners-up in 1967 and won the state crown in 1969.

Russell transferred to what was then James Blair High in Williamsburg (now Lafayette) in 1971. He was out of coaching a year, then led Lafayette through the 1975-76 campaign.

Russell has also coached golf, guiding Hampton to two Peninsula District titles and Lafayette to one. He'll remain with the Rams as the golf coach and a driver's ed instructor.

Russell is married and the father of two children, aged 10 and 8.

Soccer Team remains undefeated

The CNC Soccer Team remained undefeated in Dixie Conference play with a 4-2 Saturday victory over North Carolina Wesleyan.

Leading the Captains were Tom Chalkley and David Crowley with two goals each. Chalkley contributed his two points in the first half, while Crowley scored one goal per half.

Saturday's win leaves the team in the Dixie Conference first place slot with a perfect 4-0 record. The next scheduled game is a 4:00 tilt with home team Mary Washington College on Wednesday, Oct. 18.

Lady Captains take on 26 opponents

Everything's big but the size of the players. The Christopher Newport College women's basketball team takes on its largest schedule ever--26 games--with its bulkiest squad ever--17--starting Monday, Nov. 17.

However, the one ingredient third-year coach Terry Gooding lacks is height.

Newcomers on the schedule, which winds up in March when the Captains sponsor their own tournament, include seven schools. They are Greensboro, Liberty Baptist, Randolph-Macon Women's College, Ferrum, North Carolina Wesleyan, Roanoke and Lynchburg.

There's also the tournament March 1-3, which will be for all Virginia colleges which don't participate in the state tournament. Gooding says as many as 11 teams could participate, but she's "hoping" for an eight-team field.

Obviously, the field won't be determined until after tournament pairings are made late in the season.

Gooding is understandably elated with the turnout. "We really rushed for it," she says. No wonder, after surviving last year's 4-16 nightmare, when only seven players comprised the entire squad for most of the campaign.

Top newcomers are Patty Kelliham of Phoebus, Poquoson's Karen Holloway and Susan Fishkorn and Tabb's Karen Foard.

Returnees are leading scorer Gwynn Drewry, Janet Waddy, Gail Seiberlich, Jill Willig and GiGi Johnson.

SOUND SOLUTION

by Ricky Dunn

Eric Carmen's new album, Change of Heart, can be described in one word: Sellout, with a capital S. Carmen has shown signs before of being one of rock's leading pop-rock writers, right on par with Lennon and McCartney. On this album he forsakes everything for commercial accessibility. What a waste.

Eric Carmen broke into national prominence as leader of the controversial Raspberries. While well accepted by the critics, they just couldn't generate album sales, even though they had a few hit singles, most notably "Go All the Way." The Raspberries were a band caught in the wrong time zone. Today they would be revered as a "New Wave" band, but in the early Seventies they were dismissed as Sixties copycats.

The last Raspberries album was an excellent cross-section of the rock-and-roll experience. The LP was called Starting Over, but it signaled the band's end. A year and a half later Carmen released his first solo album and was able to pull two Top Ten singles from it.

Boats Against the Current was Carmen's second solo effort. The album was bogged down with lengthy, sentimental pieces. There was only one true pop-rock cut on the album. Sales were poor.

So Eric decided to sell out all artistic motives here and go for the big bucks. Every song on the disc is a potential single. "Haven't We Come A Long Way" and "End of the World" are good stylistic copies of Player's imitation of Hall and Oates' blue-eyed soul; but who needs any more of that stuff?

As if to drive the Philadelphia soul message home again, Carmen includes a remake of "Baby, I Need Your Lovin'" that I'd rather not remark on.

The second side is more of the same slick stuff. "Change of Heart" opens the side and has all the ingredients of an AM hit. It'll probably make it because it's not such a bad song on its own; but taken in the album context, it just doesn't stand out much from the rest of the material.

"Hey Deanie" is the second cut on this side. Carmen wrote this song for Boats Against the Current but axed it at the last moment and left Shaun Cassidy to record it. Cassidy's version packs a lot more punch. Carmen overloads the song with horns and background vocalists, where Cassidy kept the song simple and straightforward, the way it should be played.

Eric Carmen used to be one of my favorite recording artists. I've got all of the Raspberries albums and all of his solo work. But, as much as I hate to admit it, this disc is garbage compared to what Carmen did on the last two Raspberries albums.

I hope Carmen will be making some kind of statement denouncing the album, saying he only released it to get out of his Arista contract, or something like that. If he doesn't, then we should all bow our heads and mourn the loss of a once great rock-and-roll talent.

Wednesday night's political forum, sponsored by the Student Association and ironically entitled "Politics with Principles," was a disaster.

The foundations of the disaster did not lie specifically with the Student Association; though Bill Bell's confrontation with Lew Puller over his invitation to speak at the forum was embarrassing to both the school and the Student Association. This confrontation was a matter of poor communication, and not, as Mr. Puller's persistent demand for an apology would indicate, a blatant disregard for the candidate himself.

The real disaster lies in the theme, which, though carefully put together and clearly stated in the invitations to the speakers, was virtually disregarded by both speakers.

What the small audience that gathered in the theatre heard were campaign speeches. Andrew Miller, though he began with a few appropriate thoughts on the subject, quickly launched off into the same mudslinging speech that was printed in The Washington Post from his Smithfield visit earlier the same day. Joe Canada simply added the word "Principles" to a standard build-up speech on John Warner's "patriotic background."

After watching the excitement and anticipation in the SA offices the past few weeks and the obvious hope that the candidates would put aside their campaigns long enough to look into the theme seriously, it seems the Student Association received the short end of the stick. They are left with a bad name in The Daily Press and a lot of verbal abuse from Puller, who has blown the whole deal out of proportion.

The SA deserves credit for their efforts. The students deserve ridicule for attendance (as President Windsor stated in his closing comments, the next theme should be on lack of concern on the part of the electorate); and the candidates should learn at least to practice the theme, if they won't confront it.

Letters

Dear Editor,

This is in response to an editorial written by Jarrel Elliot and William C. Henley III that was published in the 10 October 1978 issue of the Captain's Log on page 11.

The complaint the gentlemen are lodging is that the present practice of making a headcount of patrons at the library at a given time to, in the opinion of the above two gentlemen, determine those hours when patronage is largest, is on the library's part highly inefficient and capricious. The gentlemen suggest that a much more efficient method would be a survey in the form of a questionnaire whereby students could indicate the hours they would prefer.

What the gentlemen fail to realize, however, is that it was in the form of a survey questionnaire that the current hours were established. It would appear that the library also felt that this would be the most effective method of scheduling those hours most convenient to the student body.

The current headcount practice is to determine the number of people using the library at a given time. Even though it could conceivably be used in the future to determine the hours receiving the largest patronage, thus establishing a standard for future reference, its current intent has nothing whatever to do with modifying the present schedule.

In regard to the statement that the "majority" of CNC students are in no condition to come to the library Saturday morning. I hesitate to think that it was the intention of the library to establish hours catering to those students who regard studying as something to do when the hang-over subsides. I doubt that those students sincerely desiring to study will find the 9:00-3:00 hours inordinately restrictive.

It is also COMMON knowledge that any student who truly desires to utilize the library's services Saturday morning will stay within his limit Friday night.

Dear Editor,

It has come to the attention of the SIS that the CAC (Campus Activities Committee) at Christopher Newport is having problems with the student body. The students are not supporting the activities sponsored by the CAC. When the students do not support a dance or show or any other activities the CAC sponsors, the money used to pay for it goes down the drain. This money actually comes from the comprehensive fee paid by each student for every course they take at Christopher Newport. A great deal of the money is spent on advertisement. There are posters,

Huge Political Rally at CNC! Hey, you democracy fans, Peopleschoiceville came to Shoe Lane U. Wednesday evening at 6:00. The rally, a brainchild of SGA Admiral Dingdong Bell, "packed 'em in." An enthusiastic throng of approximately 14 captains and captainettes greeted the candidates for major public offices. As students and faculty jockeyed for seats near the exit, they were addressed in a most inspiring manner by the candidates, Mr. True Pusher, Mr. Andrew Budweiser, and Joe Mexico (surrogate for Liz Taylor) who responded to the topic "Politics with No Principles."

Their speeches, which were covered live by WCNC, WCBN, leaders are that unskillful, they couldn't do any more harm even if they tried. I mean, just imaging how bad it would have been if Nixon had been bright.

Sometimes an experience can be so overpowering that even a seasoned reporter can get the ole proverbial "lump in the throat" and be at a loss for words. Luckily, however, my trusty photographer came up with just the right shot to capture the true essence of these fine public figures. His picture, seen below, is clearly worth thousands of words from my humble pen.

Well, till next week's Admiral's Stump, groupies, remember it's not important who you don't vote for, just so you don't vote. At least you won't feel dumb when after the election you see one of those clever little bumper stickers reading Don't Blame Me, I Voted for...

I mean, with an experience like that, the only political "reality" I can see is that democracy was the real loser (speaking of losers, why don't they do something about the ones who edit this rag?).

Ed. Note: After the election, Rosemary will be assigned to the political desk in Uganda.

The Eighteen Minute Gap

and WONT, rarely strayed from the topic at hand. As reporters from Ladies' Home Journal and Easy Rider furiously scribbled down their every word, students were given reason once again to believe that the system works.

Although such phrases as "my opponent is just spinning his wheels" and "my opponent is crying in his beer" were heard, the candidates kept the discourse at a high level throughout. They captured the imagination of the audience with eloquent explanations of how principles really do matter more than petty partisan bickering and narrow party affiliations.

Anyone who attended could leave feeling once again secure that the ship of state was not about to sink. With men like these in public office we need never fear that it will do anything at all. Incompetence is not really that bad a characteristic for prospective leaders. The way I see it, as long as our flyers, handouts, and signs all over, informing the students of the events coming up. But the students never come to them. It seems there are more non-students who are interested in these events than the students. For example, at the October 4th concert of Briggs Riggs, about 60 % of the small crowd that showed up were non-students.

There is really no reason for the students' non-support. The activities are top quality entertainment presented at a low cost. The CAC does not make a profit.

To slow down the money losses in these activities, CAC Director Larry Shelton says that they may have to adjust to the situation by cutting down on the number of them. He also says that the CAC may also have to present lower quality entertainment because it would be a waste of money to pay for an expensive show and no one comes to it. Right now the entertainment at Christopher Newport is top quality, but if the students want it to stay that way, they should come out and show it. After all, how much have they got to lose if they do not enjoy the show? Only a dollar.

Dear Editor,

Re response from Jeanne Newport, 10/10/78, to my letter of 10/3/78: A thousand apologies sir/madam. I stand revealed as a cruel abuser of the defenseless pronoun. As an excuse, I can only say that my mind was reeling from indifference curve analysis in a 3-hour Econ class. I did indeed err in calling slang pronouns. Thanks and may your participles never dangle.

Since my error may have obscured the meaning of my letter, I'll add this observation to the unchallenged portion. TEMG shows great potential, and I look forward to it, but it's occasionally dull and/or predictable.
