WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY (CPS) - People who have overdue parking tickets at WVU will now have to pay off their fines with blood donations to the campus blood bank.

Parking violators who weigh less than 110 pounds or have colds or diseases such as hepatitis still will have to pay overdue fines in cash, blood donor coordinator Dolly Clawges added.

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA-DAVIS (CPS) - Radio station KDVS agreed to print a disclaimer excusing the school and the student government from any responsibility for a nude photo of the staff it included in its new fall program guide.

"This was a way for us to show our listeners that we are giving them our all," explained programming director Grant Foerster at a meeting called to resolve the controversy.

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA (CPS) - Student Affairs Vice President Art Sandeen withdrew permission given the Playboy Channel to film a comedy show on campus because it would be using the UF name for profit and because "the university has stood for a long time for a much more enlightened view (of women) than that magazine stands for."

UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND (CPS) - Worries over athletes' privacy led university officials to change their new drug testing procedure to let athletes urinate without an observer actually watching them.

Under the new rule, a Health Center official watches the athletes undress, go into a cubicle and then waits until the athlete reemerges with a urine sample.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY (CPS) - American colleges have not yet suffered the long-expected Great Enrollment Drop of the eighties mostly because they've learned how to sell themselves better, a new report released by the Educational Testing Service said recently.

Some colleges now spend an average $30 per student on recruiting. Private colleges may spend as much as $500 per student.

BAYLOR UNIVERSITY (CPS) - Officials, responding to complaints that one of its classroom buildings literally stank, found evidence skunks had invaded the building's basement.

In retaliation, officials began luring the animals into traps with food, closing the doors behind them, dropping the closed traps into plastic bags, drowning the skunks in the river and then stuffing them.

They'll soon be "put on display for all interested viewers" at the campus museum.

Student Association renamed SGA

By David Becker
staff writer

In what has been the most successful meeting this semester, the Student Association's name was reverted back to its original title, the Student Government Association.

During the meeting, the fifth this semester, the SGA announced that it is currently undergoing measures to freeze funds of several clubs. All groups were reminded that any programs that they present should benefit the college as a whole. Groups are encouraged to invite greater participation from fellow students, and they were also reminded that a ¾ majority vote from the Executive Board of the SGA can change the status of any organization from funded to recognized.

Notices were distributed to the clubs who have missed SGA meetings so they can check the current status of their groups.

A fundraiser dance for the yearbook, video yearbook, and Operation Smile was announced by Wes Noffsinger, CPB Assistant Director. CNC hopes to raise even a small portion of the $100,000 needed for the plane fare to the Philippines.

The ad-hoc committee on alcohol awareness was announced by the SGA, and the first meeting of the committee is scheduled for the third week of November. The Field Hockey Team was approved as a funded, recognized club.

1987 Homecoming Co-Chairmen Lauri Poole and Ginny Alexander announced that the Chamberlain has been procured for the evening of Friday, Feb. 20. The Boneshakers will be the entertainment. On Saturday, Feb. 21, Christopher's and the Terrace will once again be filled with music from the past 25 years as part of the continuing celebration of the college's 25th anniversary.

The SGA President Paul Sisak also announced that there are currently several openings to serve on committees which report to the college. Any student who is interested in serving on a committee should see Sisak in the SGA offices.

Also stressed at the meeting was a need for the clubs and fraternities to let the rest of the college know what they are doing. Not only will this result in more participation, but it also lets the print and video yearbooks know about the events so that they may include them in their respective projects.

Godwin recalls change in education

By Rick van Rijn
news editor

Former Gov. Mills Godwin praised CNC as a "remarkably successful endeavor" in his 22 Oct. speech, which was co-sponsored by the Dean's Colloquia Committee and the 25th Anniversary Committee in continued observance of the college's silver anniversary.

Godwin, who was governor from 1966-74, recounted the tumultuous changes in higher education in Virginia that he witnessed during his public service.

During the early 1960s, related Godwin, Virginia's population and economic indicators pointed to the Commonwealth's having a little more than 2 percent of the nation's college age population.

A growing crisis made itself felt, said Godwin. In the fall of 1964, enrollments in Virginia's colleges and universities were at 1.54 percent.

For Virginia to pull its "national load" of 2 percent, it would have had to double the enrollment of its four largest institutions at that time.

To offset this crisis, the 1964 session of the General Assembly provided for the appointment of a higher education commission to undertake "a comprehensive study and review of higher education to be used as a basis for effective long-range planning as to objectives, needs and resources of public and private higher education in the Commonwealth of Virginia."

The commission's report, submitted in December of 1965, laid the groundwork for converting CNC, among other then-fledgling colleges, into independent senior institutions.

In regard to CNC, the commission report cited the need for an urban college in northern Hampton Roads to serve those in the military and their dependents.

education for the urban population, including minority students; (2) graduate and professional education, largely part-time, for the urban population in general; and (3) response to the public service and research needs with the various problems of densely populated areas, the most critical component today is graduate and professional education.

Godwin warned against what he phrased as "ruinous competition" between senior institutions and community colleges for enrollment

Godwin said that the new type of student, often older and part-time, places heavy demands on the college to which he commutes.

This demand stems from the number of students and their special needs.

Godwin warned against what he phrased as "ruinous competition" between senior institutions and community colleges for enrollment.

This could lead, according to Godwin, to more state control.

The report also noted the commission's belief that CNC "would be a distinctively urban university, attuned to the needs of a great industrial and commercial center, rather than a college of the traditional liberal arts type."

Godwin also discussed the State Council on Higher Education's 1979 plan, which focused on the respective missions of the urban institutions.

He also pointed out that while the typical definition of an urban college's mission includes (1) access to undergraduate

In conclusion, Godwin praised the early work of the higher education commission. "We owe much to the vision and work of those legislators and individuals who began the requisite planning process," said Godwin.

Frats throw party at ECU

Brothers of Sigma Tau Gamma and Sigma Pi were introduced to Halloween ECU style on a recent roadtrip to East Carolina University at Greenville, North Carolina.

Greenville closed three blocks of their city so 7,000 college students could throw a block party which would last until 4 in the morning.

Police had their hands full trying to control students.

At 5 a.m., it was evident that their efforts were not all that successful as a layer of cans and bottles covered the streets.

In the eyes of the students from CNC, the party was a big success. Sigma Tau Gamma's Delta Alpha chapter provided living accommodations to fellow Sig Taus and several brothers of Sigma Pi.

Some of the visiting brothers wondered how anxious the city of Newport News would be to close three blocks of Warwick for a college New Year's Eve party.

MY SOAPBOX

Don't be a Victim!

Recently, a young coed was forced onto campus and sexually assaulted. Earlier this semester a William and Mary coed was raped at that campus.

Several years back, CNC was plagued by a series of rapes. And less than a month ago, two young women, one a W & M student, were murdered along the nearby Colonial Parkway.

These are by no means isolated incidents. Students, particularly young women are frequent victims of crime.

According to government figures, one of every three crimes happens to someone between the ages of 12 and 24.

Nearly 41 million crimes occur in the U.S. each year including 20 thousand murders. These are chilling figures.

This week, I would like to devote the opinions page to tips on assuring that you are protected from crime at school, on the streets and at home.

Patrick

BLOOM COUNTY by Berke Breathed

Avoiding crime at school

Always park your car in designated parking areas. Avoid poorly lit lots and those near wooded areas. (See Map)

Be aware of what kind of car you park next to. An assailant could easily be perched in that van you just parked next to.

Walk with a friend if you can. Ask a friend to walk you to your car when you are ready to leave that evening class or dance.

Always check your car before you get in. An assailant could easily be hiding in the back seat waiting for you to return.

Don't flash a lot of cash. A wad of bills may catch the eye of that pretty girl in the Terrace, but it may also attract a mugger who is only interested in your money.

Call the Campus Police in the event of an emergency or if you notice anything suspicious. The emergency number is 599-7253.

Avoiding crime at home

Always lock your doors. In over half the household burglaries, the intruder entered without force. Even if you are just going to the mailbox, lock the door.

Be sure your locks are adequate. You should have deadbolt-type locks that extend one inch into the frame. Sliding glass doors should have "charley" bars in addition to traditional locks.

Going away for Thanksgiving break? Be sure that your house or apartment always looks lived in. Stop newspaper delivery or ask a neighbor to remove them. Set timers to turn lights off and on. Televisions in a dark room also give the appearance of movement inside the house.

Avoiding crime in the streets

Avoid walking in risky areas such as deserted streets, wooded areas and dark alleys or parking lots.

Walk near the curb, on lighted streets at night and against the traffic. Travel known routes. In addition, keep an eye out for cars that pass you. If you see one more than once, take extra precautions.

If possible, let someone know where you are going and when you will return. If something happens to you, you know someone will call authorities when you don't show up.

Avoid shortcuts through parks, tunnels, parking lots or alleys.

Consider carrying a whistle or any other type of noisemaker. Loud noises may scare a mugger, or potential mugger, away.

Guest Editorial: Media against Robertson

By Kevan Vanek
guest editorial

A young voter asks his father for advice on how he should vote in the 1988 presidential election.

"Dad," the son begins, "I've been studying a great deal of literature on political thought, and I wanted your advice before I reached my conclusion on this matter."

"There's a candidate who seems ideal: He was a Phi Beta Kappa student at Washington and Lee, and he graduated magna cum laude."

"He then served as lieutenant in the Marine Corps, and afterward, he earned his jurisdoctorate at Yale Law School. After receiving a master of divinity degree, he pioneered a communications operation, a graduate university, and a law school."

"His name is Pat Robertson. Do you know of him?"

"Pat Robertson?" His father growled back, "Certainly I know of him. He's that Christian, right-winged, fundamentalist, fanatic who rebukes hurricanes, claims he can heal, and says that God causes him to speak in some strange language."

"If he's elected son, he'll force us all to worship, read the Bible, and maybe even go to church."

"He'll declare wars and change legislation because he'll say, 'God told me to do it.'"

"I won't vote for such a man. How can I trust a man who says that God talks to him?"

Does this exchange sound ridiculous to you? It may be, but, a similar scenario is erupting all over the United States today.

All forms of media and thousands of voices are rising to denounce Pat Robertson as a serious candidate of the 1988 presidential nomination.

The bulk of criticism is based upon his religious convictions; these voices are disqualifying Pat Robertson as a valid political candidate. This treatment seems to me to be what de Tocqueville described as the "tyranny of the majority."

"...the individual of unorthodox views may find his political career closed, be ostracized, shunned, spurned, and scorned by his fellow citizens...the kind of terror and intimidation that does not destroy, but prevents existence; that does not tyrannize, but compresses, enervates, extinguishes, and stupefies people till each nation is reduced to be nothing better than a flock of timid and industrious animals, of which the government is the shepherd."

— Great Political Thinkers,
William Ebenstein, p. 537

Perhaps the media can be compared to sheepdogs that bark and frighten the herd into place.

Have we justified de Tocqueville's fears?

Have we as students and citizens regressed to mindless, timid sheep that let others think for us?

In the end de Tocqueville pinned his final hope on the education of man so that he could obtain independence of character and rational knowledge.

It is, therefore, in the hope of education that I ask you to consider this subject more carefully.

If you have taken pains to confirm the various reports against Pat Robertson and taken time to form your own opinion based upon found knowledge, then I have no argument.

But if you have merely let other loud voices mold your mind while you sat idle, neither challenging nor confirming the validity of such reports, then I hope to stir up your minds toward individuality.

The battle cry which has resounded in my ears is, "Separation of church and state!", that is, religion and politics do not mix.

But is this an original cry, or is it really the echo of Christian men, much like Pat Robertson, who in the past, fought and hazarded their lives to free men from the terrors of religious oppression?

Our civil liberties grew from the roots of religious toleration, and the men and women who fought for these rights would bellow back, "Yes, please separate church and state. Separate Pat Robertson from his religion and judge him on his statesmanship."

Do we love our precious liberties enough to fight for them? Because if the tyranny of a majority who disagree with Pat Robertson's religion can oppress and extinguish him from office by their loud barking, our freedoms as men, women and citizens are being assaulted.

Others who cry "Separation of church and state" fear a storm of religious legislation. Some of these people fear Pat Robertson's morals and fear that he will legislate accordingly.

What morals does Pat Robertson affirm, do you know? Do we object to Biblical morals? Do we want an immoral man governing our lives? Some point to school prayer as a chief issue, but have you explored this issue?

Factually, Pat Robertson has lobbied to restore only the freedom of choice in our state schools. He maintains that it is unconstitutional to forbid prayer and worship, and it is unconstitutional to command and enforce prayer and worship.

Pat Robertson is fighting for our liberties when he replies, "Yes, please separate church and state. Separate the state from a student or teacher's religion. Don't command a man to be an atheist, agnostic, Christian, Moslem, Jew, or any other faith, and let them practice peacefully."

As stated earlier, if you have searched and formed educated convictions on this matter, I have no quarrel; but if you have joined the battle cry against Pat Robertson without sufficient knowledge, beware.

Students of CNC, wake up. Whether you agree with Pat Robertson's religious convictions or not, it is actually you, your nation, and your future that is being attacked.

Further, it is you who are to blame if you feign neutrality, ignorance, or apathy, because by your silence, you consent to this "tyranny of the majority" who disagree with Pat Robertson's religious stand.

In conclusion, I return to de Tocqueville, for he dreaded apathy, mindlessness, passivity, and viewed these as the greatest evils to our freedoms. Simply because a majority of the press and public voices lambast Pat Robertson does not make them right, and we must constantly stir ourselves up to searching for the truth, as I hope you will in this matter.

New book on history of LSD reveals CIA having used acid

By Andrew Breslau
college press service

As the latest wave of anti-drug fury sweeps the nation, a book chronicling the history of LSD — and how the very government that's leading the charge against drugs today used to feed drugs to its citizens — is flying off the shelves and filling up campus lecture halls.

"Acid Dreams: The CIA, LSD and the Sixties Rebellion" recounts in unprecedented fashion the little-told story of the U.S. intelligence community's longstanding and intimate relationship with the powerful hallucinogen.

To tell the story, authors Martin A. Lee and Bruce Shlain obtained some 20,000 pages of once-classified government documents, and conducted interviews with many leading figures of the sixties counterculture.

Of course, when one thinks of LSD one thinks of Haight-Ashbury, the Summer of Love, the Grateful Dead and Timothy Leary — the Pied Piper of the flower children — who touted acid as a benevolent mind expander, a chemical for inducing religious experiences.

But there were others who had very different ideas about what to do with LSD.

"Fifteen years before the hippies started dropping acid," Lee notes, "the CIA and the Army were utilizing the same drug not to expand the mind but to control it. This is the central irony of LSD — that it's been used both as a weapon and a sacrament."

Beginning in the forties under the auspices of programs with such Bond-like appellations as "MK-ULTRA" and "Operation ARTICHOKE," the CIA sought to develop a "speech-inducing drug for use in interrogations." After working their way through cocaine, peyote, heroin, uppers and downers, the spymasters even tried a marijuana extract called "TD" before dismissing it as too unpredictable for the espionage trade.

Then, in the early fifties, the CIA took notice of Dr. Albert Hoffman's chemical problem child: LSD-25.

Lee and Shlain trace the byzantine path of the drug's development through people like Major Gen. William Cressy, chief officer of the U.S. Chemical Corps, who wanted to dose thousands of American subway riders with "madness gas" (an aerosol version of LSD) just to see what would happen.

Unsubstantiated charges that the Army actually slipped LSD to unknowing citizens — causing a few of them to develop mental illness — still abound. There's also the hapless experiments of Dr. Jolly West, a former CIA contract employee, who once killed an adult elephant with a massive shot of the drug. Dr. Paul Hoch advanced the science of lobotomizing mental patients before, during and after administering LSD to them. Hoch went on to become New York's commissioner of mental hygiene.

Possibly the most intriguing character is Capt. Alfred N. "Cappy" Hubbard, a crewcut, pistol-packing LSD Johnny Appleseed.

Hubbard, an admirer of J. Edgar Hoover, was one of the most ardent and persuasive proselytizers of LSD's transcendent possibilities. During the fifties, he gave the drug to people from all walks of life, including Aldous Huxley and Vancouver's Catholic archbishop, who subsequently recommended the experience to his parishioners in a letter.

There's a "Who's Who" of unlikely trippers in "Acid Dreams." Time, Inc. founders Henry and Clare Booth Luce, Ethel Kennedy and Groucho Marx are among them. The authors disclose that one of President Kennedy's girlfriends turned on with Timothy Leary, and hint the president himself may have taken the acid test.

And now, as the president and Congress call for a holy war against substance abuse, the book also reminds us that such pious declarations almost always have hidden political undercurrents.

"The Nicaraguan contras are heavily involved in cocaine trafficking, and the U.S.-backed Afghan rebels are major players in the poppy trade," Lee charges. "If Reagan is really serious about dealing with the drug problem, he should stop supporting those groups who are bringing the drugs into the country."

Just as the CIA seems to have a persistent hand in Central America, "Acid Dreams" suggests it had a hand in the black marketeering of LSD in the late sixties and early seventies.

The authors focus on Ronald Stark, a paunchy man with a huge walrus moustache, both a CIA informant and master con artist. He spoke ten languages, and was as difficult to pin down as the drug he peddled.

In a four-year sojourn through the acid underground, Stark produced nearly 50 million hits of illicit LSD before colliding with the law in Italy in 1975. He was arrested, and charged with drug trafficking and armed banditry. But just as suddenly, he was released. Judge Giorgio Florida explained that "Stark belonged to the American secret service."

Mazzarella: man of many roles

By Jeanne Everitt
staff writer

Do you know where professors go "after hours" — after the last lecture has been presented, after the last paper has been graded, after the last student conference has been held? Dr. Mario Mazzarella of our history department plays a variety of roles in the local community.

Mazzarella views his political involvement as a form of community service. He said he sees commitment in this area as support of a candidate with progressive social and economic views, without regard to party affiliation. Two years ago he participated in a Virginia state convention as a delegate.

He also supports Sancturary House in Norfolk, an organization providing shelter and care for unmarried women, awaiting the birth of their children.

Through the Richmond-based Christian Children's Fund, he supports a 15-year-old girl in Kenya. Financial contributions to this organization cover her living and educational expenses until she graduates from high school.

Dr. Mazzarella is a member of Amnesty International, which, based in London, sponsors a local chapter. The nonpartisan, nonpolitical organization speaks for people all over the world who are suffering religious, political, or social oppression. It pressures governments through correspondence to the appropriate authorities.

At the request of the international headquarters, the local group has adopted a Jehovah's Witness, in Greece, who has been imprisoned for his religious beliefs. As a conscientious objector, he cannot perform military service in uniform, and at present, the Greek government does not recognize an alternative service for such individuals.

Letters, cards, and petitions on behalf of this "prisoner of conscience" will continue as long as necessary to obtain his freedom, said Mazzarella. Mazzarella compared these communications to water dripping on a rock — it may be some time before a change can be seen but something WILL happen.

The organization subscribes to nonviolence — nonviolence on the part of the adoptee and on the part of each member. And through nonviolence, the organization has been successful in obtaining the freedom of some of these victims. Mazzarella said, "even governments respond to pressure and do not like to be known as tyrants." He personally, has written to authorities within left- and right-wing dictatorships, the Soviet Union, South American countries, South Africa, and East Germany.

An interest of a very different nature is equally important to Mazzarella. And, he considers it a part of his commitment to the community although he said he enjoys it as well. As a member of the Tidewater Appalachian Trail Club, he helps to dig holes, cut up fallen trees, and build bridges along the portion of the trail which the club maintains.

Do Mazzarella's varied roles impact on his role as a teacher? "It has a spillover in my professional life," he said. "It keeps me interested, alert, and aware in a variety of ways." Anyone who has seen Mazzarella on the campus or in the classroom will probably agree.

FOR THE RECORD

VINIE VINCENT — Invasion

This guy looks like a fruitcake so I figured I'd give him a bad review, but after I noticed Vinnie bumper stickers on most of the CNC music professors' cars, I decided to give the record a second listen.

Vincent, formerly a lead guitarist with Kiss, has put together a decent band and put out a fantastic album. On bass he has acquired Dana Strum, previously with Danny Spanos and (briefly) with Ozzy. Unknown Robert Fleischman (vocals) and Bobby Rock (drums) round the unit, and if you can tolerate Fleischman's somewhat annoyingly high-pitched vocals, the group's energetic performance, intelligent songwriting (at least musically), and raw power will soon win you over. From the opening riff and feedback-laden lead of "Boyz are Gonna Rock," you know these guys mean business.

Crunching rockers such as "Animal" and "Twisted" abound and "Shoot U Full of Love" are classics that will probably be required listening for Music 202 next semester.

Lyrical Vincent doesn't have that much to say, but most of you who will listen to this aren't discriminating enough to care anyway.

If you want socially relevant commentary, watch CBN while listening to this record.

Joan Rivers' new show starts off with success

By David Becker
staff writer

It was a moment millions of Americans had been waiting months to see. It had been banned on a Boston television station and local residents could only imagine the visuals of it all as it was simulcast over the airwaves courtesy of a radio station.

Tears rolled down the left cheek as the newest talk-show host on television said, "It's been five months - so much has been said - so much has been written - I'm so happy you could all be here." "The Late Show" starring Joan Molinsky Rivers had begun.

It has been 21 years since Joan Rivers made her debut on "The Tonight Show," a moment she still credits as her big breakthrough. Rivers opened her show by hugging the audience members in the front row. This may seem a bit sentimental, but if you have read her best-selling autobiography, Enter Talking, you can understand her actions. It was not just opening night for Rivers, but the end of a long, unsteady climb to the top, a climb which got its humble start as a teenage Joan Molinsky was performing at Camp Kinni Kinnic.

The opening night of her own show meant that Joan Rivers was no longer dreaming, but living a wonderful reality.

On a set similar to that of late night rival Johnny Carson's, Rivers joked about being banned by the Boston station. "There are two places I'll never be seen...Boston, and Tom Selleck's bedroom."

David Lee Roth was the first guest, joking with Rivers that he had never "been with a lady who is doing it for the first time." As Roth left the stage shaking his posterior at the audience, Rivers announced that he was just "a simple boy with a dream."

The boy who refused to grow up, Pee-Wee Herman, was the second guest. He arrived bearing gifts, albeit half-used. Herman announced that he is working on a script for a new movie to follow the phenomenally successful "Pee-Wee's Big Adventure," and that he is in the process of creating a new theme park, Pee Wee Land.

Looking like a young Elizabeth Taylor in the movie "National Velvet," Elton John, sporting a large black velvet bow in his hair, credited his longevity in show business to his lyric writer Bernie Taupin. Elton John also entertained Rivers by singing her favorite song, "The Bitch Is Back."

Rivers seemed to be singing to Carson as she grabbed the microphone, looked into the camera, and harmonized, "I'm a bitch, I'm a bitch, I'm better than you!"

WHAT'S HAPPENING AROUND TIDEWATER

CNC Theatre opens season with The Imaginary Invalid

By Ann Catherine Braxton

On the evening of Friday, Nov. 7, the first entry of the CNC Theatre's 1986-87 season will open with Moliere's last play The Imaginary Invalid (1673).

This rollicking farce features seasoned actors as well as authentic costumes, mannerisms, and furnishings of 17th-century France.

Invalid is directed by Dr. Bruno Koch, who, hailed in a recent issue of Port Folio as "one of the best-kept secrets in Hampton Roads," brings to this production decades of international directing experience, including 11 as head of CNC's theatre department.

One anticipates a delightful evening of theatre when Koch's talents combine with those of actor-playwright Moliere (1622-1673), who poked fun at the antics of his upper-class contemporaries.

He ridiculed religious hypocrisy (Tartuffe), marriage (The Jealous Husband), greed (The Miser), and misanthropy (The Misanthrope).

In The Imaginary Invalid, he ridicules Argon, a compulsive hypochondriac who insists that his daughter marry a doctor although she is in love with someone else. Moliere also ridicules the medical profession.

Koch explains that the greatest challenge of this production was the handling of 300-year-old farce.

"Farce is difficult to play and requires broad, sweeping action," said Koch. Though it borders on exaggeration, the characters must be believable. Farcical action requires a high level of energy, fast-paced precision. Spatial composition requires great control. The actors will find it especially challenging to work with 17th-century costumes. The men wear high heels, hats, and wigs."

Assisting Dr. Koch and theatre coach/set designer Hank Sparks is skilled designer Elwood Robinson, a Norfolk native, who developed and built the set and furnishings for Invalid.

A graduate of the University of North Carolina, Robinson, who has been involved in theatre since early childhood, has worked for the Virginia Stage Company, the Virginia Opera, and San Francisco Conservatory Theatre, and public theatre in New York.

His degree in theatre design included courses in carpentry, drapery, lighting, electricity, color, costuming, drafting, and the history of theatre.

Robinson explains that the harpsichord which accompanies Argon's daughter and her lover in the second act comes from the Virginia Opera.

The Imaginary Invalid will open Nov. 7 at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Theatre and will also be performed on the evenings of Nov. 8, Nov. 14 and 15. Tickets are $5.

Campus Clips

English Practicums

Each semester the English Department provides opportunities for students to gain practical experience in writing in public relations, journalism, etc., through English 491, Practicum in Public Writing.

Internships are available on-campus and in the community.

If you are interested in enrolling in English 491, you should contact Dr. Jay Paul in McMurran 206 (599-7072) before you register.

Positions available

The Student Government Association is now taking applications from students interested in working on committees during the Spring Semester. Positions are available on activities, governance and liaison committees.

Interested parties should contact the SGA officers in CC-229 and CC-232 for applications or more information. Find out what you can do to enhance student life at CNC.

AMA

The American Marketing Association will hold a food container decorating party on Thurs., Nov. 13, at 2:30 in the Campus Center student lounge. The CNC community is welcome to help. Come out and meet the members of the American Marketing Association.

Staff Meeting

The Captain's Log will be holding a staff meeting Monday, Nov. 10 at 3:15 p.m. All staff must attend and all are welcome.

American Marketing Association

The American Marketing Association would like to invite all students (all majors welcome) to join the association.

Members develop a network with other students who are learning to apply their knowledge to the world outside of academia.

Throughout the semester, AMA will invite prominent professionals from the community and the college to further enhance the college experience and to provide insight of the "real world" to all members of the CNC community.

There will be a meeting on Tues., Nov. 11, from 12:15 to 1 p.m. in CC-233.

Cross the bridge to opportunity; join AMA.

Scuba is back in full swing

The intermediate scuba diving course is the PADI Advanced Open Water diving course. In order to take LSPE 194, you must have a PADI Open Water certification card or have taken LSPE 178 Basic Scuba, which is the PADI Open Water scuba course.

In intermediate scuba you will learn about Natural Navigation, Compass Navigation, Night Diving, Search and Recovery, and Deep Diving (60-100 ft.). There are introductory lectures in the use of equipment, diving physics, physiology, navigation, and advanced diving problems.

Natural Navigation is learning how to use what you see on the bottom of the water you are diving in to navigate by, "I have been by that tree stump before, that means I'm about 10 yards from the exit." You will learn how to navigate a square pattern and a series of U's.

Compass Navigation is the use of the compass to navigate by. You will demonstrate competency by navigating a square pattern and a triangle. Selection of compass, style, and direct or indirect reading will also be discussed.

Night diving is a lot of fun. Different animals are active at night than are during the day. Many of the fish that are hard to observe during the day are less active at night and can be watched easier. Selection of dive lights and pros and cons of various kinds will be covered.

Advanced scuba is the PADI Rescue Diver course. To take advanced scuba you must first have taken LSPE 194, Intermediate Scuba. By the end of the course you will also have to be certified in CPR by either American Red Cross or American Heart Association. If there is a need, a CPR class will be arranged in the Rescue Diver course.

Rescue Diver is scuba lifesaving; you will learn how to manage an accident scene and effective recovery of an accident victim. This is not to suggest that scuba diving is dangerous; it's not. Actually there are more accidents to swimmers than scuba divers. Divers seek additional training to help prevent accidents.

In the rescue class there will be academic lectures on Self-Rescue, Diver Stress, Diving First Aid (equipment and procedures), Emergency Management (readiness and accident management), Equipment Considerations (common problems and releases), and an exam.

Since scuba is not a spectator sport, there are aquatic sessions to develop psychomotor skills. Some of these are: swimming and non-swimming assists, panicked diver response, underwater problems (exertion and alternate air source ascents), missing diver procedures, surfacing the unconscious diver, in-water artificial respiration, equipment removal during artificial respiration

Degree awarded Scuba posthumously

By a special resolution of the Board of Visitors of Christopher Newport College, a baccalaureate degree was awarded posthumously to Cynthia "Cindy" Elizabeth Daniel on October 22.

It is the first posthumous degree ever given by the College. Miss Daniel had completed 115 hours of the 124 hours required for graduation when she became ill in January 1986. She had planned to graduate in May.

The degree, a Bachelor of Science degree in Accounting, was presented to her parents, Billy and Shelby Daniel, formerly of Front Royal. Miss Daniel was the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew R. Williams of Front Royal and Mr. and Mrs. William G. Daniel of Newport News, formerly of Front Royal.

College President John E. Anderson conducted the private ceremony along with Vice Rector of the Board of Visitors Erwin Drucker, Vice President for Academic Affairs Richard M. Summerville, Vice President for Student Affairs Charles E. Behymer, Dean of the School of Business and Economics Terry L. Maris and Chairman of the Department of Accounting and Finance Robert E. Fellowes.

Mr. Fellowes was Miss Daniel's advisor and was the moving force behind the awarding of the degree.

exits, first aid procedures for pressure related accidents, and the practical exam of two accident scenarios.

Advanced Scuba is an involved course at the end of which you will feel more confident in your ability to deal with an accident and, more importantly, be better able to prevent accidents from occurring.

Search and Recover is one of the most enjoyable of the advanced dives. You will learn search patterns to find a lost object. Once the object has been found, rigging, tying rope to it, and lifting the object to the surface is accomplished.

The final dive, the Deep Dive, shows you the proper way to deploy a decompression stop. All sport dives should be non-decompression dives, however, if deep dives are being made, a safety decompression stop is desirable. You will see the effects of pressure on various objects such as a tennis ball, wet suit material, and your buoyancy control device. To end the dive you will make a simulated decompression stop.

Intermediate scuba is an enjoyable scuba course as stress is placed on the diving portion of the course. Ninety percent of the course is spent in the water, scuba diving.

The dives in intermediate scuba may also be done on a weekend trip to Florida. Information is available from your instructor on the first night of class.

Sports in spotlight

CROSS COUNTRY – For the seventh straight year the Dixie Conference championship trophy sits in a CNC trophy case, but there were a few anxious moments for CNC.

The Captains won the conference title Saturday by a slim, 25-30, margin over Methodist College as sophomore Bob Harvey took the individual championship with a 27:43 clocking.

Freshman Donny O'Beirne was fourth in 28:04 and senior Steve Kast finished fifth in 28:28. But the performances of junior Keith Marshall (seventh in 28:34), and sophomore Robert Taylor (eighth in 29:05) may have saved the day for CNC.

They charged from behind to overtake several Methodist runners in the second half of the race to lift CNC to its seventh straight title.

Harvey, O'Beirne, Kast, and Marshall won All-Dixie Conference honors.

BASEBALL (6-6-3) – A very satisfying fall season.

CNC wrapped up its off-season schedule with a .500 mark, playing against tough competition, and without probably its two best pitchers.

Along the way the Captains picked up victories over William and Mary, Norfolk State, and Dixie Conference foe Virginia Wesleyan.

Bobby Holland led CNC at the plate with a .417 batting average and 14 RBI's in 11 games, while catcher Chris Rankin hit .333.

Sam Haywood had a fine, 2.18 ERA and a 1-1 record in 20 2/3 innings, strinking out 16.

Lady Captains go to Dixie tournament

VOLLEYBALL (12-17, 3-9) – After a couple of warm-ups Wednesday, the Lady Captains get to host their big show, the Dixie Conference championships, which will be held at Ratcliffe Gym Friday and Saturday.

CNC travels to Longwood to play the Lady Lancers and Randolph-Macon prior to the Dixie Tournament.

The Lady Captains split the only two matches they had last week, defeating North Carolina Wesleyan, 15-6, 15-1, 9-15, 18-16, but dropping a decision to Methodist, 15-11, 15-12, 10-15, 15-2.

Senior Dawn Terry once again led the Lady Captains with a .365 attack percentage during the week.

Although final pairings would not be available until Wednesday, CNC is likely to meet UNC-Greensboro in the tournament's first match at 4:30 p.m. Friday.

ATHLETES OF THE WEEK

DAWN TERRY – The senior from Newport News had a .365 hitting percentage in the week's two matches, with 30 kills and seven errors in 63 attempts. She also had ten block solos and 14 digs.

ERIC PYLE – The youngster from Blacksburg, VA, who plays like a veteran, played a major role in CNC's two 3-1 wins over Division II competition, including his first goal of the season against Longwood.

Captains are in national championship

By Wayne Block
sports information director

Pioneers. Maybe that is the best description of the Christopher Newport soccer team.

Each year for the past four years the Captains have explored new territories in winning, at least on a CNC scale, and now has come the last rung. For the first time in the school's history it will participate in the NCAA Division III National Soccer Championships.

CNC learned late Sunday night that it would travel to Bethany, W.Va., on Sunday, Nov. 9, to face Bethany College in a first-round game.

Dixie Conference champion UNC-Greensboro hosts Johns Hopkins in the other regional semi-final. CNC defeated both of those teams during the regular season, but has never before met Bethany.

The Captains wrapped up that opportunity. After a mid-season upset loss to Greensboro, CNC charged to 10 straight victories, including two impressive wins over Division II competition last week, to earn its spot in the tournament.

In fact, CNC will be playing in two tournaments. The Captains captured the East Division championship of the Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association (VISA) and will meet the West Division's runner-up Nov. 12, in Newport News.

But first comes the NCAA date. It was won through sheer determination.

Wednesday CNC overcame an early Randolph-Macon goal as senior Bill Dittmar tallied twice around a goal by Chris Frazier, to give the Captains a come-from-behind victory.

Frazier's goal was the 30th of his career, breaking the CNC record held by Andre Bell.

Saturday, after Longwood tied the game, 1-1, early in the second half, All-America Gerard Mosley came through with his sixth game-winner of the season and freshman Eric Pyle iced it with two minutes to play.

The Captains have now scored 59 goals in their 20 regular-season games, a school mark.

The finishing record for the team was 17-3 overall and 5-2 in the conference.

Burns wins Intramural Tennis tourney

By Chip Lomax
assistant intramural director

The Intramural staff would like to thank all participants for their time and effort in the Intramural Tennis Tournament.

We are proud to say that the three week event was the largest and most successful tennis tournament ever. The final number of players for the men's draw was 20 and for the women's draw there was 7.

There were only a few forfeits overall and all players seemed to enjoy the competition.

The draw for the men had five rounds and those who made it to the semi-finals were Dr. Hoaglund vs. Dr. Teschner (in the Philosophy Dept. showdown) and Dr. Cummings vs. Zane Burns (the only student to make it this far).

There Dr. Teschner pulled out a straight set victory over Dr. Hoaglund, 7-6(5-4), 6-4, and Zane Burns defeated Dr. Cummings 7-6(5-4), 6-2.

In the finals, Zane Burns overcame some trouble in the second set and was victorious over Dr. Teschner, 6-1, 6-4.

The women's final was Brenda Tyndall vs. Bonnie Phaup. The two girls battled for 3 long sets before Brenda Tyndall took control and defeated Bonnie Phaup, 46-6, 4-6, 3.

Again, we would like to thank all participants and fans for making the tournament so successful. We are looking forward to the Spring Doubles Tournament and we hope you are too!
