75¢ draft beer will also be available during

The reinstitution of the Terrace salad bar and the availability of packaged and draft beer in Christopher's from 11 to 2 p.m. are just two of the many decisions made after the open forum held by Campus food Services.

The forum was held to discuss the concerns of students about campus food services and events. Attendance at the forum was higher than anticipated.

Salad bar prices in the Terrace were dropped a dollar from $3.25 to $2.25 for all you can

The Terrace will also offer happy hour, Monday through Thursday, from 3-7 p.m. with $1, 16 ounce draft beer. On Fridays, happy hour will be from 2-7 p.m. with 16 ounce draft

The Captain John Smith Library added a member to its staff on October 1. Mary H. Daniel filled the new position of Reference Librarian.

The library began offering reference services last year, and "someone was needed to be in charge of the reference section and to develop it as a department," Daniel said.

Daniel, who was the Reference Librarian at the University of Tennessee, explained that accepting the new position was the type of career change she wanted to make.

"This job offers more challenges and is a new situation for me; I will be working with more undergraduates than before. The library will be developing new programs, and I'm looking forward to being a part of that," she said.

Daniel is particularly enthused about expanding the reference services. "By advertising, letting the students know of our services, developing our current reference collection, and working with the other library programs," she said, "we're hoping to expand our services.

Moving to the Peninsula when her husband accepted a position at Old Dominion University, Daniel has found that she enjoys what the area has to offer.

"I like the students a lot, and I really enjoy working with the people here. I love this area, also; it's very interesting and beautiful.'

Convocation Suggested for Class Unity

Dear Editor

I would like to comment about the College Administration's neglect for the unity of the classes at Christopher Newport.

Recause I am a 1981 graduate of one of the area high schools, it seems to me only appropriate that students should feel the unity and oneness that being part of a class brings.

Since being here at CNC, I have seen no class togetherness except for the activities that clubs sponsor.

One possible solution to this apathy would be a convocation presided over by the College president.

In one way, it would give each presence. Students need not think, "I've been here for two years, and I still don't know anybody in my classes."

In a convocation, students may express more concern towards succeeding in college so that they can finish with their respective classes.

Attitudes ever present at our school show the lack of concern of students about finishing on time or simply finishing at all. By bringing the students together in this way, students could learn more about the drive which makes some students want to succeed; they may later learn to want success for themselves.

As a growing college, CNC should take steps to ensure that all class members do not remain strangers. If convocations are not formed, students may never see the College president until their graduation. Presently students may have seen him on campus, but thought him to be just another face in the crowd.

ROTC Cadets Experience Ranger Training

by Lee-Ann Smith technical advisor Bob Torche

In the late-afternoon light, ROTC cadets busily assembled their tents as cold, damp rain drizzled throughout the woods at Fort Eustis. A black-capped cadet marched purposely through the camp, surveying the progress with a quick glance.

"I don't see any pyramids!" he yelled.
"Come on cadets, get those tents up! Let's

While one cadet, her face decorated camoflague green, was busy with the appointed task, a senior cadet approached her, his beret tilted on his forehead.

"Where's your weapon soldier?" he barked.
"I don't know, sir."

"I want 25 push-ups when its found."
"Yes, sir!" she answered.

The ROTC eadets in black berets are members of CNC's Ranger club; the "soldiers" putting up tents could soon be Rangers after completing the necessary training required before ioining the club.

ROTC Ranger Detachment training took place September 28 and 29 at Fort Eustis and Little Creek Amphibious Base. The training is usually conducted four times a year, during which the cadets participate in a number of activities designed to increase their physical and mental stamina, and to give them a chance to put what they learned during class into action.

The activities, involving small-unit tactics, included: establishing a patrol base, recon patrolling (searching the area), setting up a protective perimeter around the patrol base, tactical road marching, conducting a SALUTE report (a report on the size, activity, location, unit, time, and equipment of the enemy), and classes concerning basic military operations.

Although the operation was overseen by Captain (Promotable) Garcia and Sergeant First Class (Promotable) Sampson of the United States Army, the training was conducted entirely by the beret-qualified cadets.

"I feel it's very rewarding that I am able to pass my knowledge and experience onto cadets who are pursuing careers as future officers," explained Cadet Lieutenant Zach Randall.

Upon reaching Fort Eustis at 3 p.m. on Friday, the cadets established a patrol base where their classroom knowledge proved extremely helpful, especially when they efficiently set up a perimeter.

Individual Tactical Training (ITT) consisted of the cadets observing, and participating in, low crawling, high crawling, three-second rushes, and combat rolls. The most memorable of these activities was the low crawl, during which cadets laid flat in wet, sticky mud and crawled quickly forward; staying as low as possible while holding their weapons in an accessible position.

While attempting this exercise, the cadets were told to "Eat that dirt" and many stood up, not only to have a mud-covered uniform, but also with the yellow-brown mess caked on their chins, noses, and foreheads.

After classes in tactical road marching, the cadets witnessed an exhibition of hand-to-hand combat by the beret-qualified cadets who obtained their knowledge at Advanced Camp '84 in Fort Bragg, North Carolina this past summer.

The cadets bedded down long after the sun set, first they had to participate in recon patrolling and other activities before settling down in their small, two-person tents at 2 a.m. After four long, comfortable hours of sleep in a cold tent, the cadets woke up at 6 a.m. to break camp and prepare to leave for Little Creek Amphibious Base to tackle the obstacle and confidence courses.

"The purpose of the obstacle and confidence courses is to test the physical stamina and ability of the students," explained CPT(P) Garcia. "It also motivates the students, and increases their unit cohesion."

The courses, which consist of scaling short walls, hurdling waist-high logs, swinging across water on ropes and crawling on one's back under a web of wire, are "physically stressful, therefore they help the cadets to learn to deal with stressful situations, while it builds character," CPT(P) Garcia said.

Throughout the entire weekend the weather, known as "Ranger sunshine," was cold, grey, and rainy. However, it had no effect on the cadets who kept their morale up by screaming, yelling, singing, and growling.

"The yelling psychs-up the cadets," CPT(P) Garcia said. "When you are very tired physically, you need to be motivated mentally."

When everyone completed both courses, the cadets headed back to CNC, where they were still so exhilarated that they "dedicated" push-ups to themselves, the bereted cadets, and the Rangers.

"Some of these kids are 17 and 18 years old," said Cadet Captain Dennis Kennedy,

A qualified cadet watches as a Ranger-in-training swings across a barrier.

"but they came out here, they were motivated, and they did a super job!"

The cadets felt that the training at Fort Eustis was a good learning experience.

"The recons went well," said MSII Michelle Masco, "a few of us made mistakes, but everyone learned from them." Masco also said that the extra training she is receiving by joining the Rangers will help her be a better officer by showing her how "everyone needs to work together."

"I think I became a better person because of the experience," said MSI Robert Dillon. "I learned discipline and it prepared me for Airberra school." "I hope I will be able to effectively use what I've learned," said MSII Gina Olds.

"The cadets will really benefit from all the experience and knowledge they learned this weekend. It has made them better people and helped them to feel better about themselves," said Cadet Lieutenant Marco Conners.

The CNC cadets will be able to put what they learned at Ranger training to use when they will participate, and compete, with William and Mary cadets in a joint field-training exercise the weekend of October 26.

With a smile spreading across her face, MSI Elizabeth Bryant said, "We'll use everything we learned to beat William and Mary!"

Help on Call:

Athletes Should Exercise Special Care for Personal Property

While athletes keep in shape by jogging, playing basketball, working out in the weight room, and playing volleyball, they should also exercise special care for their belongings.

Many thefts occur when people leave their valuables unattended at the tennis courts, track and soccer fields, and inside the gym. Items frequently disappear even though the owner is only a few feet away or in the company of a large number of people.

Unfortunately, locking up valuables in a locker is no guarantee that they are protected from theft. Most thefts happen in the men's and women's locker rooms, so great care should be taken toward leaving belongings in a safe place.

Some people try to protect their property by "hiding" it under a towel or sweatshirt while they are exercising. This action does not often work, however, and many items including purses, wallets, rings, watches, and clothing are stolen from students, faculty, staff, and visitors.

Sometimes, no matter how many precautions are taken, thefts do happen. The best way to prevent losing valuable property is to leave it at home or to lock it in a secure location.

Soccer Team Explodes to Defeat St. Andrews

by David M. Bear

The Christopher Newport Captains continue to follow their rollercoaster path so far this season, judging by their play last week. On Wednesday, October 3, they played host to Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association rival Lynchburg College, and then on Saturday, October 6, they travelled to take on their Dixie Conference opponent St. Andrews College.

The march against Lynchburg was mainly a contest of playing catch-up. CNC lost Lynchburg drew first blood in the game, scoring in the first half for a 1-0 lead. That lead would last all the way until the 50-minute mark of the game.

CNC's Chris Frazier tied the match at 1-1 with a beautiful header which went right into the corner of the net. He was assisted by freshman Donovan Gutzmore.

Although the Captains' offense applied most of the pressure in the second half, it was not until sophomore team captain Gerard Mosley was moved up front from his sweeper position that CNC got any really fine chances.

Lynchburg, on the other hand, made the most of their only two chances in the entire second half. At the 71:27 mark of the game, Peter Allen pushed a shot past CNC's Rick Longobardi to put Lynchburg up, 2-1. Less than a minute later at 72:05, Dave Manning gave Lynchburg its insurance goal for a 3-1 lead.

Despite some tremendous pressure by Frazier, Gutzmore, Mosley and Karl Greaves, CNC just could not get one in the net and they took a 3-1 loss.

The next match found the Captains playing St. Andrews College down in Laurinburg, North Carolina. This was to be a day where CNC's offense would shine. The Captains started things off on the right foot as Frazier put one in the net at the 4:00 mark to put CNC up 1-0.

St. Andrews' Tom Flecker tied the match briefly at 1-1, scoring at 17:00. This was as close as St. Andrews would get for the rest of the game. Sophomore Kevin Wagner got into the scoring act as he took an assist from fellow sophomore John Gallorini and put CNC up 2-1 at the half.

The second half was all CNC. Sophomore Bill Dittmar led things off with a goal at the 55:00 mark, assisted by sophomore Lance Casey. Frazier struck again for a goal at 72:00.

Greaves added another one three minutes later and was assisted by Wagner and Frazier. Freshman Jae Shin wrapped up the scoring with a goal at the 80:00 mark to give the Captains a 6-1 rout over St. Andrews. The win upped the Captains' record in the Dixie Conference to 3-1 and 4-5-1 overall.

CNC will be on the road for both matches this week as they travel to Rocky Mount, N.C. to play North Carolina Wesleyan College on Saturday. October 13.

Distance Runners Improving Each Week

by Steven Grinstead

The Christopher Newport men's cross country team is showing other colleges that CNC is a strong Division III team and becoming stronger each week.

On September 29, CNC travelled to Maryland to compete. CNC clashed with Salisbury State in a 8,000 meter distance race (approximately five miles).

The top five finishers for the Captains placed second, third, fourth, sixth, and eighth. CNC defeated Salisbury State, 23-32. This is the team's second consecutive win with no defeats.

Danny Pittman placed first for CNC and second overall. He crossed the finish line at the 26:03 mark. This was ten seconds behind Salisbury's top runner, who is considered to be a good athlete.

Pittman at one time during the race was as far as 100 meters behind the leader. Pittman quickly put on the after-burner and caught up. With about a half mile to go, Pittman was ten meters behind the leader.

Finishing second for CNC was Ron Borsheim. Borsheim and Pittman.were tied at the three mile mark. Pittman pulled away very suddenly. Borsheim finished at the 26:38 mark.

The big news of the day concerned CNC's number three runner, Steve Kast. Kast probably ran his best collegiate race ever.

Coach Vince Brown stated, "He ran strong all the way and stayed within range of Pittman and Borsheim." Brown is convinced if Kast works hard and keeps improving the team will have a third "outstanding runner."

Also improving are CNC runners Phillip

Harris, Keith Marshall, and Joe Hurff. These three runners are all newcomers to this year's squad.

Harris (sixth place) and Marshall (eighth place) both improved over their last distance run of 8,000 meters. Each knocked off two minutes in their times.

Brown commented, both runners "ran very well." Harris finished the race at 27:53, while Marshall came in at 28:35.

Finishing sixth for CNC, 13 overall, was Joe Hurff. Hurff ran the course in 31:45, three minutes faster than his previous run the week before.

CNC has one more dual meet remaining. It will take place at St. Andrews. Then the team will compete in the State Meet on Oct. 13 and the D.I.A.C. Championship on Oct. 20.

Exhibit Displays Best in Area Talent

by Stacy Richardson

The Juried Art Exhibit on display at the Peninsula Fine Arts Center presents a treat for area art buffs.

The work on exhibit is representative of the area's most talented artists. Eighty-one works by 59 artists adorn the PFAC.

Art spectators are treated to intricate drawings, well-crafted tapestry, as well as acrylic paintings and other forms of art beauty.

This art enthusiast was taken in by the beauty, complexity, and simplicity of the newly opened, annual art exhibit.

The acrylic work of Jane Kauzlarich seemed to capture and maintain much of this art viewer's attention. Her paintings "Sex Object," "Writhe," and "Nice Girl, Lovely Girl" captured the sensuality present in her work.

Robin Gresham's "A Processional Through the Peonies" captures an intricacy of detail in its presentation of four women against pink peonies and a colorful background. The "Untitled" work of Claire Rygg earned an award of excellence from juror Dr. Harry Rand. Her works, characterized by the use of dark colors, brings out the solemn and serious qualities in the woman she depicts in her "Untitled" works #1 and #2.

The Juried Exhibition exemplifies the many different interpretations of art by area artists and craftsmen. Each work displayed captures the personality of its creator.

Festival to Feature Variety of Items

by Ann Catherine Braxton

During the weekend of October 11-13, the Peninsula Council of the Arts will sponsor its Eleventh Annual Medley of the Arts in Coliseum Mall. This festival combines displays, visual arts, and performing arts.

Sixty artists and craftsmen from all over Virginia and surrounding states comprise the Artists' Market, a wide variety of fine-arts displays ranging from paintings and photography to jewelry and wood carving. These artists and craftsmen will compete for over $3000 in prizes. The juror for this year's show is Michael Wesley Monroe from the National Museum of American Art at the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D.C.

Local artists and craftsmen from the Peninsula Fine Arts Center will demonstrate their talents in Thalhimers Court. The Virginia Beach Arts Center will feature "The Children's Art Garden" for ages five to nine and "The Adolescent Mural Painting" for ten-to-fifteen-year-olds.

Throughout the festival, a wide spectrum of entertainment groups will perform at the J.C. Penney stage and at the Montgomery Wards performing area. Performances include the Chamber Ballet, the Dixie Gold Cloggers, the Sound of Swing, and the Virginia Opera Association.

IVCF Meeting

The event central to Christianity is the resurrection of Jesus Christ on the third day after his execution by crucifixion. By defying death, Jesus showed that He was not just another man or prophet, but the Son of God. Inter-Varsity exists on this campus only because He arose.

It's easy to think that people are Christians for no reason, because they can't cope with the "real" world, or just because generations before them were Christians. Why would someone deny himself an easy life, separate himself from society, and open himself to possible ridicule and persecution, to help him cope?

Why have thousands died and many more risked their lives to preach this resurrection? True Christianity is so much more than a shallow social contract or lifestyle!

Come to our large group meeting as Tom Kenney reveals "evidence of the Resurrection." All interested parties are invited to come hear why Christians exist, We will be meeting in lecture hall N-125, so don't hesitate to bring a friend, Wednesday at noon.
