Ten-Miler Proves To Be a Winner

Christopher Newport College's Annual Ten-Miler attracted a 225 percent increase in the 1983 race over the 1982 race. One hundred sixty-five runners started and finished the course.

Overall race winner in the Men's Division was David Romaine who ran the ten mile course in 52 minutes and nine seconds. Craig Allen captured second place with 52 minutes and 12 seconds, and Ron Borshiem, a CNC Cross-Country star, finished third with 52 minutes and 73 seconds.

Valerie Ambrose won the Women's Division in one hour 11 minutes and eight seconds. Valerie Edwards was the second finisher with the time of one hour 11 minutes and 44 seconds. Lynn Weiss finished third with one hour 12 minutes and 21 seconds.

The youngest runner was Laura Stevens, aged 11; youngest male was Mike Scholl, aged 15. The oldest male runner was Vernon Geary, aged 70. The oldest woman runner was Jeannette Nelson.

"I think CNC is gaining a reputation for putting on good runs," commented Registrar Robert Netter. "We received calls from out-of-state people who had checked into the Williamsburg hotels and wanted to run." (Continued on p. 6)

Social Work Scholarships

The Christopher Newport College Social Work Program relays the following information regarding scholarships for graduate work in social work.

Note the March 30 deadline. Further information is available from Cheryl Mathews, director of Social Work, A315, 599-7111.

The Hampton Roads District of Virginia Chapter of NASW will again have the privilege of naming the recipients of two scholarships of $500 each. The scholarships will be for the 1983 Fall semester.

The scholarships are open to first or second year graduate students in an accredited school of social work. Preference is given to students attending a Virginia school.

Application deadline is March 30. For an application write to Eunice B. Whitehurst, ACSW, 713 Belmont Street, Chesapeake, VA 23320.

Unidentified Flasher Brightens up Library

by Linda Dozier

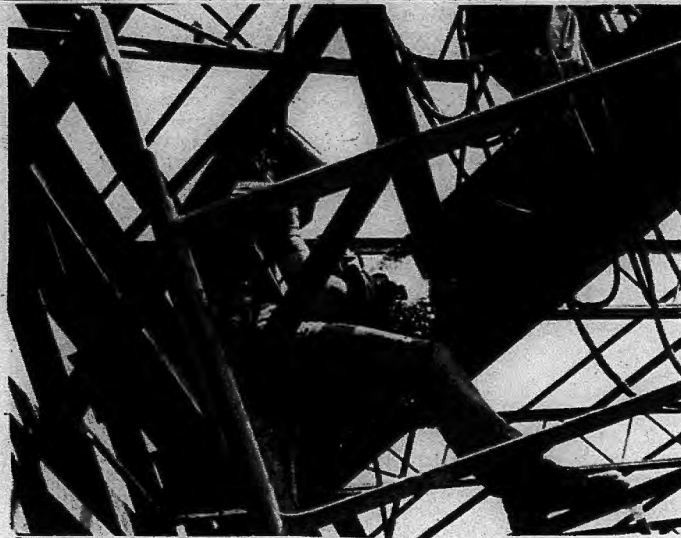

A local library patron was flashed by an unidentified man on February 16 at approximately 8:30 p.m. in the Captain John Smith Library.

The student had been studying in a study carrel when the man, who was wearing a sweatshirt, came out from behind the shelves and flashed her. The student reported the incident to the student on duty in the library who called campus security.

Security arrived at the library and found the suspect. The officer at the scene was holding the man by his wrist and was proceeding to accompany him outside the library when he broke loose from the officer.

Upon exiting the library, the man slammed the outside glass door so hard that a window was shattered.

Because of this occurrence, the library staff has tightened its security with the aid of the campus police.

Campus Center construction continues.

UCAM Invites Students to Play War Games

by Chantele Bump

A small group of people at Christopher Newport College have formed a new chapter of the national organization United Campuses to Prevent Nuclear War (UCAM). The group has had three meetings and is still in the organizational stage.

Last Spring during Ground Zero Week, the Union of Concerned Scientists (UCS) presented Dr. Martin Buoncristiani of the Physics Department with the idea for the new chapter of UCAM.

Getting started took time, but Dr. Buoncristiani, also a member of UCS, now heads CNC's UCAM chapter.

The average person doesn't spend much time thinking about nuclear warfare. UCAM's objective is to provide the average person with educational information about nuclear war.

"UCAM is," explains Dr. Buoncristiani, "an organization that doesn't advocate any kind of position on nuclear war. It's primary function is educating people on facts and letting them reach their own conclusions."

The idea is for citizens to influence politics by actively voicing opinions against nuclear war.

In April, students are invited to participate in Firebreaks: A War/Peace Game, which is patterned after war games played by national security experts.

"In the course of the game, ordinary citizens will have a chance to examine the hard choices that any head of government would face in a crisis situation that could lead to nuclear war."

Anyone interested in UCAM or Firebreaks may contact Dr. Martin Buoncristiani at G218 or by calling 599-7192.

VFWC Offers Scholarship

Ruth Kernodle, director of Gerontology, announces that during the 1982-84 biennium, the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs will award scholarships to individuals pursuing careers in gerontology, i.e., any area of the application of geriatrics, such as Psychogeriatrics, Social Work Practices in the Aging, Health Care Administration, and Public Administration.

Those individuals presently working with the elderly who have no academic training and those with continuing education needs in the practice of geriatrics are also eligible.

Each recipient will be limited to a maximum grant of $300; the exact amount of the grant will be determined by the scholarship committee.

The deadline for application is May 1. Anyone who is interested in applying should contact Mrs. Laura Davis, Education Chairman, Junior Woman's Club of Hilton Village, 37 Shirley Road, Newport News, VA 23601.

TNCC Students Able to Transfer as Juniors

by Scott Helm

A recent issue of The Times-Herald carried an article which stated that a mutual agreement between Christopher Newport College and Thomas Nelson Community College can now provide a smoother transfer for students from TNCC.

In an amendment made to a program started a year ago, CNC has expanded the agreement from 18 to 25 degree programs. The agreement allows a TNCC student with an associate degree in several areas to enter one of 25 academic areas at CNC with junior status.

The agreement covers the following TNCC programs: liberal arts, science, business administration, human services, fine arts, and education.

Keith McLoughland, CNC director of Admissions, said that since the agreement was developed the number of TNCC students transferring to CNC has increased probably by 5 to 6 percent.

He also said the "number of all students in all categories from all schools has been on the increase."

McLoughland also said that on March 10, a similar agreement was signed between CNC and Rappahannock Community College and in the near future a similar agreement is expected to be signed with Tidewater Community College.

Development Program Keeps Teachers on Top

by Chantele Bump

"The other significant group of leaders on this campus, besides the students, is the faculty," states Dr. Elizabeth Daly, chairman of the Faculty Advisory Committee. To provide a quality education for students, teachers must keep up with the constant flow of new information.

The Faculty Development Program "is designed to keep faculty members current in knowledge and skills. Most of it," says Dr. Daly, "is teaching effectiveness and keeping current in one's field."

This program provides grants for full-time faculty members wishing to update their knowledge and skills. To receive a grant, an application, explaining the activity for which money is needed, must be filed with the instructor's department, the FAC and the Vice president of Academic Affairs.

The faculty members of the instructor's department must first recommend the project. The project is recommended by the FAC if the activity described will have educational value for students as well as the instructor.

Projects which have received a positive recommendation from the FAC have been funded fully or partially depending upon the availability of support.

Instructors receiving grants must submit a follow-up report to their department, the FAC and the VPAA.

The grants are used for a variety of activities including research, workshops, symposia and courses.

For example, Dr. Edward Weiss of the Biology Department once received a grant for a week-long workshop held at the University of Notre Dame. Without the grant Dr. Weiss would have missed the workshop, which dealt with computers in biology education.

The grant covered tuition fees, room and board charges and transportation.

The Faculty Development Program gets funding from several sources, but there is not always enough to go around.

Last year, the program made use of $8,686. Part of this money was 4.21 percent of the amount raised from the College Fund Drive. The Academic Affairs Budget also allots money to the program.

Grant recipients average fifteen (since the 1975-76 academic year) faculty members per year. Previous grants have ranged in amounts from $50 to $2,500.

Some type of faculty development has always been a part of the college experience. (Continued on p. 6)

OTHG Elections

The Over-The-Hill-Gang will be accepting nominations for, and conducting elections of, officers for the coming year on Wednesday, March 30 at 2:30 p.m. in the Admiralty Room.

All active members are urged to attend this meeting as plans for the balance of the semester will also be discussed.

sent the latest knowledge in these fields as it relates to maintenance of health in the older person.

In the afternoon there will be six workshops which will address the different interests of the audience including health professionals, non-health professionals and para-professionals, senior citizens, adults with concerns about aging parents, and volunteers who work with elderly persons.

There is no registration fee but pre-registration by March 18 is necessary. Lunch is available for $4 by requesting this at the time of pre-registration.

For additional information on pre-registration, phone the Peninsula Agency on Aging (874-2495).

Fighting Fear of Technology Should be Education's Goal

"Educating for Excellence in a Technological Age" was the topic of a lecture given by Dr. Donald Senese on Friday, March 4. Dr. Senese is the assistant secretary to the Office of Educational Research and Improvement of the U.S. Department of Education.

In his talk, Dr. Senese stressed the theme that our society is moving from an industrial economy to an information-service economy. It is estimated that 70 percent of all persons will be employed in information processing fields by the turn of the century.

Fueling this change is the technological revolution which we are currently undergoing, the basis being dramatic developments occurring in the computer sciences.

According to Dr. Senese, many fear these changes because with them comes the loss of many traditional jobs which currently exist. Dr. Senese, however, is optimistic about the future, believing that the technological revolution will open new jobs to those trained for them.

According to Dr. Senese, education is the key to dealing with technology, and educators are responsible for devising programs which will prepare students to change occupations as many as two or three times within their careers.

Dr. Senese went on to describe many of the programs which the Department of Education is currently sponsoring to help schools throughout the country cope with this challenge.

On Friday afternoon, Dr. Senese met informally with Christopher Newport's student teachers, members of the Student Virginia Education Association, and some faculty members.

During this session, he described more fully the role of the Department of Education in promoting quality education in the US.

He also answered specific questions directed to him by students on topics ranging from his philosophy of education to his reaction to specific educational innovations.

On Saturday morning, Dr. Senese was interviewed by Dr. James Morris of CNC's History Department for a segment of the program Crossroads, which was aired on the CENTEX network this week.

In addition to heading the office which is responsible for promoting educational research and improvement, Dr. Senese serves as chairman of the Subcommittee of Education and Technology for the Federal Inter-agency Committee on Education.

He also represents the US at the 24-member nation Center for Educational Research and Innovation of the organization for Economic Co-Operation and Development on which he has been elected to serve as a member of the six person Executive Group.

S.E.A.'s Fund Raiser Pits Lady Captains Against Faculty

To raise money for the Eastern State Hospital Educational Program, the Student Educational Association (SEA) is sponsoring a basketball game between the Lady Captains and members of the Christopher Newport College faculty and staff.

This fund-raiser, which is to be part of Spring Fest, will be held on Tuesday, April 5, at 7:30 p.m. in Ratcliffe Gym.

Through this game, the SEA hopes to raise $1,000 for the Activity Fund at Eastern State. CNC students can also benefit from this game as there will be a contest for the club or organization that has the loudest cheering

For a Change Visit Yorktown

by Terry VanDover

Historical attractions are so common in Virginia that we take them for granted. And because there's so much to see, we often miss interesting places that are not widely publicized.

When out-of-town guests or relatives visit, we usually take them to see Williamsburg. If you're like me, you've probably seen Williamsburg more often than you've really wanted to.

To me, Williamsburg has come to mean crowds of people, tourists who drive like maniacs, and spending too much money. Or Busch Gardens, which also means crowds and money, but without the history.

What's a penniless student to do? I like history; I like to take my friends to interesting places. But I confess: I, too, had fallen into the expensive Williamsburg habit, ignoring the rest of historical Virginia.

Then, I visited Yorktown. I had always thought, "What's a Yorktown, except a big grassy battlefield?" I had lived here for 15 years before I ever discovered there was much more.

The best part of the Yorktown tour is that just about all the historical sites are free. Unlike Colonial Williamsburg, Yorktown is under the control of the National Park Service. We pay for it with our taxes, so we don't have to pay admission "at the door."

"Living History" at the Moore House in Yorktown.

It might even be argued that, historically, Yorktown is more significant than Williamsburg. After all, Yorktown is the place where America's independence was truly won.

Certainly our independence was declared in 1776 in Philadelphia. But it was at Yorktown, on October 19, 1781, that English General Cornwallis' troops surrendered, ending the Revolutionary war and our struggle for independence.

A tour of Yorktown should begin at the National Park Service Visitor Center, at the end of the Colonial Parkway in Yorktown. Don't confuse this with the Victory Center on Route 238. The Visitor Center is free; the Victory Center isn't.

At the Visitor Center you can see a film, titled Victory at Yorktown, explaining the historical event.

Also housed in the Center are rare artifacts, including General Washington's original campaign tent, interpretive maps and a recreated eighteenth-century warship.

An observation deck overlooks the battlefield, and park rangers conduct tours and answer questions.

From the Visitor Center, you can get in your car and take a driving tour of the battlefield. Among the sights are Washington's headquarters, Surrender Field, and original artillery. Signs along the way explain each attraction.

Then you can take a walking tour of Yorktown itself, and see several historic houses, including the Customhouse, the Courthouse, and Grace Episcopal Church.

The Town Center on Main Street has a "please touch" exhibit, including authentic replicas of Revolutionary War uniforms which may be tried on.

Two especially interesting houses are the Nelson House, home of a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and the Moore House, where the surrender agreement was negotiated and signed.

These two houses offer "living history;" costumed actors treat you as a guest in their eighteenth-century world. Unfortunately, this season the Nelson House will charge a $1 admission fee.

(A little theatrical review here: at the Nelson House, I felt like an audience watching actors perform, and not like a guest in a home. At the Moore House, though there was only one actor, he seemed more like a "regular" person — though an eighteenth-century one — than an actor).

If you still haven't seen enough by then, and if you have a little money to spend, visit the Victory Center.

Owned and operated by the state of Virginia, the Victory Center was built specifically for the Yorktown Bicentennial in 1981. There you can see another historical film, and more artifacts from the Revolutionary period.

The added attraction of the Victory Center is "Liberty Street," complete with brick pavement down which you can walk, experiencing the sights and sounds of Colonial Yorktown.

Have a good time, entertain your friends, and save yourself some money. Visit Yorktown.

Musica Reservata Performs at CNC

by Terry VanDover

Musica Reservata, a 14-member chamber vocal ensemble, will perform at Christopher Newport College Saturday, March 19, in the third concert of the 1982-83 Nancy A. Ramsauer Memorial Series.

The ensemble offers a vast repertoire of vocal chamber music, ranging from sixteenth-century Renaissance to modern music.

The program at CNC will feature music from the Romantic era, considered one of the group's specialties, and including the popular "Liebeslieder Waltzer" of Johannes Brahms.

Since its founding in 1979, the ensemble has earned an international reputation for "precision and energy" from its many recordings and performances throughout the western world.

Leland Wade is founder and conductor of the Musica Reservata. His background includes a career as an opera singer, over 300 oratorio performances, and production work for television and commercial recordings.

The concert begins at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Theatre. All seats are $6.

For reservations or more information call CNC's director of music at 599-7074.

VOA Presents Comic Opera Elixir of Love

Allow the Virginia Opera Association to enchant you with the intoxicating production of The Elixir of Love. Donizetti's comic opera of romance and merriment opens at the Norfolk Center Theatre Friday, March 11 at 8 p.m., with additional performances on March 13, 16, 18, and 20.

Harold Evans, associate music director of the Virginia Opera, will conduct this classic tale of "boy meets girl," with stage direction by James Watson Tucker.

Donizetti, a prolific composer, who was driven both by a frantic urge to keep active and a need for money, composed rapidly and with little need for revision. The Elixir of Love with its charming characters and rustic setting became an instant success from its first performance in 1832.

The role of Nemorino, a poor peasant suffering for the love of the fickle village beauty will be portrayed by Bruce Reed. The character of Nemorino is one much loved and often performed by the internationally acclaimed tenor, Luciano Pavarotti.

An artist of growing recognition, Reed has sung major roles with leading opera companies throughout the United States. His last appearance with the VOA was as the prince, Don Romero in Cinderella.

Jeanne Ommierle, VOA's mischievous chambermaid from Die Fledermaus, returns as Adina, the coquettish village belle who wins the heart of peasant and soldier alike. Their romantic triangle takes many a humorous turn before she makes her final decision.

John Del Carlo as Dr. Dulcamara will entrance you with a spell of mirth and merriment through his mystical "elixir." Randolph Messing as Sgt. Belcoré and Rena Caulfield-Monti as Giannetta complete the cast of characters whose fates are all set in motion by the quack doctor's magic potion.

With its abundance of charming melodies and loveable characters all set against the warmth and beauty of the Italian countryside, this light-hearted production will be a treat for opera-goers of all ages.

Ground Zero Sponsors Educational Event in a War/Peace Game

by Martin Buoncristiani

The possibility that an all-out nuclear war could occur was brought home to the citizens of the United States in the events of the winter and spring of 1982.

Among these events, Ground Zero Week in late April provided millions of Americans with a greater understanding of the challenge posed by the threat of nuclear war, as well as of the role that citizen concern and involvement can play in preventing such a catastrophe.

Ground Zero is a non-advocacy, educational organization which seeks to inform Americans about the threat of nuclear war and involve them in the effort to prevent it.

Ground Zero does this by organizing educational events that take place across the country and preparing books, pamphlets, and other materials which give citizens the basic information they need to become involved in the public discussion about how to prevent nuclear war.

Ground Zero does not take a political stand on particular measures to prevent nuclear war. Nevertheless, it does project a definite point of view:

- nuclear war would be an unspeakable catastrophe;
- present efforts to prevent nuclear war are inadequate;
- nuclear war could occur unless all parts of the human community are alerted to the danger and take responsibility for preventing it;
- there are many "firebreaks" — international or government policies — to prevent nuclear war. All of these (not just arms control, important as it is) should be understood and discussed by the public;
- the lessening of tensions between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. is a very important "firebreak" or element in preventing the outbreak of nuclear war.

In April of 1983, Ground Zero will sponsor an educational event in the form of a War/Peace Game. Participants will follow the development of a simulated international crisis situation and "play along" with a panel of experts in giving advice to the decision makers in the crisis.

Firebreaks: A War/Peace Game will allow citizens the rare opportunity, through role-playing, to experience first-hand the divergent perspectives of the nations involved in an international crisis.

It will give them a window on the decisions that real world leaders would face in an escalating crisis that might lead to nuclear war. More importantly, the game will illuminate possible mechanisms for peaceful resolution of the crisis.

If you were a high-level advisor to the President of the United States, what diplomatic, economic or military steps would you take if you suddenly discovered that a remote third world conflict was getting out of control?

Or what if you were advising a Soviet premier who was faced with a US ultimatum that threatened use of military force?

And what if all of this took place in a little-known country which had just acquired nuclear weapons technology?

These are the kinds of situations you might be faced with in the course of Firebreaks. This is a game which encourages you to play the role of the experts in unprecedented ways. We hope you will choose to play along.

The crisis scenario for Firebreaks will be played out in "real time" throughout the month of April. Participating groups will receive a weekly account of the crisis and give advice about what steps should be taken to resolve the conflict.

Whether or not the leaders in the crisis have taken their advice will then be revealed by game "control" (the Ground Zero national office) before the groups embark on the next stage of the game.

Participants will have the option of playing

Intramural Volleyball Begins Tournament

by Cherie Kautz

March 6 was the last day of the regular Intramural Volleyball season. It was a season full of learning, enthusiasm, and involvement.

This year we had seven full teams, the most in a few years. The competition grew as the season progressed with several games on Sunday going into three matches.

Each team had good serving, setting and spiking and lots of long volleys.

Going into the tournament the standings are

Xenith	10-0
Alumni	9-1
Sailing Club	7-3

IDK	5-5
OTHG	4-6
Sigma Pi	3-7
IVCF	2-8

Intramural basketball Hits Midpoint in Season

by Mike Hott

After the fifth week of Intramural Basketball, one team still remains undefeated.

The 3-Pointers survived a scare to have the only unblemished record in the league. Sigma Pi owns sole possession of second place after this past weeks performances.

This past week found the Muff Men, led by James Jarvis and Kye Dawald, beating the Zooters by 54-31.

The Bit Buckets nipped the Franchise 39-34. Wayne Johnson poured in 18 points in that losing effort.

The Sixers, with the help of David Burts' 10 points, edged the OTHG team by the score of 39-35.

The 3-Pointers and Sigma Pi are still the teams to beat going into the final half of the season. Sigma Pi, again using a balanced scoring attack, defeated the ROTC team.

John St. George led the winners with 16 points while Larry Eure had 22 for the losers.

The game of the week ended up being the final game. It brought the league leader 3-Pointers against the quick East End Raiders.

The 3-Pointers were leading 30-17 at the half before the Raiders fought back to send the game into overtime.

In the extra period however, it was the duo of Otis White (20 points) and Keith Thomas (17 points) that finally gave the Raiders their second loss.

Ronnie Jefferson on the losing team scored his season average of 20 points.

STANDINGS

1. 3-Pointers	5-1
2. Sigma Pi	4-1

Dear Me...

Dear Me,

Some people are willing to jeopardize a friendship in a moment of anger with accusations that are obviously not true. These people who act in this manner are obviously not worthy of anyone's friendship and cannot be trusted.

Signed Befriended

Dear Befriended,

Sometimes in the heat of the moment we are drawn to do and to say many things that aren't true and that we really don't mean. After the fact, we know we have hurt the other person, and we really regret what we've done.

Unfortunately, because of peer pressure, pride, insecurity, and many other things, it is ways existed, but the formal development program has existed at CNC only about ten years.

The Faculty Development Program is important to CNC because students need to receive up-to-date information from their instructors. Dr. Weiss agrees that, "It has to be there to allow people to keep up with things."

the game for the entire four-week period or joining in at any point along the way. Special review materials summarizing the events of the game will be available to those who have not attended previous game sessions.

The final week of the game, April 24-30, will be the culmination of the month-long event. During this week, several new "moves" will highlight a confrontation between the US and the Soviet Union and emphasize the importance of the US-Soviet relations in the crisis.

In addition, Ground Zero will work with many local communities to organize supplementary education programs during that week which focus on the Soviet Union and US-Soviet relations.

The local Christopher Newport College chapter of United Campus to Prevent Nuclear War (UCAM) will sponsor this game on campus. More information about how you can participate will appear soon.

very hard for us to say we're sorry.

Don't be so quick to give up friendships. I honestly believe a person cannot survive without friends, and even if you don't think you need certain friends, they may need you.

I suggest if you're in this situation, you sit down and discuss what happened with your friend. Try to see things through his/her eyes and to understand why your friend acted in the way he/she did.

Explain exactly why you're upset and how you felt when your friend falsely accused you.

If you make a real effort to review the situation, I hope you'll change your mind about your friend.

If you have a question, need advice, want to voice your opinion, or just waste time, write to me.

Address it "Dear Me..." c/o The Captain's Log.

Opinion

Where Can a Person Get Some Peace and Quiet?!

"... and I said to him 'What do you mean by that remark?' And he went, 'If you don't know that's your problem!' And then I went 'I don't have a problem; you're the one who has the problem!'"

"Well you know Cindy, Mike and I had the same problem. You remember Mike, he was the one I was dating last summer. You know, the one with the red Camaro and who took me to the Naro all the time. Well, he just got too possessive and one night I just flat out told that scum..."

If she says one more word about her love life, I'll jump out of this chair and tell her to shut up using that awful word, I mumble to myself as I struggle to remember the last sentence I read.

I have had it up to here for the past 15 minutes. One more word and I'll scream. "But Mike was just too insensitive; he didn't care about me. Then I met Jerry and he is a real nice guy..."

Why cause a scene; maybe they'll leave soon. It's almost time for a class to start. Maybe they'll have one and continue their discussion outside.

Does this scenario sound familiar to you or how about this one?

"O.K., what do your notes say about this question? I don't remember him going over this in class."

"He mentioned it briefly, but I found the answer in the book. You know, I really don't understand supply side economics. Could you help me out?"

"No problem. Look at this graph. On this side, you have..."

Oh no! this guy is going to give him an economics lecture at the only time I have to read this reference book.

One of my pet peeves is people using the library as a place to catch up on the latest gossip or to review verbally for a test. I have always been under the impression that libraries were quiet places, ones to which you can go for some needed peace in order to do some research or to study for a class.

I go to the library because at home it is sometimes difficult to block out the TV or conversation in the next room. Often I have too much homework for one night so I will go to the library the next day to read for my upcoming class. I can't do any work in The Captain's Log office because of frequent visitors or phone calls so I take my books to the Reference Room, my favorite place in the library or at least it used to be.

I like the Reference Room because it has tables. I don't like to be confined in one of those claustrophobic study carrels; I like to be able to spread out my materials and the Reference Room affords me any number of tables. However, the room does have its drawbacks.

It seems that others like to use that room as well, but I question their motives when they converse with friends in normal tones of voice. I'm not against whispers as long as they are brief; stage whispers I'll tolerate for a sentence or two. But it is insufferable and rude to fill in their friend as to their life since the last time they met. If they don't chit-chat it is to meet in a study group and discuss the entire semester of a class for a test.

If you meet someone you haven't seen in a while, wouldn't it be much better and much more considerate to talk out in the lobby? And couldn't the study group meet at someone's house, in the lobby where there are chairs and couches or in an empty classroom? There are people in the Reference Room and in the whole library who are there for studying and don't want or need to be interrupted.

It would also be courteous if the library staff could be a little quieter as well. If they are helping someone find a book, it would be very much appreciated if they too would whisper. They should also be advised that any noise, however small, that is made in that little office adjacent to the Reference Desk is clearly heard and is amplified in the Reference Room. Try reading Wordsworth's Prelude while a typewriter is machine-gunning 15 feet away.

You may counter by saying why do I go to the Reference Room if I find it so noisy? You say that the library has a designated quiet area. Well I ask, "when has a library stopped being an entire quiet place?"

I don't think it should be a place for socializing; the Campus Center was built for that purpose. And upstairs there are only two tables which are in use most of the time that I am there.

The only area that I accept as being noisy by nature is the Periodicals Room. Newspapers will make noise no matter how gently you turn the pages, and the copying machine adds to the disturbance as do the clicking of heels on an uncarpeted floor.

I really like the library and enjoy going there. Albeit much smaller than the libraries of William and Mary and Old Dominion, 99 percent of the time it suits my purposes just fine. But it irritates me to no end to have my books and papers spread out where I like them and to get involved in my research and then to have my concentration snapped by someone at the next table start planning the upcoming weekend with a friend.

If they don't want to leave the room, but feel they just have to talk, why don't they just write notes to each other? Besides being courteous to others in the room, they'll at least practice their penmanship.

"Topics" For Your Amusement(?)

The following excerpts were taken from the Virginia State Police newsletter, Timely Topics, March 1983.

"While we're not sure they should be referred to as 'crazy capers,' this is what the New Zealand Police Association Newsletter called them in reporting the following cases in the United States.

"A judge ruled that a burglar who tripped over a loose rug in the house he was burglarizing, and broke a leg, had a right to sue the burglary victim for damages."

"Police in possession of a lawful warrant to search premises for drugs found a quantity of heroin hidden inside the 'nappy' of a baby in the dwelling. The case against the occupants of the premises for possessing drugs was dismissed because the baby had not personally consented to the search.

"A patrolman was told to respond to a call at a certain address and was given no further information. When he arrived and knocked on the door a woman appeared. The patrolman asked, 'What's wrong here, Ma'am?' She replied, 'I just killed my husband.' At her trial, the defense attorney moved that her statement be excluded on the grounds that the officer did not advise the woman of her rights before asking 'What's wrong here, ma'am?'

"A man murdered his mother, father and grandfather, then freely confessed to the murders on three occasions, once on national television. His conviction was reversed by the Supreme Court on a legal technicality and he went free."

Editor's Letter Vandalized Magazine

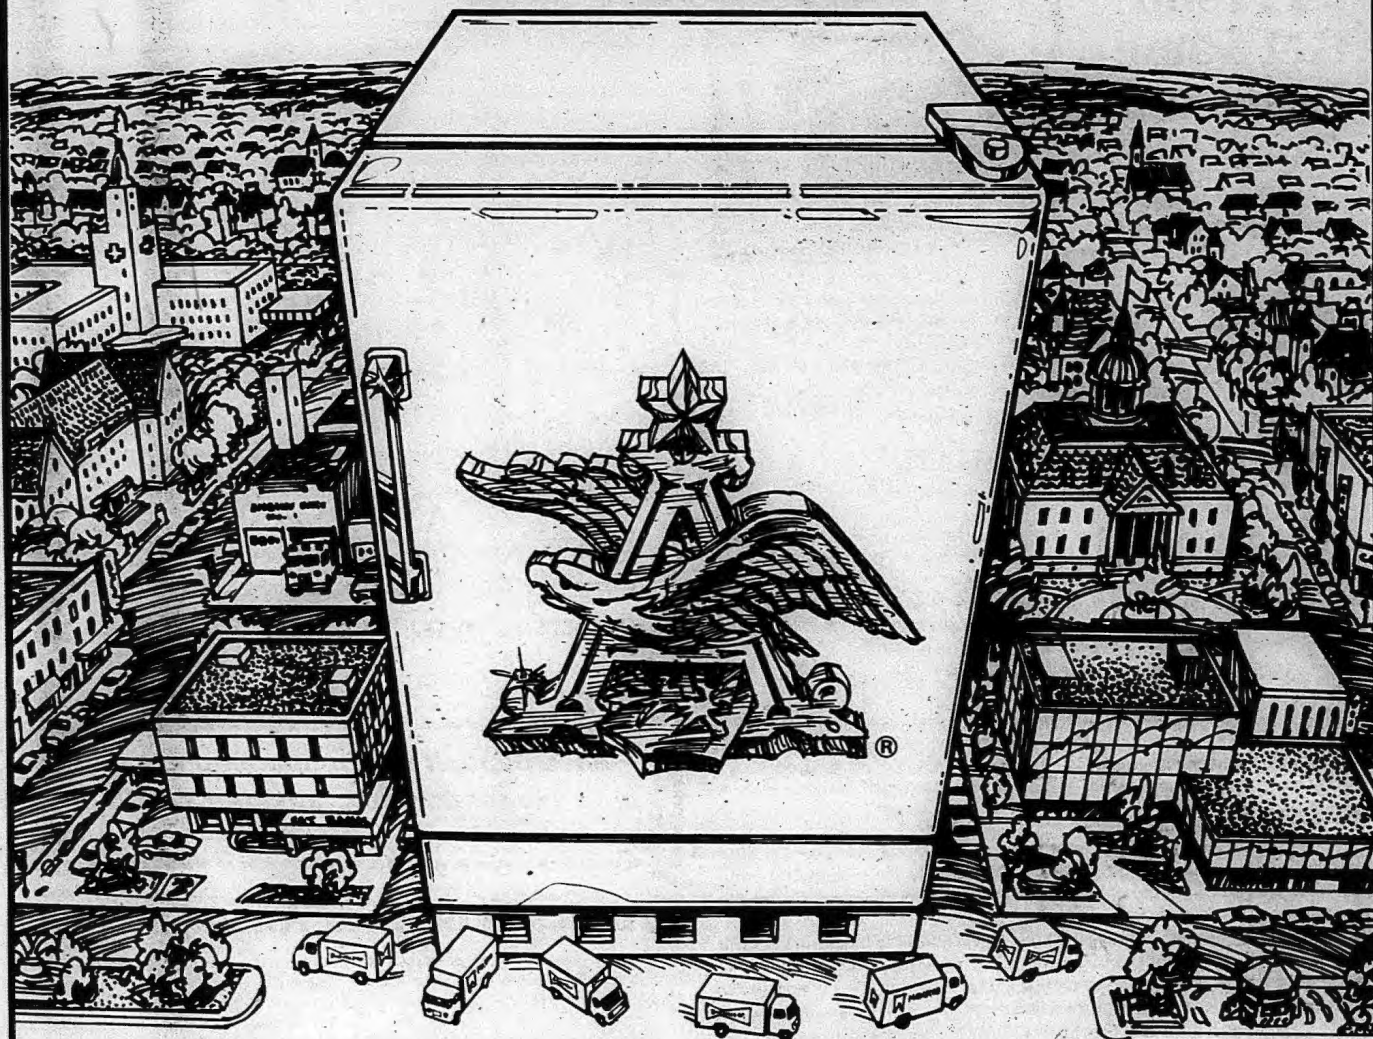

To the Editor:

Recently we went to the CNC library to look at Sports Illustrated's celebrated bathing suit issue (Feb. 14, 1983). And to our dismay and indignation, the magazine was missing its main feature.

Whoever vandalized the magazine, we think you're cheap, selfish, and short sighted. You are depriving other library patrons of their right to view these same materials. For $1.75 plus tax you could have had your very own complete issue; and we - ours. You have no right to keep it; so return it.

Truly,
