NOTICES

Counseling Center Pilot Project

A pilot project researching student reactions to the educational, psychological and social climate at CNC is being conducted by Bonnie Hansen, under the auspices of the Counseling Center.

In an effort to better suit Counseling Center services to the needs of the student body, the 45 minute survey will gather information regarding instruction, Counseling Center and administrative services, registration and scheduling, financial and living problems, as well as the students' own academic performance and personal and social needs and adjustment.

Comparison of reactions of groups by sex and age is anticipated, along with the total tallies.

Some two hundred students will be queried so various classes may be involved, to obtain a representative sampling. Faculty and staff cooperation is sought and will be highly appreciated. The research report will be published on campus when the project is completed. For further information, contact Hansen at the Counseling Center, extension 7101.

OF ACADEMIC INTEREST

MARGINALIA

Peter H. Yaun, of the College of Charleston, says he read "with interest and even nostalgia" our Sept. 20 article on the turndown letters sent out by colleges and universities to jobseeking academics.

Mr. Yaun thinks it's time for the country's institutions of higher education to adopt a standard letter of response. In fact, he's come up with one, which we have modified only slightly to fit this space:

DEAR APPLICANT:

This is your official letter of response from our institution concerning the position for which you made application. Our personal response, [INSERT FIRST NAME], has been appropriately checked [✓] for your convenience.

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, the state legislature has just placed a freeze on all new state employee positions. Good luck!

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, our institution has just declared bankruptcy. We shall close our doors next week. Good luck!

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, the board of trustees has just approved the building of a new wing on the old wing of our only building. We really would not have room for you at this time. Good luck!

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, the vice-president for academic affairs has just informed our department that we desperately need representation on our faculty from the rural South. You may wish to check your birth certificate. Good luck!

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, our chairperson has just been replaced; therefore we are presently evaluating other members of the department for similar action. Keep us in mind. Good luck!

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, upon recommendation of our committee on job descriptions, we have changed the qualifications of the position to suit our more immediate needs. Can you type? Good luck!

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, you were among (circle one) 1 to 50; 51 to 100; 101 to 150; 151 to 200; 201-plus applicants reviewed. The members of the committee on review of new applicants are exhausted. You may eventually hear from us again, but in the meantime, good luck!

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, the position requires one who is solely dedicated to teaching. You failed to include a list of your recent publications. Good luck!

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, your area of specialization does not meet our needs. We desire a generalist. Good luck!

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, the mail service has been deplorable. The position for which you applied three weeks ago was filled this morning, and your letter did not arrive till afterwards. Good luck.

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, your application was sent to the admissions office by mistake. In the confusion that followed, you were rejected by the committee on admissions. Good luck!

☐ We're sorry. Your credentials were excellent; however, your application was received "postage due." This institution cannot be responsible for your personal financial affairs. We are returning your materials c.o.d. Good luck!

With deepest regrets, but with hope for the future, we remain,

Sincerely yours,
