SA Cracks Down On Attendance

by Ann Catherine Braxton

Marketing student Sherri Lascola faced no opposition in her bid for CNC SA President last spring but the energetic 21-year-old faces a challenging and busy year in that position, a position she wishes and strives to use in the betterment of the college.

A lifetime native of Newport News and a 1981 graduate of Hampton Roads Academy, Lascola has a lot of experience in organization.

During the 1983-84 school year, she served as SA Vice President of Student Affairs and before that she served on the Campus Program Board for a year and a half. She has worked as a periodical assistant in the library since her freshman year.

"The SA's major projects for this year will be Spring Fest, Fall Fest, Homecoming, and the MDA Superdance," says Lascola. "We serve the student body through SA meetings."

"Last year the clubs had a continuous drop in attendance at the SA meetings, so we created a new policy about club attendance. A club is allowed one excused absence from one of the semester's seven SA meetings."

"If they miss a second meeting, their funds will be frozen and they will be sent a warning. They will be warned again before the third meeting and if they show up at the third meeting, they get their funds back."

"If they don't show up at the third meeting, their funds will be discontinued and divided up among other clubs. Next semester they can start afresh."

Lascola hopes for a lot of student participation at Fall Fest on October 20.

She goes on to explain the duties of the other SA Officers. "The SA consists of three Vice Presidents, myself, a Student Auditor, and an SA Secretary. The Student Auditor is appointed by the outgoing student auditor and SA president, and John McCaughey. The SA Secretary is appointed by the president."

"The rest of the officers are elected."

"Cyndie Cronk, the SA Vice President of Student Affairs, coordinates Fall Fest, Spring Fest, the Superdance, and Homecoming."

"Steve Tross, the Vice President of Administrative Affairs, sits on the grievance committee and caters to the needs of people who want to start new clubs. He okay's club by-laws."

"Jamie Roudabush, the Vice President of Academic Affairs, finds tutors and sits on the student handbook committee."

"Chris Scarbury, the Student Auditor, sends time sheets to the business office and distributes paychecks. She also handles club receipts and bills and occasionally checks clubs' books."

"Michelle Shires, the SA Secretary, is also the Secretary of the Campus Program Board and Intramurals. She keeps the minutes and is responsible for the mail."

"It's always tough to get students involved. I told the incoming freshmen at the freshmen orientation that they were welcome at the SA meetings. The SA is not just six people working upstairs. It's everybody working together."

Social Work Program Gets National Accreditation

The baccalaureate degree Social Work Program of Christopher Newport College has received national accreditation by the Council on Social Work Education, announced CNC President, Dr. John E. Anderson.

The Sociology and Social Work Department has granted a four-year social work degree since 1982. This national recognition of quality social work education makes Christopher Newport College one of approximately 330 accredited undergraduate social work programs in the United States, said Professor Cheryl Mathews, Director of Social Work at CNC.

"This degree is the first national professional accreditation for the College," she added. "This national accreditation is required in many states for entry level social work employment. It also opens the door to advanced standing of up to one year in accredited graduate schools of social work."

Four of the May '84 CNC graduates received advanced standing toward their Masters in Social Work at Virginia Commonwealth University and Louisiana State University.

The highly integrated curriculum includes sequences of work in social welfare policy and services, human behavior and the social environment, research, and social work practice. The culmination of the program is the educationally directed field instruction which places students in social agencies in the community.

In Tidewater, Norfolk State University is the only other accredited baccalaureate social work degree.

Auditions Held For CNC's "Medea"

The CNC Theatre holds auditions September 4 and 5 for Medea by Euripides. Auditions will be held in the Campus Center Theatre at 8 p.m. Reading material will be supplied.

Performances are scheduled for November 9, 10, 16 and 17. Four special high school performances will be given in the mornings November 8, 9, 15 and 16.

Needed are five men, two women and a chorus of women (5-8). Also, two young boys (about five years old) are needed.

Medea is one of the great masterpieces in dramatic literature. It tells of Medea's passion for Jason and the terrible revenge she visits on him upon discovering that he has taken another wife.

Upperclassmen Offered Math, Science Loans

The Virginia General Assembly has appropriated funds for a Virginia Math/Science Teacher Scholarship/Loan Program. The Funds are to be used as incentives to encourage college juniors and seniors in Virginia to become teachers of mathematics and science in Virginia's public schools.

The scholarship/loan will be for $2,000 per academic year for a maximum of two years or $4,000. The recipients will sign a promissory note upon receipt of the award. The loan may be repaid at a rate of $2,000 for every year the recipient teaches math or science in a Virginia Public School.

To be eligible, the student must be a full-time junior or senior enrolled in a state-approved teacher preparation program in math and/or science and must intend to teach in Virginia. Students must possess above-average scholastic ability as indicated by a cumulative grade point average of at least 2.5.

Financial need is not a selection criteria. Recipients will be selected by the Virginia Department of Education on a state-wide, competitive basis.

Music Practice Suite Planned

by Keith Johnson

A music practice and teaching suite is planned for the renovation of the old bookstore area, according to Dean Robert Durel. Appropriation funds from the state General Assembly are expected by July, 1985, with a projected occupation date of September, 1986, for the studios.

Music students have had to practice in a trailer behind the gym. This situation has been less than ideal: practice places are too small, and climatic conditions in the trailer have caused marked deterioration of the studio pianos, according to Dr. James Hines of the Music Department.

Preliminary sketches of the proposed facility indicate that it would include from five to 13 individually sound-deadened practice rooms and four teaching studios. This, according to Dr. Hines, would provide facilities adequate to handle a 50% enrollment increase of music students.

Freshmen Recognized as Styron Scholars

by Ann Catherine Braxton

Though still a very young and not as yet prestigious school, Christopher Newport College has a lot to be proud of, as it attracts quite a few creative and intellectually motivated students from area high schools.

At a 1979 CNC faculty meeting, the Honors Council sought to recognize scholastically gifted students through a series of honors programs. One of these programs was the Styron Scholars Program by which at least five incoming freshmen and sophomores were endowed with scholarships and special privileges as rewards for their academic talents. The program was approved, and the first Styron Scholars entered the halls of CNC in the fall of 1980.

The program was named after Newport News native William Styron, the internationally acclaimed author of such books as Sophie's Choice, Lie Down in Darkness, and the Pulitzer Prize-winning Confessions of Nat Turner.

The Styron Scholars are selected on the basis of high school grades, class rank, SAT scores (1,000 or better), letters of recommendation, an essay submitted by the student, and an interview with the Honors Council headed by physics professor Dr. Jane Webb.

The Scholars receive $200 each semester in scholarship money and are required to take several difficult honors courses, the first of which is Great Trials in History, taught by Dr. Theodora Bostick of the History Department.

Computer-science majors Alan Dail and Deanette Warden, who completed their studies in May, 1983, were the first Styron Scholars to graduate from CNC.

Three of this year's Styron Scholars are freshmen Rose Porter, Scott Husch, and Michael Olsavicky.

Rose Porter, an eighteen-year-old graduate of Ferguson High School, bears the distinction of being the first black Styron Scholar in the program's history. "I'm proud of that," she says. "It's a real honor." While at Ferguson, she was president of the Math Club, an SCA representative, and a member of the Foreign Language Club, Latin Club, and the staff of Ferguson's newspaper The Windjammer. She enjoys reading adventure stories and bicycling. Her ambition is to become an engineer. She chose to come to CNC because "it was close to home and I heard that they had a good pre-engineering program."

Scott Husch, is an eighteen-year-old graduate of Denbigh High School, where he was a member of the National Honor Society, German Club, History Club, Model Congress, and Model UN. As a member of the Model UN, he represented Algeria, the Republic of Germany, Zambia, and Panama. A history major, he is keenly interested in politics and likes to study the past because he feels that it relates to the present. "We can compare mistakes that we made in the past and try not to repeat them in the present and future," he says. His ambition is to become a high school or college history teacher. He works as a cook at the Tidewater Fish House, and his hobbies include Putt-Putt Golf and reading. He was attracted to CNC by the good reputation of its History Department.

Seventeen-year-old Michael Olsavicky is a graduate of Tabb High School where he was a member of the National Honor Society. He collects patches and coins and plays racquetball. He is as yet undecided about his major. He has worked in the dietary department of a local hospital for two years and decided to come to CNC because "it was the best school for my needs. I can commute back and forth."

Next week, we will take a look at the other Styron Scholars.

Teschner Returns from Hawaii

by Lee-Ann Smith

"The institute gave Eastern and Western philosophers a chance to exchange ideas," said Dr. George Teschner of the N.E.H. — (National Endowment to the Humanities) supported institute in Comparative Asian Philosophy that he attended in June and August. "I was surprised by the lack of contact between Eastern and Western thinkers; but because of this institute, a new exchange has begun to take place."

The purpose of the institute, which was held for seven weeks at the University of Hawaii on the island of Oahu, was to introduce persons already involved in Asian philosophy to new translations and interpretations, and

Openings Available for Campus Jobs

by Ann Catherine Braxton

Students who are trying to work their way through college know that jobs are difficult to find, but the CNC Student Life Office can make the search an easier one. It offers students the opportunity to work on campus.

According to Betty Helm, the Secretary of Student Life, a student is eligible for an on-campus job if he or she is a full-time student at CNC. A part-time student may be employed as hourly personnel. Students interested in on-campus jobs should come by the Student Life Office and fill out the Application for Student Employment, Form SE-1.

"Students should fill out the forms completely, listing all work experience," says Ms. Helm. "If the student does not fill out the form completely, it hurts their chances of getting the job."

"The college departments call us when they have openings and send us job descriptions such as 'must be able to type, operate a word processor, or use a cash register.' I look through the qualified applications. If several people fill the qualifications, those whose applications have been on file the longest have the better chance. The department then decides which applicant they want to choose."

After the student is hired, he or she must return to the Student Life Office to fill out tax forms, and the office makes a copy of this student's social security card. Director of Student Life John McCaughey must then approve the hiring.

The hiring process is not complete until the student is listed on the payroll. He or she cannot work until this is verified.

The employee will be paid on the basis of a complete Student Employee time sheet which includes the student's full name, mailing address, social security number, department name, department account number, total hours worked, rate per hour, the total amount earned, and the signature of the student. Only the department chairman or supervisor is authorized to sign the time sheet.

The areas of employment include positions in almost all academic departments, food services, maintenance, and as bus boys, bartenders, clerical workers, game room attendants, lab assistants, and library assistants.

"Sometimes we will have many vacancies, and sometimes we go for many weeks without an opening," says Ms. Helm. "It goes in cycles. Our busiest time is at the end of August and the beginning of September."

The rate of pay for on-campus jobs is minimum wage. Only waiters and waitresses are paid less because they are expected to receive tips.

Captains Look Forward to Best Campaign in Seasons

by David M. Bean

For the faithful Christopher Newport College soccer fans, this will be the season they have been waiting and hoping for to arrive. The Captains appear ready to field the best team in the school's history, and they will do so with a young squad.

Led by third-year coach Seth Roland, the Captains will also face one of their toughest schedules. Despite opening up with Shenandoah College, CNC will face the likes of the University of Richmond and William and Mary, in addition to the tough Dixie Conference Competition.

Roland commented on the squad, saying he feels very good about CNC's chances this year. "I'm looking to do well this year. I am excited about the upcoming year. I feel we also have a lot of potential." Roland spent a lot of time this year recruiting new players, and the trips have paid off. Again, he seems to have the right mixture of out-of-staters and local talent.

Leading the list of freshmen is Evans Doway. Doway, who is from Charlotte Amilee High School in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, is Roland's choice for supplying more strength in the mid-field. Talking to Doway is just as enjoyable as watching him on the pitch. His thick, French accent endears him to all. Doway is also from the same high school as women's basketball players Karen Stout and Rory Peets.

Next is Donovan Gutzmore, who is from Columbia High School in Maplewood, N.J. Gutzmore is explosive on the wing and will be able to create some good scoring opportunities with his skill. He is joined by his high school teammate Wolfgang Tichy. Roland says that once Tichy is used to the more demanding skills of college play, he will become an important part of the CNC soccer machine.

Robinson High School in Fairfax, VA, has brought CNC another fine player. Last year, Roland selected both Lance Casey and Chris Frazier to join his club, and this year, freshman Mark Shade has been tapped. He is a smart and skillful player who can play either the mid-field or up front.

Freshman Jae Shin from Garfield will be using his skills either up front or in the mid-field this season. The Captains have also acquired a back-up keeper to sophomore Rick Longobardi. Mark Marrow from Kecoughtan will start in the nets against Shenandoah. Longobardi will be attending the wedding of his sister in New Jersey, so the young pup will get his moment in the spotlight.

There are more returnees this year than in any other season. They are led by team captain Gerard "Mr. G" Mosley. Roland feels that Mosley will continue to provide dominance and leadership from his sweeper position. Karl Greaves will continue to be a force on the squad. However, Roland would like to see Greaves improve his scoring.

Keeper Rick Longobardi is looked to for continued excellence in the nets. Believe it or not, last year, as a freshman, he posted seven shutouts and wasn't even honored by anyone for his talents. I feel Longobardi will have a lot of people in the Dixie Conference holding their mouths wide open this year. Sophomore John Gallorini is expected to continue as the team's field general. Roland states that he has become a more mature player with just one season under his belt.

Back Lance Casey, who is still recovering from his shattered-leg injury of last season, will return to help add depth and strength to the Captains' backfield. Forward Bill "Mr.

Rogers' Dittmar will help to beef-up CNC's scoring attacks, as will his teammate and 1983 leading CNC scorer, Chris Frazier. Frazier's seven goals and four assists for 18 points was followed by Dittmar's five goals and four assists for 14 points.

Ken Earls, Tom Hammond, Matt Brophy, Kevin Wagner, and Steve Cook round out the rest of the "Old Men." Roland feels that this team will be more than just good. "If we can start off well, and win a couple of key games, and continue to improve as a team, we will be tough to beat."

As freshmen, several of the "Old Men" made their presence felt in the conference. Mosley was selected to the All-South Atlantic Regional first team, yet he only received honorable mention in the All-Dixie Conference. He was also named to the All-Virginia Intercollegiate Soccer Association Eastern Division team. Frazier, the team's leading scorer, received second team All-South Atlantic Regional honors and was also selected for the All-Visa Eastern Division Team.

The Captains finished fourth in the Dixie Conference last year, posting a Dixie mark of 3-3-1 with an overall mark of 9-8-1. This year, look for the wins to enter the double column and the losses to be less than 5. This will be the team to beat in the Dixie Conference—no question about it.

Lil's: A Good Little Place to Relax

by Keith Johnson

Lil's is not the sort of place that one would find by accident. First, it's located a mere stone's throw from two steak places, a sub shop, the Colonel's fried chicken, two Kings-Burger and Hot Dog, and a popular night spot, so it tends to get lost in the shuffle.

Second, there is nothing particularly enticing about the aspect of the place—no colorful facade, no brightly flashing lights, no clowns, dancing bears, Big Boys or other cutesy characters—in fact, the only sign on the place reads, in its entirety, "Lil's." (Oh, all right, it also says "ABC on-off.") And finally, Lil's is truly off the beaten track—around the corner, hiding behind a seedy little used-car lot. So, in order to find it, one has to be looking for it.

Let me define at the outset what Lil's is not. It is not chic, it is not trendy, it is not "in," nor is it "swinging." It is not the sort of place one would hit while "cruising." There is little or nothing there to attract the singles crowd—no bands, no dance floor, no deejay.

So what is Lil's? Well, it's dark, for one thing. Coming in on a sunny day, one has to pause at the door to let the eyes adjust to the darkness inside. This is not, however, a gloomy darkness. It is rather a warm darkness, the sort of darkness one might find in one's den or study. One is struck immediately upon entering with the impression that here is a place to relax.

The decor, such as it is, is unpretentious in the extreme—dark paneling, dark-brown ceiling tiles, subdued lighting, and little or nothing in the way of decoration. There is a pool table, a U-shaped bar framing a color TV, a few booths, and the required pinball machine in the corner. The juke box contains nothing but country music, and the volume is set on "low." In fact, the loudest noise I heard during my visit was the clatter of pots and pans in the kitchen.

The first thing my wife said to me when we entered was, "I don't think I'd want to come here alone." Indeed, the clientele seemed to be exclusively of the male persuasion, weighted in favor of retirees. We found our way to a booth and were greeted by the waitress, Mary Ann, who handed us each a small menu.

We were pleasantly surprised by the prices—nothing was over $5.00, and the vast majority of items were around $2.00, with many items considerably less. We decided to try the lunch specials (which are different every day). My wife opted for the salmon patties ($2.00), and I had the veal cutlet ($1.90). Not exactly exotic fare, but Mary Ann pointed out that Lil's specializes in home cooking.

I checked my watch as she took our order back to the kitchen—perhaps a bit tactless, but we hard-bitten journalists are like that sometimes. Our order arrived in only eight minutes. My veal cutlet was accompanied by green beans and homemade potato salad, and the salmon lunch included asparagus and mashed potatoes with gravy.

The verdict? Well, it wasn't bad. The veal cutlet and salmon were redolent of Essence of Institutional, though quite tasty. The mashed potatoes were something of a disappointment, but we agreed that Shirley the cook had worked magic with the green beans and asparagus, and the homemade potato salad was as good as any I've had—better, in fact, than most. The coffee and iced tea never ran out, and both were freshly brewed. The hot food was the right temperature, and overall quantity was sufficient. The total bill for the two of us was $5.25.

Based on my highly subjective and heavily biased research, I have determined that the best thing to order to eat at Lil's is the cheeseburger (most excellent), and the best reason for going to Lil's is to relax and to have a quiet beer. The place seems designed for that.

Lil's is open from 7 a.m. until 2 a.m. Breakfast and lunch specials are offered, along with an extensive short-order menu. Beer and wine are served.

This is the first in a series of articles describing local eating establishments which provide an alternative to the fast-food chains—places which offer a good meal at a price that the average CNC student can afford.

Intriguing, Imaginative Watercolors On Display At Fine Arts Center

by Arturo Ramon Diaz

The most intriguing aspect of watercolors is that, because of the unusual effects that can be achieved through their use, artists primarily exhibit their imagination rather than their technical skill when working with them.

Yet, when observing the works of Charlene Engel, which are now on display at the Peninsula Fine Arts Center until October, we find that the opposite is true. Through the use of an exceptionally well-executed impressionistic style of painting, her work is controlled and skillful.

The Fine Arts show, which consists of approximately eight pieces done between 1980 and 1984, is dominated by the theme of nature. Wooded scenes are the entire subject matter of several works and are treated with excellent detail.

Although many pieces, such as "Sumac Bank" which fluently conveys the serene impression of being a sea of floating wild flowers, are colorful, her boldest efforts are two pieces done completely in various shades of brown.

Possibly the most interesting piece in the show is a silk screen entitled "Thomas Pond Rocks" which possesses poetic imagery of reflecting water. Because there is little contrast in form between the water and the objects above the water, "Thomas Pond Rocks" cannot be fully appreciated unless viewed from a certain distance.

The other piece painted in sepia, entitled "Azalea Gardens," is done from the perspective of walking into a thin forest so that only the tree trunks and underbrush are visible. The detail of "Azalea Gardens" creates a convincing feeling of depth, primarily because of the subtle contrast of light and dark used to give the trees dimension.

The only fault in the exhibition was the poor placement of the show itself. Obviously, Ms. Engel's works were designed to be viewed from a reasonable distance to experience the full effect of her impressionistic style. Unfortunately, the exhibit is housed upstairs in a small hallway dominated by the stairwell. So the best way to observe Ms. Engel's works is by standing as far back as possible and squinting!

The next major exhibition coming to the Center will feature the works of Robert Mainam and will run August 28-September 28. The opening reception will be Tuesday, August 28, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. A one-man exhibition by Lane Palmisano will also be featured in the West Gallery.

Scholarship Offered

A $5,000-maximum scholarship for computer science or computer technology students is being offered by International Computer Programs, Inc. of Indianapolis, Indiana.

To qualify for the 1985-86 scholarship, a full-time sophomore or junior must maintain a "B" average and must need financial assistance. Other qualifications are evidence of leadership and participation in data processing-related activities and in school activities.

Finalists will write a software-related essay to be judged by a committee of data-processing professionals. ICP will announce the winner in early April, 1985.

The scholarship will be applied to tuition costs and to educational expenses at the U.S. college or university of the winner's choice.

Mariners' Museum Looks for Volunteers

The call of the sea has been heard by man since the dawn of time. Men and women who heeded that call have made a significant contribution to world history and have often lived adventurous lives that were the envy of many a landlubber. Sailors have always assisted each other at sea, and in that tradition The Mariners' Museum is searching for dedicated volunteers to help preserve the culture and lore of the sea.

Volunteers serve the Museum in many ways. As docents, volunteers are the "voice" of the Museum to the public. Greeting visitors, conducting guided tours, and explaining the mission of the Museum are ways in which docents make an invaluable contribution. In addition, volunteers provide support to the various administrative departments of the Museum. These individuals assist in educational programs, conduct research, type, file, catalogue materials, and assist with our grounds work.

These inglorious but honored and essential functions are completed by individuals who volunteer time in the best tradition of the sea.

If you wish to heed the call and are willing to give of yourself, The Mariners' Museum is offering in-depth training sessions September 6-19, 1984, 9:30 a.m.-Noon each day. For further information, please call the Education Department of The Mariners' Museum at 595-9398.

Virginia Police Call Out Operation CARE

Virginia State Police Superintendent, Colonel D. M. Slane, said today that the Department will increase the number of troopers available to patrol certain sections of the state's major highways during the upcoming Labor Day weekend.

Participating in Operation CARE - an acronym for Combined Accident Reduction Effort, a state-sponsored national program - for the seventh consecutive year, State Police plan to enhance trooper visibility at highway locations where statistics and past experience indicate high traffic volume and high accident frequency can be anticipated.

"The presence of a number of troopers in a given area generally encourages motorists to pay particular attention to their driving behavior," said Colonel Slane. "However, the increased number of troopers also gives us the necessary personnel to stop and issue summonses to those motorists who insist on violating state traffic laws."

Labor Day weekend, which this year extends from 6 p.m., Friday, August 31, to 12 a.m., Monday, September 3, is generally a very heavy weekend in terms of traffic volume, according to the State Police. "It's considered the last long weekend of the summer by many motorists," said a Department spokesman, "and some motorists are heading for the beaches and other resorts while others are taking short trips within their communities."

Last year, ten persons lost their lives on state highways during the Labor Day weekend, and troopers issued 6,975 summonses, including 4,986 for speeding, 315 for reckless driving, and 96 for drunk driving. They also assisted 2,763 distressed or stranded motorists.

Regardless of destinations, added the spokesman, the goal is to arrive safely and motorists can best do this by driving with CARE.

Teschner Returns from Hawaii

to acquaint the delegates with current developments in Asian philosophy.

"I became, through the classes, acquainted with some of the new work in the area," Teschner said.

Teschner had to fill out and to submit an application before being chosen as one of only 20 people across the United States selected to attend the institute.

Seminars and classes were held each day and covered a variety of topics, including the merging of Marxism with Confucianism in the Peoples' Republic of China; the theories of causation in Indian philosophy (early Buddhism); the problem of personal identity; and comparing recent work and Western thought with classical texts such as the Bhagavad Gita (a sacred Hindu text). There was also a seminar concerning the comparison of Japanese philosophy with the work of Western philosophers.

Teschner became interested in Asian philosophy (which includes Japanese, Indian, Chinese, and Islamic philosophies) because of the different philosophic concepts that it involved.

"Certain sorts of problems are discussed that are not discussed in Western philosophy," he explained. "For example, India and China have a noticeable absence of the idea of a transcendental god; so their concept of what is holy and sacred is developed in an entirely different way.

"There is also the absence of the idea of a substantial, individual self, or 'soul.' The concept of causation is very different from what we find in Western civilization."

The institute was a source of new information for more than just the delegates who were involved.

"Students, naturally, will benefit from the results of the institute. More than 20 professors will pass their new knowledge onto their classes," Teschner said.

Philosophers from Asian countries came to hold the seminars which consisted of formal sessions from 9:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., five days a week.

Even with such a full schedule, the delegates found time to discuss the new concepts on their own time.

"There was a lot of informal contact outside of those times, and they provided for an intense personal exchange of ideas," Teschner said.

In between the formal sessions and "personal exchanges," there was time for some sightseeing.

"The island of Oahu is small; you can drive around it in three or four hours," Teschner reported. "I did quite a bit of hiking in the rain forests and went to Hawaii to see some volcanic activity."

The island's weather conditions were not exactly what Teschner was expecting. "I was expecting the island to be full of lush, tropical rain forests, but instead I was surprised at how arid and desert-like some of the areas were. I was reminded of areas in the Southwestern United States," he said.

"While on a mountain summit, you can feel warm air coming up from one side of the mountain and cold air from the other," he continued. "The two would meet and you'd see clouds forming right above you."

The most memorable part of the trip, however, was that philosophers from across the country were able to meet one another and to bridge the gap between Asian and Western thinking.

"Philosophically, we are worlds apart," Teschner explained. "The East and West are closer economically and politically than they are philosophically."

"In fact," he continued, "the distance was greater than I expected. But we all agreed on one thing: If comparative philosophy is to occur, it will be by creating a new context where both philosophies can come together to understand each other simultaneously."

Get down to business faster. With the BA-35.

If there's one thing business students have always needed, this is it: an affordable, business-oriented calculator.

The Texas Instruments BA-35, the Student Business Analyst.

Its built-in business formulas let you perform complicated finance, accounting and statistical functions — the ones that usually require a lot of time and a stack of reference books, like present and future value calculations, amortizations and balloon payments.

The BA-35 means you spend less time calculating, and more time learning. One keystroke takes the place of many.

The calculator is just part of the package. You also get a book that follows most business courses: the Business Analyst Guidebook. Business professors helped us write it, to help you get the most out of calculator and classroom.

A powerful combination. Think business. With the BA-35 Student Business Analyst.
