Experts: College students likely to support GOP barring calamity

by Mike O'Keeffe
college press service

A year before the 1988 elections, political analysts say they think college students are more likely to support the Republican presidential candidate than the Democratic candidate.

The same analysts, however, caution that if the stock market continues to falter, or if conflicts in the Persian Gulf and Central America escalate, college students may turn against the Republicans.

Barring that, Jesse Jackson seems to be the only Democrat with any measureable support on campus, while all the Republican candidates legitimately can claim pockets of college support.

It's heartening news for the Republicans, who are trying to translate Ronald Reagan's collegiate popularity in 1980 and 1984 into long-term voting patterns.

Young voters may have already begun identifying themselves as life-long Republicans, said Catherine Rudder of the American Political Science Association.

Young Americans tended to vote Republican more than the rest of the electorate in the 1980 and 1984 presidential elections. Young people, moreover, continue to be President Reagan's biggest supporters, according to the American Enterprise Institute (AEI), a Washington, D.C. think tank.

Although the number of Americans who approved of Reagan's job performance dropped as a result of the Iran-Contra scandal, his rating held steady among 18-to-24 year olds, the institute reported recently.

Analysts say that momentum gives Republicans a slight advantage in wooing the youth vote — but that advantage is tenuous.

The AEI's Karljyn Keene asserts college students find the Republican Party more appealing not because of its policies, but because of President Reagan.

Bauer to present eating behavior study

Report follows a decade of research

Dr. F. Samuel Bauer, Professor of Psychology, will present the results of his extensive research on eating patterns in a presentation as part of the Dean William Parks Colloquia Series on Wednesday, December 2, at noon in A-105. Entitling his talk "The Control of Eating Behavior: New Trends in Psycho-Biological Research," Bauer will reveal the results of his decade-long research in human gastronomic habits.

Professor Bauer, who earned his Ph.D. at the University of Illinois and who has been on the CNC staff since 1971, originally accepted the premise that eating was controlled by the central brain system. After thousands of hours of psycho-biological research on the CNC campus and elsewhere, he has now concluded that, to the contrary, it is actually controlled by peripheral or sensory stimuli. His studies have placed Dr. Bauer among the nation's leaders in the field of psycho-biological research and have made him a pioneer in the eating behavior sub-field.

All students, faculty, and staff have been invited by the Dean's Colloquia Committee to attend this academic event, the third presentation in this year's Colloquia series. Dr. Bauer will answer questions from the audience at the conclusion of his formal remarks.

SGA party open to all students

by David Becker
SGA Public Relations

For the first time in recent memory, the Student Government Association is opening its' Christmas party to the entire CNC community.

Scheduled for Wednesday evening, December 9, the first annual "SGA Christmas Jam" will begin at 9 p.m., and run until 1 a.m.

A live DJ will play all the latest hits during the pre-exam dance, which will be held in The Terrace.

Although there will be no admission charge, those persons attending the dance bringing either a new toy, a canned good, or a gift for a child whose name appears on the "Angel Tree" will receive a special ticket which may make them a lucky winner in the drawing which will be held during a break in the merrymint.

SGA Student Controller Judy Snyder, chairman of the event, promises "a lot of fun, a few surprises, and even a visit from Santa Claus" as highlights of the evening.

A hot munchie buffet and soft drinks will also be provided.

In other SGA news: Congratulations to Pi Kappa Sigma and Sigma Pi International! The two social organizations tied for first place in the SGA Smokeout "Adopt-A-Smoker" Contest, and both groups will be awarded $25 for their efforts!

Khomeini trying to turn students against Gulf policy

(CPS) - The Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini may be trying to sway American public opinion about U.S. military policy in the Persian Gulf by attempting to awaken American students' anti-war sentiments.

Posters asking "From Vietnam to the Persian Gulf: Why Should Americans Die to Save Iraq?" showed up at the University of Missouri at Columbia last week.

No one - from Iranian students in Columbia to the Iranian Mission to the United Nations in New York - claimed to know who authored or shipped the posters, which apparently were printed in California.

Consequently, no one would say how many other campuses - if any - received the posters.

The Missouri Moslem Students Association-Persian Speaking Group (MSA-PSG) received the posters to use at a recent International Bazaar, said a group spokesman, who requested anonymity.

The posters and leaflets - which the spokesman said were not meant for campus-wide distribution - are now turning up all over campus. "It was not a member of our organization that stuck them to the walls," he said.

The posters were shipped from Albany, California, he said, although he maintained he didn't know who prints and distributes the literature.

There are no Iranian student groups in the Albany telephone listings, and no groups at campuses in nearby Riverside, Cal., admitted to knowing about the posters.

Members of the other Iranian student group at Missouri, however, assert the posters come from the Iranian government.

"Number one, these people are Khomeini agents. On the posters, they don't put Khomeini's name because they know the sentiment of the American people toward Khomeini," said Esmali Parsai of the Muslim Iranian Student Society, which opposes the Ayatollah Khomeini's regime.

The MSA-PSG spokesman denies the allegations. "We have no connection with Khomeini. Our members strongly deny that accusation."

But the people who did distribute the posters and leaflets, he speculated, did so and Ronald Reagan, Keene noted, adding that "the Carter administration is seen as incompetent, while Reagan is seen as providing leadership."

"Reagan offered more hope than the Democrats," said Curtis Gans, the director of the Committee for the Study of the American Electorate.

"But on other issues, students don't agree with the Republican administration. The 1988 presidential election," explained Gans, "is not as likely to be as one-sided Republican as the previous 2 elections."

"It could even turn out to be one-sided for the Democrats," he added. "That's up to how current events unfold. If the stock market continues to decline, students, and the rest of the electorate, will want a change."

"An Iranian war would be unpopular with young voters," said Rudder. "The American public does not want to be involved in foreign interventions."

Last week, for instance, posters decrying U.S. policy in the Persian Gulf surfaced at the University of Missouri at Columbia.

Still, Republican presidential aspirants enjoy greater name recognition among young voters, the analysts say, but that may be a temporary advantage. A Democrat may break from the current pack of presidential aspirants and distinguish himself, Rudder said.

A Democratic front-runner will definitely emerge after the Iowa and New Hampshire primaries, Rudder said. "That candidate will look credible and start receiving support."

Although the analysts say it is too early to predict which candidates have the most appeal to young voters, several, they concede, do have an advantage.

New York Congressman Jack Kemp, said Rudder, offers "clear and strong positions," a neat ideological base that could appeal to students. The former football player, she said, also has a "youthful and energetic appearance."

Vice President George Bush, added Keene, could benefit from his association with the Reagan administration.

But Rudder feels Bush will falter because his campaign organization is seen by conservative student activists as bureaucratic and unexciting. And, she adds, his connection with the Reagan administration could hurt his candidacy if Reagan's last year is marked by war and a weakened economy.

"Kemp," said Gans, "has too many inconsistencies. He'll get beaten by the fact that he's a Buffalo, New Yorker running as a conservative."

Gans predicts New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, if he announced his candidacy, would gain student support because he is a "fantastically eloquent speaker who can put values into his programs."

The announced Democratic field, however, has not inspired students, though Rudder feels Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis will emerge as a "pragmatic" choice. Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore could appeal to conservative Southern Democrats, she added.

But the only Democratic candidate who currently enjoys strong student appeal is Rev. Jesse Jackson, Rudder said. Jackson is seen as courageous and as a good role model for young blacks, and he has been associated with campus anti-apartheid and civil rights movements.

In 1984, Jackson's candidacy sparked an intense outpouring of support among black students in the South, where supporters competed for buses that transported people to help voters register.

Gans added that, unless some candidate captures their imaginations, students as a class aren't likely to vote in overwhelming numbers.

"At this point, the question is not who students will vote for but if they'll vote at all. Will they think their vote is important?"

But it would be wise for both Democrats and Republicans to woo younger voters, said Kathryn Murray of the Republican National Committee. "Whoever goes after that group must do so strongly," she said. "That's the future of America."

Senior Karen Humphrey finished 98th in the NCAA Division III National Cross Country Championships in Holland, Michigan.

Running in 20 degree weather, Humphrey finished the 5k course in 19:29. Humphrey actually beat two runners who had beat her earlier in the South-Southeast Regionals. Humphrey is only the second female CNC runner, and the third overall, to compete in nationals.

Women begin slow

The Lady Captains basketball team has had one of their slowest starting seasons ever; the team is presently 0-3.

In the Emmanuel Tap Off Tournament the Lady Captains lost in the first round to Emmanuel, 78-66. Sophomore Kim Cameron was the high scorer for the Captains with 20 points, followed by Allison Murray with 16. In the consolation game CNC lost to Albany St. 72-57. Murray again with 16 and Cameron with 11 who was named to the All-Tournament team.

The men's basketball team won their season opener against Mary Washington, 86-71. CNC, down 34-26 at the half, had a fantastic scoring comeback in the second half. 23 of the 60 second half points came from sophomore Troy Wright. Lamont Strothers added 17 points and 10 rebounds in his first CNC game.

Earlier last week, the Captains defeated Salisbury State, 93-85, for the first time in eight tries. Wright and Strothers both added 24 points, while senior Carl Haynes scored 18 and had 18 rebounds.

In first round action of the CNC/Insurance Invitational, the Captains lost a tight game to Ferrum, 71-66. Strothers led all scorers with 24, followed by Haynes with 16.

In the consolation game against the Apprentice School, CNC won easily 91-69. Strothers again led the scorers, with five others who marked double digits. Sophomore Todd Sperling had 18 points, 10 rebounds, and was named to the All-Tournament team.

The Captains are 3-1, 0-0 as they go into a match up with the Apprentice School on December 2.

Spurrell led CNC with 13 points and 12 rebounds.

Shotokan Karate Club forms

The CNC Shotokan Karate Club, one of the newest campus organizations, is open to all interested persons. Our members are self-motivated and looking forward to continued growth in the upcoming semester.

Shotokan Karate is a traditional martial art which emphasizes a balance between upper body and lower body techniques. It features large, powerful techniques learned through the study of basic concepts, such as hip rotation to create power, posture, stance, etc.

Training sessions for the CNC Shotokan Karate Club are taught by Stee Pohle, a third degree black belt with over 15 years experience. Mr. Pohle taught classes in Shotokan Karate at Ohio State University and was Assistant Instructor for Sensei Greer Golden, Head of the Mid-American Region of the J.K.A. in Columbus, Ohio.

All students are invited to observe classes or participate for two weeks prior to joining the club. Training sessions are held Tues. & Thurs. from 7-9 p.m. and on Sat. from 1:30-3 p.m. in the Small Gym.

Celebrate the Redskins

There will be a 'Beat Dallas' party at The Terrace on Sunday, December 13. Featured will be the REDSKINS-DALLAS Football game with the play-by-play of Sonny Jurgenson, Sam Huff and Frank Herzog.

Normal Terrace fare will be available but the foodstuffs will be specially prepared by the club members. All students are encouraged to come and help cheer the Redskins to victory. It will provide a needed diversion from the last-second exam cramming.

If you're going to be on campus to study or work, come on by and join them. If you hadn't planned on being here, come by and use the library afterwards!

One of the best things about this party is the play-by-play announcing! If you've ever gotten fed up with network announcers and their supposedly non-biased reporting, you'll love this play-by-play! It is very biased towards the Redskins fan and quite humorous. When you then add the group camaraderie you really have FUN!

There also will be free popcorn at every Redskins' score and some souvenirs available. So, don't miss out. Make your plans now to be at The Terrace during gametime. You will enjoy yourself. By the way, you may bring a friend.

Equestrian Team

The CNC Equestrian team participated in two Intercollegiate Horse Shows in November at the University of Virginia and Lynchburg College. With riders in each of the five divisions, the team earned individual and team points towards qualifying for the Regional Competition to be held this spring.

Most noteworthy rides were Alice Andes and Susan McCartney who placed first and second, respectively in the Novice Division Over Fences.

The next show will be held at the beginning of the spring semester in Charlottesville. The Team is always interested in new riders at any level. For information about the team call Ronnie Cohen, 599-7075 in the School of Business.

"Black Monday" Wall Street market crash has different effects on U.S. colleges

(CPS) - College money managers say they're still trying to dig out from under the debris of the precipitous "Black Monday" stock market crash of Oct. 19, but some students seemed to have done pretty well, at least on paper.

In an investment game designed to teach students how to manage stock holdings, for example, Babson College (in Massachusetts) students' "portfolio" dropped "only" 5.7 percent in October while the real stock market plunged nearly 30 percent, Prof. Bob Kleiman reports.

Business departments often let their students manage real or imagined stock portfolios, learning to "buy" and "sell" stocks to maximize "profits."

Inevitably, some of the student investment clubs did worse than others in the crash - during which The Dow Jones Industrial Averages fell a record 508 points in 1 day - and in the wild swings of the market in subsequent weeks.

At the University of Nebraska, for instance, business students lost a real $43,000 from a portfolio worth $300,000 before Black Monday.

Yale's student investment club lost about $100,000 in the crash.

Campus business managers didn't do any better.

Many colleges own portfolios that include stock holdings, and use the profits to pay for capital improvements and to provide for student financial aid.

Most campus portfolio managers, however, noted colleges typically are conservative investors, and that the crash consequently may not hurt them in the long run.

• The University of Pennsylvania lost $40-50 million during the crash, a 15 percent drop. The loss could have been worse, but the university - sensing the stock market would go through a "correctional phase" - had sold a significant percentage of its stock holdings prior to Black Monday.

• Penn State lost less than 10 percent of its $130 million endowment, and officials there also say the pinch should not affect daily operations. "We will still be able to fund all programs," said senior vice president for financial operations Steve Garban.

Association and College Retirement Equities Fund (TIAA-CREF) delayed establishing other investments for faculty members, denying them a port in the stock market storm.

CREF funds lost 18 percent of their value during October as the company explored and highly selective," Nancy Noth said. "It should make students take a strong look at what they're doing right now."

Babson students, though, are happy about "The Wall Street Game," the investment game they've been playing since September.

"The product is quite good, particularly for intro courses. It's realistic," Kleiman said.

The game, marketed and developed by Babson alumnus and former stockbroker Tim DeMello, allows students to buy, sell and trade stocks in the American, OTC and New York stock exchanges. Although no real money changes hands, the students are given mock $100,000 accounts to "invest."

Students call a toll-free telephone number at DeMello's office to arrange deals with "brokers" who, through satellite and computer hook-ups, have immediate access to the New York-based exchanges. "It's a direct duplication of what brokers do," said DeMello.

"The students get to manage portfolios and the universities can provide hands-on education without incurring liabilities," DeMello explained.

Other schools use closing prices from The Wall Street Journal to determine how well a student manages a portfolio, but closing prices don't indicate the value of a stock when it is purchased or sold, he added.

"They can do anything that's done on Wall Street," DeMello said of Babson students.

Although Babson is the only college in the nation currently using "The Wall Street Game," DeMello says several other schools have signed up for the spring semester and more will use the game next fall.

• The University of Southern California's $160 million stock holdings dropped 13 percent, or $20.8 million, on Black Monday.

• Duke postponed issuing tax-exempt bonds that would help finance several capital improvement programs, figuring the bonds would be hard to sell now. "The volatile stock market could scare bond investors," said Mark Reeder, an E.F. Hutton broker in Durham.

• Faculty members nearing retirement will bear the brunt of the stock market's volatility, and critics of higher education's largest pension companies said the pension managers are too rigid in their planning. The Teachers Insurance Annuity new and more flexible investment vehicles.

• College fundraisers say the market's violent swings have diminished prospects for year-end giving and capital improvement campaigns. The University of Arizona, for example, has delayed construction of football stadium skyboxes because the shaky market has raised concerns about financing the project.

• Students interested in working as brokers will face stiff competition for jobs and may have to work in related fields until the stock market stabilizes, a University of Iowa job placement officer said. "Until the stock market recoups, the hiring that investment firms do will be limited

U.S.-Iranian demonstrations are not new

"because they are thinking about both countries (the United States and Iran)." Their purpose, he said, is to promote understanding - and diminish tensions - between the nations.

The spokesman does not know who distributed the posters, he added.

Amir Zamani, the press officer of the Iranian Mission to the United Nations, said there is no connection between his office and the posters, but he approved of their message.

"It's thoughtful and gives people something to think about," Zamani said.

It's certainly not the first time Iranian students have clashed on U.S. campuses. In the 1970s, before Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi was ousted by Khomeini's revolution, supporters and opponents of the Shah regularly battled, often violently, on U.S. campuses.

After Khomeini took power and seized 52 American embassy employees as hostages in November, 1979, anti-Iranian demonstrations rocked American campuses. Pro-Khomeini Iranians also held rallies, which were often disrupted by American students.

The number of Iranian students on American campuses has decreased dramatically since the late '70s, and, despite increasing tensions between the United States and Iran in recent months, there have been few reports of anti-Iranian sentiments on campuses.

At the University of Nebraska, Hassan Ferasati, an industrial education student, said he has been harassed because he is Iranian. But most students are "open-minded," he added.

Winter internships in Japan offered by IIP

Seattle...In a unique approach to international studies, International Internship Programs (IIP) announces its "Business and Society In Japan" seminar for university students and graduates. A five week winter session will be offered from January 16 to February 19, 1988. A summer session is also offered next June.

The training seminar will take place in Tokyo, Japan. This overseas project features homestay plus most meals, orientation, "survival" Japanese language instruction, Japanese business seminars, medical and accidental insurance, optional employment search assistance, and ongoing administrative support.

To enhance business seminars and lectures, participants will make on-site business visits to observe Japanese business and management techniques.

This learning experience also allows students to visit historical and cultural sites of Japan and attend a diversity of cultural events.

To participate in this winter's business seminar, students are encouraged to register by December 4, 1987. For further details on how to apply and other IIP Study Abroad Projects, contact International Internship Programs, 406 Colman Building, 811 1st Avenue, Seattle, Washington 98104. Or call (206) 623-5539.

TAC Band provides free Christmas concert

Four o'clock, Sunday, December 6 will be the occasion for great Christmas concert band music. This free public program will be provided by the Air Force Tactical Air Command Band from Langley Field.

Formed in 1941, the TAC Band entertains one million people each year in over 500 concerts. They have performed for several Presidents of the United States, the President of France, and the Queen of England. Under the baton of Major Lowell E. Graham, the 45 professional musicians are proud of their accomplishments and musical heritage.

This public concert is hosted by Temple Baptist Church, 235 Harspersville Road, Newport News near Warwick High School. There is ample free parking and accommodations for the handicapped. Admission to the concert is by free ticket. Call 595-1175 weekdays from 8-5 for details.

Hampton library hosts "Super Saturday"

Super Saturdays presents The Young Audiences of Virginia musical group, Music of the People. They will present "All God's Critters" on December 5, 1987.

"All God's Critters" presents songs relating to animals using a variety of musical styles in the folk tradition. The children in the audience will participate in this musical experience by singing, clapping, and even playing folk instruments that are part of our musical heritage.

Super Saturdays is a free program series for children, held on the first Saturday of each month at 2 p.m. in the Hampton Public Library. The library is located at 4207 Victoria Boulevard. "PLO" angers Illinois campus leftist group

URBANA-CHAMPAIGN, ILL. (CPS) — Conservative University of Illinois students invented a new student group "as a joke" to keep a leftist campus group from holding a rally Oct. 21, but now others are charging the right-wingers used dirty tricks to deny them the right to speak.

"We wanted to have some fun at the expense of the campus left," explained Greg Kosinovsky, president of the facetiously named Philistine Liberation Organization (PLO).

The humor, however, wasn't universally appreciated. Illinois leftist students want the group disciplined for spoiling their rally, and the student newspaper, the Daily Illini, blasted the group in an editorial for attempting to "control and obstruct the free speech of another campus organization."

The controversy erupted Oct. 21, when students from across the state were holding "Day of Action" rallies to oppose deep cuts in state college funding.

That was when right-wing students at Illinois, thinking the leftist United Progressives would sponsor the Day of Action, decided to beat them to the punch by reserving an area called the Quad, and holding their own rally.

To keep the Quad and the issue out of their opponents' hands, Kosinovsky and other campus conservatives formed the "Philistine Liberation Organization," and registered it as a student group so they could reserve the area.

"The fact remains you don't set up a group for the purpose of keeping other people off the Quad," said Jennifer Keller of the United Progressives. "We feel (the Philistine Liberation Organization) needs to be punished."

Kosinovsky — who freely admits the group was formed to annoy the left "and have some fun" — noted the PLO's purpose is to "promote true egalitarianism, and fight elitism of all kinds such as academic achievement, laissez-faire economics and other petit bourgeois inhibitions."

Campus conservatives, Kosinovsky said, were disenchanted with previous efforts by the left to rally students to pressure the state legislature to increase higher education funding.

Illinois leftists, he said, held a funding rally earlier this year that quickly turned from campus issues to speeches about Judge Robert Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court, South Africa, homosexual rights, and Nicaragua.

"Based on that first United Progressives rally, we thought this would be an easy target to attack," Kosinovsky said.

"The left on this campus has an idea that there are a number of international issues that affect the masses. The regime in Nicaragua somehow gains when gays in Illinois get rights."

The Philistines, he said, hoped to focus exclusively on the state funding issue at their rally. "We wanted to prevent an important issue to all students from becoming a mockery."

However, just minutes before the Philistine rally was to be held, the conservatives cancelled.

"We decided none of us has any experience at organizing these things," Kosinovsky said. The group gave its Quad reservation to the Student Government Association, which conducted its own "Day of Action" rally. Kosinovsky is also a student government officer.

The United Progressives, meanwhile, had staged a rally the previous day because it did not agree with the student government's call for a tax increase to boost higher education funding.

To add to the confusion, the Daily Illini, in an earlier story, mistakenly had referred to the Philistine Liberation Organization as the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Although the paper ran a correction the next day, pro-Israeli students turned out to picket what they thought was to be a Palestinian rally — by then replaced by the student government rally — while pro-Palestinians came to show support, Kosinovsky said.

"It was a comedy of errors," he laughed.

But Ann Dwyer, the Illini campus editor, said the paper's error did not create as much confusion as the Philistines claim. Reporters who attended the student government rally say they're unaware of anyone who attended to support or protest the Palestinian cause, she added.

Although the Philistines have been blasted for the move, Kosinovsky remains unrepentant. "I still think it was very funny."

DPMA wins excellence award

The national Data Processing Management Association selected Christopher Newport College for the annual Excellence In Education award in the regional area of Virginia, North Carolina and eastern Tennessee. Dr. John Avioli, Chairman of the Computer Science Department, announced this week.

The Data Processing Management Association award of excellence is based on adherence to model curriculum development, Dr. Avioli said.

CNC Professor Kathryn McCubbin submitted the required materials on the CNC information science degree, the academic and professional background of the faculty, the syllabi of each required course and the hardware and software facilities of the department.

In addition to the strong academic curriculum, CNC also has a student chapter of the DPMA which involves the students in the real world of computing. Professor McCubbin explained. "The students are currently involved in a project of software application that will allow computerized analysis of questionnaire surveys. This will be a free service to any department of the college by the club."

The CNC student chapter is an affiliate of the local chapter of the DPMA which has approximately 85 members. Professor McCubbin has served as a director of the organization and is currently president-elect of the group.

SVEA speaker

Stimulating students by direct hands-on activities results in better understanding and often develops a long term interest in the subject matter according to John Quarstein, Curator of the War Memorial museum.

Mr. Quarstein, guest speaker at the Nov. 9 SVEA meeting, demonstrated ways museum artifacts could be used to induce curiosity and cause interaction within classroom students. He believes it is important for students to leave the classroom with a grasp of the concept taught rather than having memorized an assortment of facts.

The next SVEA meeting will be Nov. 30, 4 p.m., in A-105. The speaker will be Dr. Lawrence Detolo, Director of BTAP.

Santa calls

The Hampton Recreation Department's Center for the Arts and Humanities needs adult volunteers for its annual Santa Calls program. Women are needed to serve as long-distance operators from the North Pole. The men will be Santa Claus and talk to the children about their Christmas wishes. The volunteers will be provided with forms which supply the pertinent information concerning the children. Anyone interested in being part of this very exciting and rewarding program may do so by calling the Hampton Center for the Arts and Humanities at 723-1776 or 723-1779. The calls will originate from the C & P Telephone Co. building at Riverdale, where phones are made available compliments of the C & P Telephone Company. The calls will take place on Wednesday, December 23, 1987, starting at 5 p.m. A light buffet will be provided to the volunteers.

Arts center exhibits Norfolk artist's work

The Virginia Beach Arts Center presents an installation of sculpture by Norfolk artist Laurel Quarberg December 5 through 31, 1987. The title of the exhibition is JOURNEY BOX. An opening reception will be held Friday, December 4, from 8-10 p.m. The reception is free and open to the public.

Quarberg is well-known in Virginia's art community for her conceptual installations. In the tradition of Modernist art presentations often referred to as site-specific installations, this sculpture exhibition will be created once and only exist again in the form of documentation.

The media used in JOURNEY BOX includes neon, wood, and living things. While the images remain oblique and do not contain an obvious narrative, the artist hopes viewers will be able to supply their own interpretations. She writes in her artist's statement which accompanies JOURNEY BOX:

My work attempts to address the dichotomy of emotions and behaviors experienced in those spaces of time, often referred to as stumbling blocks or hurdles, wherein we are challenged to extend beyond the perception of our own limits or comfort zones. The fears and doubts felt in the achievement process, with no guarantees of a goal. The strength and power felt in its attainment. The extremes between confusion and certainty; fear and calm; strength and vulnerability; the fine balance between when we know we are home, and when it is time to leave again; and yet the inevitable certainty that the learning process is but a continuous loop.

This installation reiterates for me the experience of getting from point A to point B, in that at no one time can you take it all in at once. You are limited by the boundaries of your peripheral vision. The whole is seen in parts, like a film segment.

My desire is to create an environment which allows for a connection of experience that confirms the presence of these emotions, and the unavoidability of passing through them while getting from Point A to Point B.

Quarberg received her BFA from Virginia Commonwealth University, and her MFA from Old Dominion University. She has shown her work extensively including the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art, the Peninsula Fine Arts Center, the Virginia Museum, and the Portsmouth Community Arts Center, and is listed in the book Contemporary American Women Sculptors. She also was curator of the exhibition SOUTHEASTERN OUTDOOR SCULPTORS INVITATIONAL EXHIBIT at the Greenville County Museum of Art.

42nd Street's magic remains in production

by Kim Magee
contributing writer

Few things can top a full-scale musical comedy. The tunes remain in memories, the costumes are lavish and the dancing unbelievable. Tidewater Dinner Theater opened its rendition of the grand musical comedy, 42nd Street, this past week. The plot is familiar, the characters stock, but the magic still visible.

42nd Street takes place in New York right after the Wall Street crash. Well-known director Julian Marsh decides to produce a musical in order to put some starving chorus kids back to work. Marsh is faced with a temperamental has-been leading lady, a love sick Texas backer and a star struck innocent from Allentown, Pennsylvania.

The music is memorable. Show stopping numbers like "We're in the Money," "Lullaby of Broadway," and "Shuffle off to Buffalo," not to mention "42nd Street" brought enthusiastic rounds of applause from the audience.

The voices were strong, in particular the male chorus members. Shelton Dominici and David King were the bracing backbone for the many chorus numbers. Suzanne Dowaliby, as Annie carried the female voices with her impressive soprano.

The energy in the dance numbers never ceased. Bradley Snively, as Andy, tapped and twirled constantly. His solo in "We're in the Money" had the audience applauding before the end of the number. Elizabeth Byrd, as the impressionable Peggy Sawyer, was the spark in the show. From her blond curls to her tapping feet, she provided an excellent portrayal of the sweet innocent, highly talented, Busby Berkley girl.

Her lilting voice and comedic timing endeared her to the audience. She interacted well with the cast, in particular Bentley Anderson as Julian.

Anderson was the ruthless, but sentimental director. His Brooklyn accent and hard-as-nails attitude added credibility to his character.

The play moved quickly without fault, but the forty-odd scene changes needed to be tightened and more quiet. The set design and costumes were not as professional as past plays at TDT, but were adequate.

The set and costumes may have lacked the glitz of Broadway, but the talent and enthusiasm of the cast added the sparkle that made musical comedy magic.

VA Opera's La Boheme is not to be missed

by Cathie Gaberty
contributing writer

La Boheme, with music by Giacomo Puccini and libretto by Giuseppe Giacoso and Luigi Illica, is this season's second offering by the Virginia Opera. Based on the novel Scenes de la Vie de Boheme by Henry Murger in 1848, it premiered at the Teatro Regio in Turin on February 1, 1896.

This is the story of four friends, Rodolfo, Marcello, Schaunard, and Colline. Marcello, a painter, is in love with the beautiful singer, Musetta, while Rodolfo is the poet who is inspired by the pretty seamstress, Mimi.

The story develops the various themes of love and loyalty among the friends and passion, jealousy and fear between the two sets of lovers.

This is stage director Michael Ehrmann's second production with the Virginia Opera. He was responsible for last year's revival of A Christmas Carol. Ehrmann states in the program that La Boheme is his favorite work and it is the one he has staged more than any other. This shows in his effective use of Robert Little's scene designs. There was never any wasted space.

Each set was used to its fullest potential to bring out the story's intrinsic charm and poignancy. However, the jumping up on furniture and posing became a slight distraction.

The scenery was wonderfully evocative of Paris, painters, and freezing garrets. Robert Little, scenic designer, did an outstanding job. The Latin Quarter street scene was especially delightful with its bi-level stage used effectively by the children and adult choruses. It is interesting to note that two members of the chorus, Melina Luke and Stephen McPherson, were involved with last season's Christopher Newport College Opera Workshop.

The part of Mimi was sung by Ai-Lan Zhu, who came from Beijing, China in 1984 on a full scholarship to the Hart School of Music. Her wonderful, rich soprano voice was the perfect balance for Randolph Locke as Rodolfo. Carol Ann Edwards was not as strong vocally as Ai-Lan Zhu. However, she is an excellent actress who brought the right combination of ingenuousness and seductiveness to the role of Musetta. David Maze, who played Marcello, excelled both in vocal performance and in acting.

Jeffrey Ambrosini and Matthew Lau were well suited to their roles of Schaunard and Colline. John Trout had the dual comic role of Benoit and Alcindoro. William Stallsmith, as Pargignol, the toy vendor, was the only principal cast member to have performed before with the Virginia Opera.

Peter Mark did his usual good job conducting the orchestra. One outstanding moment was the impression of a military band during the street scene.

The supertitles were much better timed for this production than for Don Giovanni. Only rarely were they ahead of the vocalists. It must be unnerving to have the audience react too soon.

This is one production of the Virginia Opera that should not be missed. The next performances are December 4 and 6 at the Norfolk Center Theater. For more information call the theater.
