Kalichstein to present recital in Campus Center

Joseph Kalichstein, Pianist

Mr. Joseph Kalichstein will appear in concert at Christopher Newport College, April 3, 1976, at 8:00 p.m., in the Campus Center Theatre. The program for the evening will include Chaconne by Bach, transcribed for Piano, left hand, by Brahms; Sonata in F-sharp minor, Op. 2, Brahms; Scherzo, No. 4, Three Mazurkas, and Ballade, No. 4 by Chopin.

Reviews of his recitals are summarized by the following excerpts: "His playing has brilliance, enormous vitality and a sense of joyousness," Philadelphia Inquirer; "A born musician . . . Carried enough impact to remind one of Horowitz," New York Times; and "A new star has appeared . . . This young pianist is something special, a wonder of musicianship," Munich: Sueddeutsche Zeitung.

Joseph Kalichstein was born in Tel Aviv in 1946 and began studying the piano at the age of four at the Shor Conservatory. Upon graduating from high school at the age of 16, leaving behind a brilliant academic record, he came to the Juilliard School to study.

Having won numerous scholarships and prizes at Juilliard, Kalichstein entered the Young Concert Artists Audition in 1967 and won. He then gave his New York recital debut which earned spectacular critical acclaim. That same year Leonard Bernstein invited him to be the soloist in Beethoven's 4th Piano Concerto on a special program with the New York Philharmonic which was televised nationally over CBS-TV.

Joseph Kalichstein's career was furthered when he won first prize in the celebrated Leventritt Competition in May, 1969, adding his name to a distinguished list of predecessors, among them Cliburn, Perlman, Weissenberg, Zuckerman and Graffman. Between then and now he has played with nearly every major American orchestra, including the Chicago, Boston, Pittsburgh, Detroit and Cleveland Symphonies, and the New York Philharmonic. He has played under the baton of Szell, Steinberg, Previn, Mehta, Barenboim, Michael Tilson Thomas and others.

Ever since his sensational European debut in the 1970-71 season, Kalichstein has been in great demand all over Europe, performing with the Berlin Philharmonic, the London Symphony, L'Ochestre National of France, the Israel Philharmonic, the English Chamber Orchestra, the BBC Symphony, the Vienna Symphony, etc. He has become a popular recitalist in virtually every European capital, and has over the summers since 1971, appeared in most of Europe's important festivals including the Edinburgh Festival, the Salzburg Festival, the Stresa Festival, both of London's summer Festivals, and at the gala Israel Festival to celebrate the 25th anniversary of that state.

In 1974 he made his first tour of Australia and in 1975 his debut tour of Japan. Although he was not yet 30 at the time, he was nonetheless invited to sit on the jury at the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium Competition for Piano in Brussels in 1975. Currently, he is appearing in New York in a series of concerts with Vladimir Ashkenazy and Itzhak Perlman. Mr. Kalichstein has recently recorded the Mendelssohn First Piano Concerto for RCA with the London Symphony under Andre Previn.

Dr. Friedman attend VSRAC in Arlington

Newport News, Va., March 25, 1976—Christopher Newport College was represented at the Virginia State Reading Association Conference in Arlington, Virginia, last Friday and Saturday, by Dr. Lora Friedman, Associate Professor of Education here. Dr. Friedman chaired a panel of the Virginia College Reading Educators Council. The topic was "Staff Development—What Do We Expect of Each Other?"

Other CNC participants were CNC student teachers Cheryl Jones, interning at Burbank Elementary School in Hampton and Chris Wells, interning at South Morrison Elementary School in Newport News, and Audrey Lowery, a CNC graduate now teaching at Essex Intermediate School in Tappahanock.

Outside locks change in security move

In a letter to all faculty and staff last week, Sherman L. Skillman, Building and Grounds Supervisor, said that a program had been approved to change all exterior locks of Gym and Newport, Gosnold and Wingfield Halls.

This security measure was brought about by the proliferation of keys over years, Skillman said. He added that it has become almost impossible to adequately safeguard College property and to provide for the necessary security of our facilities and personnel.

It was further stated that access to these facilities during off hours would be controlled by the security guards, who will be stationed in the Campus Center, except when performing required periodic patrol of the campus.

The work is projected to start on March 27, and should be completed by April 5.

Komarovsky to speak here April 2

Mirra Komarovsky, Professor of Sociology at Barnard College, will be in Virginia this week under the auspices of the University Center in Virginia. She will speak on "Dilemmas of Masculinity's Role Strains of College Youth" at the College of William and Mary on April 2 at 9:00 a.m. and here at The Christopher Newport College at 12:00 noon.

Dr. Komarovsky previously taught at Skidmore College and was a research associate at the Yale Institute of Human Relations.

She is the author of The Unemployed Man and His Family; Women in the Modern World—Their Education and Their Dilemmas; and Blue-Collar Marriage. Additionally, she co-authored Leisure, A Suburban Study.

Ferdinand Roten Galleries collection to be exhibited

The Fine and Performing Arts Department will sponsor an exhibit and sale of approximately 600 original prints from the famed Ferdinand Roten Galleries collection on March 30th in the Campus Center. Along with prints by such masters as Picasso, Goya, Renior and Hogarth, can be seen works by many of today's American artists, some famous and some not yet famous.

Students, faculty, and area residents are invited to browse through this outstanding collection of original graphics. A knowledgeable Roten representative will be on hand to answer questions about the prints and the artists and to discuss other prints not in this collection but which may be obtained from the gallery in Baltimore.

A world-respected authority on graphics of all types, Roten holds exhibitions and sales at major museums, colleges, art galleries and art centers throughout the United States and Canada.

The informal displaying of the collection allows visitors to examine at close range the various graphic techniques of different artists. The exhibit takes place from Noon to 7 p.m.

Your Elpee's Worth

Queen is achieving some belated recognition in America. They originally came on the scene as pop's predecessor to Led Zeppelin. After the total flop of an American tour, Queen resurfaced with a quasi hit called "Killer Bee."

The group's mainstay are their vocal arrangements which utilize multiple overdubs to get a choral effect. Most vocal tracks are done by Freddie Mercury. The rest of the group includes Brian May-guitars, Roger Taylor-percussion and John Decon-bass.

A Night at the Opera, Queens latest attempt, has produced another hit in "Bohemian Rhapsody." Surprisingly, for an AM hit, this tends to be one of the strongest cuts. The lyrics are somewhat questionable with a cynicism towards opera. The vocal overdubs are incredible. It really sounds like an entire choir. The operatic vocals becomes a bit insane towards the end.

This insanity is more extensive in "Prophets Songs." It drowns in religious overtones and oppressive lyrics. At the end there's some vocal chanting mixed with violent guitar banging and finally ends with the sanity of acoustic guitar.

Queen, pushing the heavy rock sound, comes forth with a series of slip shod attempts. "Deaths on Two Legs," a heavy rocker, annoys with its forced lyrics and abnoxious guitar. The lyrics are not only forced but insipid as well. "I'm in Love with My Car" is a prime example. To add insult to injury "Sweet Lady" comes on with a sound straight from the late 60's. That acidic guitar fast and furious with no direction grates the nerves.

Hollywood Blues its seems is Queens forte. "Good Company" has a Genuine Ukelele (made in Japan) and an oldtime Jazz Band sound. The guitar shines through, May does all the traditional Hollywood horn arrangements with the guitar. Vocal overdubs by the millions make the Hollywood Blues vocals of "Seaside Rendezous" a surefire hit. This style sits well with Queen as long as they don't over do it.

A Night at the Opera is a cornucopia of styles that never seems to gel. Queen is pushing such a variety that its impossible to maintain any continuity in the album format. Queen seems to be a lot of talent that's merely misguided. Hopefully, in an album or two, Queen will be doing some first rate material.

A Night at the Opera was the contribution of Wide World of Music, located at Newmarket North Shopping Mall.

All CNC students with ID's are entitled to a 40% discount on LP's and a 30% discount on tapes. Come by anytime between 10:00 a.m. and 9:30 p.m., Monday thru Saturday.

N.N. golf courses gives students break

Through the efforts of the Newport News Commission for Youth Affairs, college students now get a price break at Newport News's two public golf courses.

By recent action of city council, undergraduate students age 24 and under can play 18 holes on either the city's championship or par 3 course for $1.50 on weekdays.

The regular green fee is $4.

The two courses are in the city park off Jefferson Avenue, just south of Lee Hall.

To be eligible for the reduced rate, students must file an application with the city's department of recreation, parks and public relations, and must show proof of age.

The reduction for college students was approved at the urging of the Youth Affairs Commission. The Commission is composed of seven young people between the ages of 18 and 24.

Geoff Russell, Commission spokesman for the effort, states, "It makes sense to give college students the same reduced rate that high school students already have. After all, money is hard to come by for most college students, too. The Newport News City Council has acknowledged by this action that all students should have easy access to the city's recreational facilities."

Identical rates are now in effect for elementary, high school, and college students and for golfers 65 and over.

A student playing with an adult on a weekend is eligible for the reduced rate; otherwise, none of the reduced rates apply on the weekends. The senior citizens' tickets are available only for the par 3 course.

Adults may buy nine-hole tickets for $2.50. They are good anytime on the par 3 course, but only on weekdays on the championship course.

Golfers playing on the championship course may also buy books of 20 tickets for $50 or 10 tickets for $30.

1781: The War in the South Ends

By Steven Zapinski

The first half of the year 1781 saw the conclusion, to all extents and purposes, of the war in the South. The second half is distinguished mainly by the Battle of Yorktown, which will be dealt with in a succeeding article.

The decisive defeat of the Tories at King's Mountain destroyed, once and for all, Loyalist prestige in North Carolina, and forced Cornwallis to retreat south. The American army had split into two parts; one, under the "Old Waggoner" Daniel Morgan, which included his crack corps of Virginia riflemen, was operating inland in South Carolina while the other, larger half, was led by General Nathaniel Greene and remained near the coast. Cornwallis dispatched "Bloody" Banastre Tarleton to avenge Major Ferguson's defeat and handle the frontiersmen under Morgan, while he went after Greene.

Tarleton caught up with Morgan at a place known as the Cowpens near the North Carolina-South Carolina border, on January 17, 1781. Morgan had chosen his battlesite carefully. His small army took up positions atop a hill surrounded on two sides by dense woods and with a deep river at its back. He had nearly 1,100 men to deploy against Tarleton's 1,200. Although the two forces were almost equal numerically, Tarleton had the advantage of a cohesive force of trained veteran troops; Morgan's men were fighters, too, but barely half of them were disciplined soldiers.

Morgan knew he couldn't depend on the militia under his command and so he gave them orders to fire only two volleys at the advancing British troops and then withdraw behind the hill. He let his Continental troops take the main brunt of the British attack and entrenched them atop the hill. He held his cavalry in reserve behind the hill, out of sight.

When Tarleton attacked in early morning, the militia fired two volleys, broke ranks, and ran behind the hill. The jubilant British advanced up the gentle slope only to meet the determined resistance of veteran Continentals. As the Continentals retreated up the hill, Tarleton threw his entire force into the attack. Just then the militia, which had reformed in order behind the hill emerged in a flanking attack on the British left, while the cavalry attacked the British right. With the Continental's sudden counterattack, Tarleton found himself fighting three forces on three fronts, and his confused troops panicked and fled, with the American cavalry pursuing.

Within a two-hour period, the British had lost 110 men killed, 229 more wounded, and more than 800 made prisoner. Morgan, whose losses were only 12 killed and 61 wounded, bagged Tarleton's entire baggage train, 100 horses, 800 muskets, and a considerable amount of powder.

Perhaps the most remarkable thing about this battle was that Morgan, whether or not he had ever heard of Hannibal, had planned and won a complete double envelopment remarkably similar to Hannibal's victory over the Romans at Cannae in 216 B.C. The Battle of the Cowpens is still studied today as a classic in the annals of warfare.

On January 19, Cornwallis advanced north to get between Greene's and Morgan's armies. But on January 30 Greene and Morgan joined forces at the Catawba River and retreated north, pursued by Cornwallis. Determined to catch Greene, Cornwallis stripped his army down to light troops by destroying excess baggage and supplies. But Greene, outnumbered three to two, could run faster. Drawing Cornwallis further and further away from his supply bases, Greene raced him in a superb withdrawal across four rivers, eluding the action Cornwallis so desperately sought. The race was so close that Cornwallis arrived at the Dan River on February 14 in time to see the last detachments of Greene's army land in Virginia with all the boats for miles around with them.

On February 18 Greene, reinforced, recrossed the Dan River into North Carolina. He met Cornwallis at Guilford Courthouse, North Carolina, on March 15. Regrouping from three successive battle lines, Greene's troops held their own and then broke under the overpowering pressure of British bayonet attack.

The battle at Guilford Courthouse was a hard-fought one. British losses were twice as high as those of the Americans; Cornwallis lost at least 25 percent of his entire army. Cornwallis had driven Greene from the field and could rightly claim to have won the battle. But the fight left the British in a far worse position than the Americans. Cornwallis knew he could not afford to fight another such battle, and he was isolated in a hostile countryside. He was forced to withdraw eastward to the British-controlled port of Wilmington, North Carolina.

The rest of Greene's Southern campaign followed the same pattern. In three successive battles—Hobkirk's Hill, Ninety-six, and Eutaw Springs—the British had slightly the better of each encounter. Yet at the close of each battle, cautious Greene was in better shape than the victorious British commander. By the end of the year he had pushed the British back into Charleston, where he blockaded them. Coupled with the American siege and capture of Augusta, Georgia, almost all of the South from Florida to Virginia was once again in American hands.

Editorial Action needed to correct traffic problems

For weeks now, you have read in this newspaper about parking violations in the "No Parking" areas here at CNC. This problem continues to give the administration headaches, especially in front of the administration building.

There is, however, a related problem which seems to go unnoticed, even by the people who are being paid to correct such problems. Specifically, the traffic lights at Warwick Blvd. and Shoe Lane and at Warwick Blvd. and J. Clyde Morris Blvd.

During most of the day, these signals allow from 10 to 20 seconds for traffic to turn left; however, during the morning rush hour, the sequence appears to be much shorter. Traffic turning onto Shoe Lane headed for Ferguson high school and Christopher Newport is normally backed up to J. Clyde Morris. Understandably, delays are to be expected, but the delay of other traffic caused by motorists blocking the intersection is madness.

At one time the Newport News Police Department had officers directing morning traffic at these intersections, this afforded some relief from the congestion, and it did expedite the flow of traffic. For some reason, as yet unknown, this practice was discontinued. Questions regarding this situation are being asked, but answers are hard to come by.

The afternoon traffic situation is not quite as bad as in the morning. The reason for this is that departing traffic from CNC is staggered and most of Ferguson's traffic leaves at one time. The most critical time in the afternoon is from 4 to 5 o'clock. Here again, the sequence of the turn signals seems to go out.

To the casual observer, it can be seen that the traffic volume on J. Clyde Morris and Shoe Lane is as great as that on Warwick at various times of the day. What the casual observer can not see is why less time is allowed for the flow of this traffic to and from these two points.

For those CNC students coming from points above the college, there are two or three alternative routes to our parking areas, but for those from lower Newport News, Hampton and points East, there is no way to avoid the "J. Clyde Morris-Warwick-Shoe Lane" headache.

There are as many suggestions as there are cars, buses and trucks waiting to get onto Shoe Lane, but few, if any of them appears to have reached the Newport News Traffic Director. The one, and most logical suggestion heard to date is that equal time be allowed for traffic going in both directions. While this may not be the optimum solution, it certainly appears to offer a more equitable arrangement than the system now in use.

While on the subject, it might also help if the city would install a left-turn signal for traffic coming from the Mariners Museum. This would stop the hesitation in left-turn traffic coming off J. Clyde Morris and eliminate traffic congestion caused by Museum traffic waiting, in the middle of the intersection, to enter Warwick Blvd. traffic.

When action will be taken on this problem is not known; in the meantime, be patient, take alternative routes to the campus, and get an early start.

Alumni takes first place in Intramural play, Kepone Poison wins second place

The Alumni team is the 1976 Intramural basketball champions.

Capitalizing on previous experiences on CNC's varsity basketball team, Paul Babcock, Andy Wacławski, Doug Baggett, and Mike Tallon along with Elton Beasley, George Ireland, Jim Wacławski and Wayne VanHorne, the team ended the season with an unblemished record of 10 wins and no losses.

Kepone Poison was in there right down to the wire, fighting a losing battle for first place. Their 9 and 1 record won them second place. David Kicks, Wayne Woodson, Stanley Hamm, and Tim Davis were led by team captain, Robbie Duncan in their second place win.

HEADHUNTER clues have to be broken down. Rarely do they make sense taken as wholes. The "real" definition, the one actually sought, is almost always at the very beginning or very end of the clue. Constantly search for SYNONYMS for every word or phrase, however vague or far-fetched the connection, until the logical/illogical answer with the right number of letters emerges. The three main types of clues:

ANAGRAMS, often signaled by words like broken, scrambled, tangled, mad, sort of, perhaps, now becomes, crazy, stupid, new, changed—anything indicating disorder or rearrangement.

DOUBLE DEFINITIONS, as in "Game for a traveler (4)" = POLO.

HIDDEN WORDS, found in a word (or spanning words) in the clue and sometimes signaled by among, in, between, etc. Example: "In here, warden! A remuneration! (6)" = REWARD.

Some clues use more than one of these construction methods. Clue words often are literal: "embraces" can simply mean one word surrounding another; "that is" may indicate an "i" and an "e" in the answer; "short" may hint at an abbreviation; and so on. Punctuation in a clue has no bearing on its solution.

B.A. offered in family life, job expectations good

Canton, Mo. (I.P.)—A new major in family life, leading to a bachelor of science degree, has been inaugurated at Culver-Stockton College this semester. The program will permit students to concentrate in one of several areas of study including the sociological aspects of the family, the family as an economic and political unit, the family as an educational force and the family's use of recreational and leisure time.

The size and philosophy of Culver-Stockton brings a unique capacity for instruction in the "The size and philosophy of Culver-Stockton brings a unique capacity for instruction in the area of family life," comments Dr. Henson Harris, vice president for academic affairs and dean of the college. "Our size makes it possible to merge courses from many academic disciplines toward a focus on the family, and our philosophy as a church-related college enables us to explore freely the spiritual dimensions of family living," he said. State colleges and universities with family life programs are limited by law in approaches that can be taken to questions of family standards, he continued.

A core of 29 credits hours will provide majors with a foundation in the field. This core consists of courses in biology, health, child and adult psychology, social work and interpersonal communication. The remaining 16 hours of course work will be chosen by students and their advisors leading to a recognizable concentration in the field.

For students with a B.S. degree, their area of concentration can lead to careers in community recreation, marketing research, day care and nursery schools. A faculty survey discovered more than 30 professional fields open to persons with a major in family life. The new degree also would form an excellent foundation for graduate studies in a wide range of areas such as law, social work, guidance and counseling, ministry, sociology, economics, and history.

In addition to career expectations, the curriculum is designed to give all students necessary information to manage their own personal lives. In a world with soaring divorce rates, problem children from problem marriages and counter-cultural interpretations of the family, insight and stability are needed, said Sieghard Krueger, associate professor of speech and drama and chairman of the family life development committee.

Parks management program offered

March 25, 1976—The Department of Biology and Environmental Science and the Department of Political Science at Christopher Newport College have announced an inter-departmental program in Parks, Open Space, Recreation and Natural Resource Management, beginning this fall.

The program is designed for students who are interested in a career in park and recreational area management, environmental city, county or regional planning or natural resource management.

The program comprises a major in Biology and Environmental Science and a minor in Governmental Administration and Urban Planning. Existing courses were selected for the program to give students a solid foundation of competence in biology and the training necessary to use their knowledge in biology in planning and management positions.

Supporting courses in biology will include Plant Taxonomy, Plant Materials for Landscape Use, Landscape Horticulture, Soils, Environmental Conservation and General Ecology.

Courses in political science will be selected from Urban Planning, Planning and Design, Public Administration, and Open Space and Recreational Planning.

CNC Coed needs more medical funds

Several weeks ago Alemnesh Abebe, an Ethiopian student, was operated on for the removal of a benign tumor. Because of political turmoil in her homeland, her parents have been unable to send any money to her; their land has been confiscated, and it is now illegal to send money out of the country. Moreover, she has no health insurance to cover medical emergencies. Her surgical bill is $700, including hospitalization.

The article in The Captain's Log raised about $30; another student at the College gave Alemnesh a check for $100; and an anonymous donor provided $150. That leaves her with a bill for $420.

There are many charitable causes that compete for our attention, and the strain of living on a professor's salary has encouraged asceticism even among the wordly. If you can find a way to donate a few dollars to Alemnesh (a fund for this purpose has been established in Dean Polis' office), she would be grateful.

Outing Club spends Spring Break in Sunny Florida, returns to cold wave

By Kevin Kachadourian

Fourteen members of the Outing Club, accompanied by a lot of sunshine and clear, warm water, spent the Spring Break in Florida.

It took the three cars over twenty hours to reach Lack Okeechobee where they spent the first night. After two more days, spent in Fort Lauderdale, the then sunburned students drove down to Key Largo where they spent the remainder of their holiday.

With only minor problems and two cloud bursts to detract from the trip, the club had a very enjoyable time. The members spent most of their time swimming, sunning, snorkeling, and sailing, they had a ride in a four seater airplane as well.

The long ride home ended in disappointment as the club members were greeted by cold grey Tidewater weather, but the memories and suntans (and sunburns) of sunny Florida live on.

"A lot of men do not want to make footprints in the sands of time because they do not want someone following them." - Geo. B. Bowra.
